Kidnappers Kill 3 Hostages, Die

BLASTED CAR lies shattered on a Belfast main street after a bomb killed a demolition expert who was trying to defuse it. Parts of the wrecked car went soaring over four-storey buildings and the expert, Maj. Bernard Calladene, was hurled against a wall.

KIZILDERE, Turkey (UPI) — Turkish commando units found three foreign hostages murdered inside a house today, then killed 10 terrorists in a room-by-room gun battle, the government announced.

The government said an earlier report by local authorities and the state controlled news agency that the hostages and their abductors died in an explosion was untrue.

Commandos stormed the two-storey house in this mountain village of 1,337 after terrorists holed up inside all day opened fire on troops, the government said.

Inside, the government said troops found the bodies of three men — two British and one Canadian — kidnapped Sunday night near a Turkish air force base.

"A room by room battle followed inside the house and all the terrorists were captured dead," the government statement said.

The civilian victims were identified as Gordon Banner, 35, and Charles Turner, 45, both British, and John Law, 21, a Canadian from Quebec City whose family lives in England.

They were working in Turkey as civilian radar technicians when they were kidnapped in the Black Sea town of Uyne. A letter left behind said they would die if three condemned terrorists were executed.

The village — the name means red or bloody stream — is located 76 miles from the scene of the kidnapping.

The government statement said troops found the hostages dead, shot and bound hand and foot, when they entered the house.

CREEP FORWARD

"Despite announcements over loudspeakers calling on the bandits to surrender," the statement said, "the terrorists opened fire on government forces . . ."

Then came the order to attack.

Turkish troop reinforcements poured into this remote village 200 miles northeast of Ankara and commandos crept to within 50 yards of the house where the extremists were holding the men who had worked in a NATO headquarters.

Meanwhile in Buenos Aires the fate of kidnapped Fiat executive Oberdan Sallustro remained a mystery today more than 24 hours after the deadline for his execution by Argentine guerrillas.

Argentine government pressure has prevented Fiat from meeting the guerrillas' major conditions for his release — distribution of $1 million worth of school supplies to 300,000 poor children.

HALF ALBERTA GLUED TO TUBE

EDMONTON (CP) — Watching television is the most popular spare-time activity for Alberta, says a report on the quality of life by the Human Resources Research Council.

Every evening about 800,000 people, approximately half the population, each spend two hours before television sets, the report said.

"Pub-going and the consumption of alcohol probably ranks second," adds the report.

"Alberta has 690 licensed public drink spots where, along with intake in private homes, 24 million gallons of beer, 1.8 million gallons of wine, 75,000 gallons of liquor and 37,000 gallons of cider are consumed annually."

ARCHBISHOP Harold Sexton died Wednesday. Burial will be at the old West Saanich church following cathedral service. Story on page 6.

Britain Now Rules Ulster

BELFAST (UPI) — Britain formally took over rule of Northern Ireland today in a day marked by a major gun-battle across the border with the Irish Republic, an assassination attempt in Londonderry and bomb explosions in Belfast.

The British parliament completed legislation ending 51 years of Protestant rule by the Northern Ireland Parliament, Queen Elizabeth II gave her royal assent and Northern Ireland Premier Brian Faulkner resigned.

For the next year at least Ulster, as the six northern counties are called, will be ruled by William Whitelaw as secretary of state for Northern Ireland in the British cabinet. If this move ends the violence that has taken nearly 300 lives in the past three years Britain will review the situation.

MORE TROOPS

Faulkner announced he would deal openly with Whitelaw but the British government announced it would send more troops to Northern Ireland over the Easter holidays "as a normal precaution." A force of 4,000 has been alerted to reinforce the nearly 15,000 already here.

A British army spokesman said more than 3,000 rounds of ammunition were exchanged in what he called a "major battle" between four gunmen in the Irish Republic and Northern Ireland policemen who came under fire at Belleak, 10 miles south of the border town of Rossles.

"They were firing from trees across the river which forms the frontier at this point," the spokesman said. "That made them doubly hard to spot."

In Londonderry, Ivan Cooper, a member of the Northern Ireland parliament, said someone tried to assassinate him with a bomb planted in his car. He is a civil rights leader who has pleaded the cause of the Roman Catholic minority in the Stormont as parliament here was called.

HOAX CALL

Cooper, who said he had received hundreds of threats from enraged Protestants, told newsmen he was awakened at 5:45 a.m. by a telephone call saying a friend had been taken to a hospital. He checked the hospital and found the call was a hoax.

"Just then the bomb went off," he said. "It was a personal bomb, designed not to do damage to property but to me." Cooper was not injured.

Four bombs exploded in Belfast Wednesday and Wednesday night, one of them a huge one that killed an army officer and shattered windows in city hall and the royal courts of justice.

NEWS BRIEFS

Second Session

HELSINKI (Reuter) — U.S. and Soviet negotiators met today for the second session in the current seventh phase of the strategic-arms limitation talks.

Peking Mission

VALLETTA (Reuter) — Maltese Prime Minister Dom Mintoff, fresh from negotiating a new defence agreement with Britain and NATO, was scheduled to fly to Peking today, possibly seeking Chinese economic aid.

Nixon to Iran?

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Nixon was expected to visit Iran and possibly other countries in late May or early June after holding talks in Moscow, where he hopes to improve relations with the Soviet Union and sign a treaty limiting nuclear armaments.

Four Killed

BRIDGEWATER, Mass. (UPI) — An explosion ripped through a fireworks manufacturing complex on the outskirts of town today, killing four persons and touching off a fire which levelled the seven-building, one-story factory.

Refinery Blast

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — A fire and three explosions rocked the storage area of the state-owned Petrobras refinery in Duque De Caixas today, killing at least four persons and injuring more than 50, many seriously.

Bolivia Expels Reds

LA PAZ (Reuter) — Bolivia has given 119 Soviet diplomats and embassy staff seven days to quit the country, saying they were linked with a Cuban-inspired invasion due to have begun at dawn today.

Foreign Minister Mario Gutierez insisted the mass expulsion did not mean Bolivia is breaking off diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union. It was not immediately known if the ambassador was among those being expelled.

Interior Minister Mario Addett said Wednesday night the government intercepted documents which proved foreign participation in the internal affairs of the country and the existence of a plot code named Operation Dawn, organized by the Havana - based Latin American Solidarity organization.

The operation involved "the landing of men" on Bolivian soil and was timed to start at dawn today, he said. He gave no details.

Since Bolivia is landlocked, the minister's remarks presumably referred to infiltration of guerrilla fighters from some neighboring country, observers said.

DOESN'T GIVE DETAILS

Addett did not specify the nature of the Soviet involvement in the alleged plot.

The two ministers appeared together in a television broadcast to announce the move against the Russians.

The Soviet embassy staff is believed to be the biggest of any foreign mission in La Paz — as many as 500, some reports say.

Earlier this month, Addett claimed to have uncovered a plot to turn the country into "a Castroite concentration camp."

The interior ministry said at the time that "a foreign embassy" was involved.

Gunship Downed

SAIGON (AP) — A North Vietnamese surface - to - air missile shot down one of the United States' biggest computerized gunships Wednesday, and all 14 crew members aboard are missing and feared dead, the U.S. command announced today.

Total Destruction Of Fisheries Seen

ROME (Reuter) — World fisheries face total destruction unless techniques already available for saving them are properly used, Canadian and U.S. experts report.

The warning comes in a paper prepared by the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization for presentation to the UN conference on human environment in Stockholm in June.

Written by Dr. Henry Regier of the University of Toronto and Don W. Kelley of Sacramento, Calif., who formerly worked at FAO, the paper criticizes human failure to identify emotionally with fishery life.

It says that a tendency to regard the water environment as alien and hostile has hindered public understanding and action on the question.

And while public awareness has increased, so has the rate of all forms of pollution of lakes, streams and oceans, and the exploitation of fisheries.

FAO attached to the paper a series of recommendations for action. These noted that while the harvest of proteins from the sea has increased by about six per cent a year over the last 25 years, yields from fish farming and of certain fish stocks now are decreasing because of overfishing, pollution and other man-made changes in the water environment.

The recommendations urge the expansion of scientific research and the use of unconventional and so-far unexploited fishery resources such as

$24,058 On PM's Office

OTTAWA (CP) — It's built-in cabinet work, new suede chesterfields and chairs and a new wool pile carpet in Prime Minister Trudeau's Parliament Hill office at a total cost of $24,058.

The Commons was told Wednesday in a written return for Robert C. Coates (PC — Cumberland-Colchester North) that the new decor was included in a recent renovation of Trudeau's office.

Six firms were involved in the project, the reply by Works Minister Jean-Eudes Dube said.

The renovations, including repairs and painting of the ceiling, fixing up the woodwork, installing built-in cabinets and putting in a new lighting system, cost $16,487.

New furniture, including a coffee table and end tables besides the leather-covered chesterfields and chairs, cost $6,308. The new rug cost $1,263.

Construction Crisis Looms

The threat of a province-wide, labor-management confrontation in the construction industry surfaced today with an apparent impasse in negotiations between carpenters and the Construction Labor Relations Association.

The B.C. Provincial Council of Carpenters released a statement charging employers in the construction industry with "preparing for an early shutdown affecting many of the larger projects in this province."

Lorne Robson, secretary-treasurer of the council, said the CLRA is "refusing to bargain or utilize the services of the mediation officer" by insisting that the issue of the shorter work week be dropped as a prior condition to having negotiations proceed.

The apparent impasse could lead to a lockout-picket situation across the province as early as next week, the carpenters said.

The carpenters' statement said less than half of the clauses in the agreement have been resolved. "Many of the outstanding provisions are long-established conditions that the employers are endeavoring to weaken or remove from the carpenters' agreement," the statement said.

The conditions include holiday pay, local travel, shift differential, starting times, coffee breaks as well as the major issues of wages and hours of work.

Spokesmen for the Construction Labor Relations Association, which handles negotiations for the 4,000 carpenters mentioned in the carpenters' statement, were unavailable for comment.

DACCA FACES STRIFE

By LEE LESCAZE
The Washington Post

DACCA — Anger at sharply increased food prices and continuing smuggling and hoarding of grain has caused the first anti-government demonstrations in Bangladesh.

The scattered protests over the last 10 days have been quickly controlled, but government officials are concerned that continuing food shortages and abuses of the government grain distribution program will produce more serious disturbances than those that have taken place in the Rajshahi and Sylhet districts. A small clash broke out at a government warehouse in Dacca Tuesday.

In Rajshahi, university students stopped two trucks, which were illegally carrying grain from Bangladesh stocks to India. The students distributed the grain to local people and then seized the district's chief food officer. They damaged several grain shops during a rampage that was marked by slogans critical of the ruling Awami League Party and Prime Minister Sheikh Mujibur Rahman.

According to reports reaching Dacca, grain stocks in government warehouses have declined in the last month to 240,000 tons, and only about 50,000 tons are scheduled to arrive in Bangladesh through United Nation's relief programs in the next month.

With the government-owned stocks donated by foreign countries shrinking, prices on the open market for rice grown in Bangladesh have doubled in some areas this month.

Separate Jordan-Israel Peace Possible—Hussein

WASHINGTON (WP) — King Hussein of Jordan carefully left open Wednesday the possibility that he might make a separate peace with Israel if a concerted Arab effort at settlement proves impossible.

In an interview in the red carpeted library of Blair House, the U.S. presidential guest house, Hussein twice declined to rule out a Jordanian - Israeli agreement when explicitly questioned, "is there a possibility that Jordan will make separate peace with Israel?"

Hussein is in Washington on a "private" visit during which he has conferred with President Nixon, security adviser Henry A. Kissinger, Secretary of State William P. Rogers and Defence Secretary Melvin R. Laird.

Hussein just replied indirectly, "peace is our objective. It has been and will always be . . . We hope and aspire for a peace which is a general one and a lasting one. And until now we have worked with others, hoping that such a peace will be achieved. But it all depends on the Israelis and their attitude."

When pressed a second time, again, the 36-year-old monarch, said "I believe that the greatest difficulties lie on the Jordan-Israeli side, so to speak — difficulties of the human element, the human suffering, the tragedy of the lost land, the people who have suffered so much. . . . I believe that the Syrian one or the Egyptian one is considerably easier."

In a wide ranging session, during which a Jordanian security officer and an American secret service agent were also present, Hussein made these points:

—The "overwhelming majority of the people of Palestine" support his plan for a united federal kingdom after Israel withdraws from the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River.

—Relations between Egypt and Jordan are strained. He said he hoped that this is a "passing phase," but that he was "disappointed and shocked" at the conduct of Egyptian legal proceedings against the alleged killers of Jordanian Prime Minister Wafi Tell, who was assassinated in Cairo in November.

While here, Hussein is discussing his proposal for an autonomous Palestinian state on the West Bank and seeking additional U.S. economic and military aid.

The king appeared to be at ease but slightly tired. He wore a gold-colored suit and tan shirt.

Hussein said his federation plan would meet the social, political and economic aspirations of the Palestinian population.

"I believe it (the proposal) puts the problem in the proper context, the problem of the Palestinian people their plight, their rights and their homeland," the king said.

"But outside the territory of Palestine, which is all under occupation at this stage, it gives them the identity which is dear to them, and at the same time it insures that we remain as one family and we do not leave them on their own, as they feared. For this we will never do."

He said that in the "context of a final solution and a final peace, Jerusalem must be the meeting place for all," adding that Jordan is "open minded" on how the problems of sovereignty over Jerusalem will be resolved.

"Some might say that Jerusalem must belong to people of the Jewish faith, as Rome belongs to Christians and Mecca to Moslems. But no other city, no other point in the world is such a meeting place . . . and is such importance as Jerusalem is to all."

But, he said, "and this is a must . . . our rights — the rights of the Palestinians, at least" must be recognized.

"Then we are willing and ready to discuss every way and any means" to resolve the Jerusalem question.

When asked about the report that Jordanian air force planes were sent to Pakistan, the king expressed "surprise" that the report would surface during his visit to Washington, "unless it is really an attempt to affect the visit in one way or another."

He said there is "close cooperation" between Jordan and Pakistan, and "any moves that we might have carried out are within that context."

Vote by Telephone Suggested Cure for Low Turnout

Why are Saanich residents so apathetic when it comes to voting in municipal elections?

A two-year study of the problem by a University of Victoria political scientist presents no definite answers, but it does suggest two major remedies for the malaise.

In his report presented Wednesday to Mayor Hugh Curtis, Dr. Mark Sproule-Jones proposes a return to political wards and the introduction of a system of telephone voting.

He says the ward system would enable voters to identify more closely with candidates for office, and make them feel their vote would carry more weight.

Voting by telephone, Sproule-Jones says, would cut down considerably the time and effort involved in casting ballots.

Under this system, a week before the election each eligible voter would be mailed a code number which he would use as identification when phoning in his vote.

Sproule-Jones suggests certain safeguards to counter fraudulent voting.

Some Saanich aldermen commented today that they would like to see serious consideration of the telephone voting system, if they could be convinced that it would be foolproof.

But they said they would be reluctant to see a return to the ward system of electing council members, which Saanich abandoned in 1949.

Curtis today was non-committal on both proposals, although he noted that the "revolutionary" telephone voting system would require changes to the Municipal Act.

He said although he originally suggested the study, it was entirely a UVic project and not commissioned by Saanich.

Curtis asked for the study of political attitudes in the municipality after the poor voter turnout of 24 per cent in the 1968 municipal election.

Sproule-Jones, assisted by Saanich municipal clerk Gordon Hayward, drew up a comprehensive questionnaire and selected a group of 109 for detailed questioning. Questions were posed so that the answers could be analysed by computer.

AVERAGES

The average turnout of eligible voters between 1961 and 1968 was 26.88 per cent.

"Not only does Saanich have low turnout rates in absolute terms, but also compared to other cities and municipalities, in Canada and abroad . . ."

A 1957 survey of 122 Canadian cities and towns showed an average turnout of 38.3 per cent. In 1970, the Saanich poll hit what was believed to be an all-time low — 14 per cent.

Sproule-Jones' report, which will be available Monday for study, draws an interesting picture of the Saanich resident who does turn out to vote.

MIDDLE-AGED

He is likely to be middle-aged, originally from the Prairies, comparatively well-to-do, and with fewer than average years of formal education.

The survey shows that 34.9 per cent of Saanich voters were born in Alberta, Saskatchewan, or Manitoba and 18.3 per cent in the United Kingdom.

Long-established residents are more likely to vote than newcomers, men more than women. Voters include a significant proportion of those in the higher income brackets.

Pollution, the report shows, is the No. 1 municipal issue in Saanich. More than 45 per cent of those sampled considered it the most important single issue.

KNOW PROBLEMS

But political inteest ranks low. Of those polled, 68.8 per cent said they have not attended any kind of political meeting in the last four years while 63.3 per cent have never written to or talked to a municipal official.

Despite this lack of enthusiasm for things political, Sproule-Jones says the Saanich electorate "has a strong conception of the problems and issues currently facing the municipality."

Two-thirds of the voters "frequently read all the articles on Saanich municipal affairs in the local press, while 40.4 per cent frequently discuss public issuss and another 48.6 occasionally discuss public issues with their friends."

Satisfaction with the status quo is indicated in the findings that 89 per cent of those surveyed felt Saanich is a good or fairly good community to live in, while over 94 per cent considered the council is doing its job well or fairly well.

"There is little evidence to imply that the Saanich voter is disillusioned and disaffected with the processes and products of local democracy," Sproule-Jones says.

The voter doesn't feel his own participation can directly influence municipal activities, but prefers "to play a watching brief role with regard to Saanich politics."

Veteran Saanich alderman Les Passmore said today he has never been unduly concerned about low voter turnouts at elections, as he firmly believes those who do turn up to vote are representative of the general thinking of the electorate.

Chabot Explains Position

Labor Minister Jim Chabot said today he will consider it "a breach of commitment" if labor unions continue to operate under contracts with restrictive clauses affecting other labor unionists.

Chabot sent a telegram Wednesday to the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council and to the B.C. Federation of Labor which he said is "a clarification" of the agreement made last week when Chabot agreed to withdraw Bill 88.

"There appears to be some confusion as to what happened and to what is going to happen in the province in the future," he said.

Union spokesmen said Wednesday they understood the terms of last week's agreement to affect those restrictive clauses which would have been included in new contracts negotiated this year.

A spokesman for the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council said today the council will seek further meetings with Chabot in order to clarify the minister's position.

"There is a grey area here which we need to clarify if negotiations are to proceed in an orderly manner," the spokesman said.

The building trades council and the federation of labor are expected to release a joint statement soon responding to Chabot's telegram to them Wednesday.

EXISTING CONTRACTS

Chabot, in his telegram, referred to those restrictive clauses already existing in contracts. The telegram reads, in part, "During this period (1972), I will expect relaxation of the restrictive clauses that interfere with the rights of other trade unionists."

"I don't know what their (trade unions') impression of our agreement is," Chabot said in an interview today. "I gave them my impression and my expectations (in the telegram)."

"I feel it is a breach of commitment if clauses are included in contracts which are restrictive to other trade unionists," he said.

In a related strike situation on Vancouver Island, there is no change from Wednesday. Members of Local 213 of the Teamsters Union today continued to strike the Victoria operation of Butler-Lafarge Limited and picketed the Nanaimo and Duncan operations.

GIFT TAX ACT DRAWS WARNING

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. branch of the Canadian Bar Association Wednesday issued a warning to B.C. citizens to use extreme care in making gifts or charitable donations.

The chairman of the branch's taxation committee, John G. Smith of Vancouver, said:

"The new Gift Tax Act introduced by the minister of finance and passed by the Legislature Monday gives the provincial government the power to tax charity.

"Gifts to any charity, no matter how worthy, no matter how local, can be subjected to a tax of 15 to 50 per cent. So can gifts between members of the same family, although there is an exemption of $2,000 for gifts to individuals and $10,000 a year for gifts between husbands and wives."

Smith said the public must be warned that this tax can seriously endanger the plans of all charitable organizations.

"It also deters individuals wishing to make charitable donations of any size.

"National and international charities, educational trusts — in fact any trust, building funds for charitable or educational purposes — gifts to all of these will be taxable."

Smith said the requirement that every gift must be the subject of a report to the government is impracticable with respect to small family and charitable gifts.

"Yet a $10-a-day fine for not reporting has been established and can be assessed by the provincial minister of finance. There are no exceptions and no minimums that are exempt from reporting," he said.

"That is a law that is wide open to the abuse of harassment and accordingly is bad law."

The branch urged the government to delay proclamation of the Gift Tax Act until such time as clarifying regulations have been announced to the public.

. . . FISH

To allow a greater yield of proteins from fisheries, the paper says, fish stocks should be managed rationally through controls including monitoring and periodic assessments of fish catches, the development of fish farming and limits on waste disposal.

The report says that rivers and lakes, once the source of pollution is removed, do gradually recover their earlier state of health. "Thus not all biological communities in environments once polluted are necessarily condemned to death," the paper says.

"The future of fisheries seems to be one of endless monitoring, experimentation, refinement of theory and careful management practices."

"Time is not on our side. In spite of growing environmental and economic awareness, we have grave concern about the future ecological state of the freshwater and inshore marine communities from the viewpoint of fisheries.

"Yet the technology exists that would maintain environments in a reasonably healthy state and permit the partial recovery of others for purposes of increased fish production," it continues.

"Given an adequate commitment by the world's people, progress should be prompt, and hopefully rapid enough," the paper concludes.

Expense Account Policy Adopted

The public accounts committee today unanimously adopted a policy statement that provincial cabinet ministers accept no expense money or other payments from private organizations while travelling on government business.

The motion was approved after the committee agreed to table an earlier motion by Liberal Leader Pat McGeer to limit government expense payments to out-of-province trips where such costs are unpaid by inviting groups.

Government members of the committee said that motion didn't go far enough because it left the implication that it was acceptable for cabinet ministers to accept expense money.

The new motion said that the committee confirms the present government policy that ministers must accept no expense mogey from non-government sources while travelling "on behalf of or representing the province."

LACKS INFORMATION

McGeer said his motion arose from inadequate information listed on vouchers for travel expenses of Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi.

McGeer told the committee that expenses were paid by the government for a speaking engagement by Gaglardi in South Bend, Indiana, at a "Transport for Christ" convention, a religious organization that operates a mobile chapel for truckers.

Gaglardi also addressed Sunday religious services in that city, he said.

Later McGeer was asked to withdraw a statement in which he said: "I am told by someone who was in touch with that organization that the minister's travelling expenses, meals . . . were paid for by that convention."

Herb Capozzi (SC—Vancouver Centre) told McGeer: "You're intimating he got money twice — either back it up or withdraw it."

WITHDRAWS REMARK

McGeer was told by Chairman George Mussallem it was "not proper" to make such a statement and McGeer said:

"I clearly withdraw it."

McGeer said he thought it "wonderful" that Gaglardi would take time to attend a religious convention but added:

"Imagine if every minister has his expenses paid for attending religious conventions of his particular faith. I don't think this would qualify as government business."

McGeer said later he would attempt to raise the vouchers in the legislature today during estimates of Gaglardi's department. But he was told he would have to ask leave of the House for the vouchers, kept under close guard by Comptroller-General J. W. Minty, to be presented in the House.

Marshall Buys Paper

DAWSON CREEK (CP) Two weekly newspapers, the Peace River Block News and the Chetwynd Echo, have been purchased by a company formed by Don Marshall, Conservative MLA for Peace River, and Chetwynd publisher Del Folk.

Marshall will act as business manager for the two newspapers and Folk will assume the position of managing editor.

Naturalists Do Spend On Their Outdoor Fancies

I remember, back in the mid-60s, reading an article in a national U.S. hunting and fishing magazine outlining the tremendous contribution these outdoor activities made to the nation's economy. It was an impressive piece of work and one I was certain would have long-term implications for legislators faced with making decisions about how the outdoors would be used and, more important, how public funds would be spent for recreation.

I took no issue with the article. The case, it seemed to me, had been presented objectively and that hunting and fishing organizations would be drawing heavily on it in future confrontations with the lawmakers of the land.

The article was further evidence, as if any were needed, that the old adage "money talks" was just as true as ever. What legislator could ignore the value of the trade in guns, tackle, ammunition, clothing and all the other paraphenalia of these outdoorsmen? This was truly big business.

Hard on the heels of the hunting and fishing article came a U.S. government report on outdoor recreation full of interesting projections on future patterns of outdoor use by the people of the United States. The great rush to the outdoors was just developing in those days and I think few people were prepared for what the U.S. study revealed.

For example, it showed that non-consumptive users — bird watchers, botanists, photographers, hikers, artists, and naturalists in general — now outnumbered the hunters and fishermen in some parts of the northeast and that within the next decade they would be the leading force to be reckoned with in deciding how the outdoors would be used.

I've no desire to drive another wedge between hunters and naturalists. In many cases they are one and the same and in others, changing public concerns have put them on the same side of the fence. But naturalists still lag far behind the hunters when it comes to making their feelings known and, more particularly, in publicizing their tremendous contribution to the national economy.

FILM BY THE MILE

Naturalists can start by pointing out that theirs is not a seasonal contribution based on the vagaries of wildlife populations but is a year-round pursuit. They travel farther and spend more time in the field and of course, they eat, sleep and from what I hear, on occasion drink, all of which costs money which naturalists happily pay to enjoy their version of fun in the outdoors.

They buy books, cameras, recording equipment, film by the mile, subscriptions, clothing, camping gear and even bird feeders and bird food all of which can be shown to total up to a lot of money.

Canada is still far behind the United States in the trend towards more non-consumptive use of the outdoors but our situation is changing so rapidly that even while these words are being written they may be outdated.

A four-year-old estimate, by Dr. Tim Myers of Calgary, put the naturalist figure for Canada at more than 800,000. Rather high you say? Well, consider this. Many people interested in nature and who participate in outdoor activities because of this interest, often do not think of themselves as naturalists. Still the money they spend on these activities can fairly be included in that spent by naturalists in general.

$400 AVERAGE

Dr. Myres also estimated the total annual spending by the average naturalist on his pursuit to be nearly $400 which, multiplied by the number of naturalists wandering about the country, makes catering to their needs big business.

It also points up that there are sound economic grounds for spending money, at both the provincial and federal levels, to provide more opportunities to enjoy our nation's natural history through the establishment of more parks, reserves, interpretation centres and nature interpretation programs.

They'd be tax dollars well spent.

TAX TIPS FOR YOU

Tips for filing your 1971 income tax are provided Times readers in co-operation with the department of national revenue.

For further assistance readers may contact the Victoria district taxation office, Vancouver Street, public information service, at 388-3551.

Q. I started a new business in 1971. Can you tell me what depreciation I can claim for income tax purposes?

A. Capital cost allowance, sometimes referred to as depreciation, is allowed as a deduction. The rates vary with the type of asset.

For example: Class 10 — cars, trucks, etc., 30 per cent; Class 6 — frame and stucco buildings, 10 per cent; Class 3 — steel, brick and concrete buildings, 5 per cent.

Rates for other assets may be obtained by reference to the Income Tax Regulations or from your local district taxation office. Special rates may apply to assets of a farmer or fisherman. For these, see the farmer's and fisherman's guide. In the case of a new business that was not in operation for the full taxation year, the depreciation should be pro-rated on the basis of the number of days the business was in operation.

Q. My husband received strike pay frm his unin office in the United States although we live in Canada and the strike was here. Des he have to report this strike pay?

A. If your husband performs no services (ther than picketing) in order to draw strike pay, he need nt report it. However, if he is required to perform specific services (such as acting as a special chauffeur) in order to draw strike pay, it is considered to be a payment for services, and therefre taxable incme to him.

'Not While I Am Premier'

The odd internal controversy over a Moran dam on the Fraser River continues in provincial government circles, and it will not die despite periodic emphatic statements by Premier Bennett. The former NDP leader, Mr. Strachan, has raised it again with facts and figures he extracted from government files. He says the documents make it clear that the B.C. Energy Board has been making extensive studies of the Moran site, and its damming possibilities, and he draws the conclusion that the idea is a live one in the thinking of the government.

But government sources protest that the Energy Board's activities are merely part of an overall study of British Columbia's power needs to 1985, with nothing personal intended so far as the Fraser is concerned. However, it appears that the study has had a very close application to the Moran site, and that it has included information on a high-level dam, a down-stream regulating dam, possible low and intermediate-level outlets for the water stored behind the dam, and other features. There is little doubt that very extensive and precise data on a Moran dam project have been assembled.

In the midst of the latest publicity, Premier Bennett has intervened to say, that the Moran dam will never be built while he is still in office. The statement is clear and definite, and one of his finest. But Recreation Minister Kiernan enters the picture to say that a Moran dam could provide the final answer to flood dangers on the lower Fraser. On this basis he appears to favor the idea.

But the flaw in the Kiernan stand, so far as ecologists, fisheries experts and other conservations are concerned, is that a dam that holds back a large head of water in a reservoir is by that fact a prime source of hydro power. Once built, if only for flood control, the dam would be a long step toward establishing a power plant on the Fraser and in any case would eat most of the river's value as a major source of salmon. Who is fooling whom?

On the sidelines stands Dr. Shrum, chairman of B.C. Hydro, urging the superiority of nuclear power over hydro or gas-fueled generators for Vancouver Island, and giving only an occasional ear to Mr. Bennett's expressed disapproval of the nuclear answer.

What does it all mean? Obviously it means that there is a wide gulf separating some members of the cabinet from their colleagues — a gulf which affects the senior experts of the government's power and energy agencies. Mr. Bennett has the power to enforce his personal opposition to a Moran dam, but he himself recognizes that this can be effective only up to the hour of his leave-taking, whenever that may be. After that, it seems that the Fraser will be open for grabs, with all the necessary information gathered handily in the files and the arguments for implementation ready to emerge at a moment's notice both from high-level and intermediate level outlets of the reservoir of data.

The conservationists, the fisheries people, the federal government, the downstream dwellers whose delta country will be vitally affected, had better be equally prepared with facts and determination. Failing that, the Fraser salmon, and a great many more Fraser assets, could be no more.

Discovery of the West

Some opposition criticism of last year's federal budget was directed towards the seeming lack of interest by Ottawa in Western economic problems. One Conservative critic from a riding in Manitoba, Mr. Jack Murta, came to the point when he said of the general economy: "It is not only time for this affluence to be shared, but for the development of a Western policy."

In a recent debate the new Minister of Labor, Mr. Martin O'Connell, revealed that Ottawa has perhaps heeded the economic dissent which has come from this part of the country. He was not specific but his words are, nonetheless, a hint that changes may soon be coming. He said: "A good deal of the forward trend in a new industrial strategy for this country will be toward developing higher levels of economic activity in the West." He links such efforts as opening up "opportunities for industrial development" in the West with the pursuit of national unity.

Parliamentary rhetoric and electioneering aside, there is every practical reason to gear the West, particularly this Pacific province, to more trade with the new markets of the Far East. It is time as well for a deliberate emphasis on secondary manufacturing, with specialization in certain products, to make sure that the Canadian return is as advantageous as possible.

In decentralizing Canadian industry, Ottawa would be making a progressive step. There is no reason why such a move should wait until the official opening of the Canada Development Headquarters in Vancouver.

Political Palate

France, one of the historic fountainheads of political thought, may have produced a new way of discovering political aptitudes. A recent study revealed that there is a significant connection between eating and drinking habits and political preferences.

For instance, Communists, it is said, prefer cheese to sweet desserts while Gaullists have a liking for Bordeaux wines. The information is contained in a report of the Sofres organization and published by the Gault-Millau food guide.

By preparing a chart on individual food and beverage preference it may be possible to deduce political affiliation. One wonders what the culinary preference of Socreds is, of NDPers, and so on. Perhaps Mayor Campbell's remark about "hamburgers" was more prescient than it appeared, dimly indicative of some odd correlation between table fare and political partisanship.

The question arises: does the diet determine political preference or does preference determine the diet? Who knows, food guides may one day replace the Gallup poll. It is a deliciously civilized thought.

". . . I can't begin to tell you how much we appreciate all the talking you do . . . it'll keep our campaign costs down to a minimum. . . ."

BRUCE HUTCHISON

To Work or Not to Work?

The great Irish poet, painter and mystic, George William Russell, might have been thinking of Pierre Elliott Trudeau when he wrote: "There is no more subtle pleasure under heaven than digging below the foundations of an intellectual, making ourselves immune to the poison of his error and enabling ourselves to enjoy his truth, of which he himself was doubtful."

Many Canadians, including this reporter, have tried to dig down to the foundations of Mr. Trudeau's intellect, surely the deepest and most mysterious ever known in our politics, but the excavations have never got far. The error and truth alike escape the diggers. What, for instance, are we to think of his latest soliloquy on the subject of work?

Addressing some Quebec voters (without any thought of an election, you understand), Mr. Trudeau said: "There is perhaps a different work ethic emerging in our society. Perhaps there is a growing percentage of people, though I'm sure it's still very small, who don't want to continue looking for work in the traditional sense in order to fulfil themselves as human beings."

Rejecting Work

At another meeting he added that unemployment figures are deceptive because some Canadians, rejecting work, prefer to live on unemployment insurance which is their "right." People want more leisure or more services and less consumer goods. Therefore Canada should not go "overboard" in the development of manufacturing industries lest the nation's values change.

These are profound and heretical thoughts from any politician who hopes to be re-elected. They go against the whole grain of our society which has always regarded work as a virtue and its rewards, in wealth, as natural, just and ordained by Providence itself. We have long worshipped, as Mr. Trudeau once remarked, at the temple of the 'mighty god reverently named the Gross National Product. Now, in ultimate heresy, the prime minister questions that sacred divinity. Iconoclasm can go no further. But where is the iconoclast going?

He is, to begin with, a man of large inherited wealth and his critics will say that he need not worry about making money, as poor men must. This, it seems to me, is a weak sort of criticism when obviously Mr. Trudeau cares little about money — too little about the public's money when his government is spending it. At any rate, no other man in Canada, I imagine, could live more happily on a low income if he had to, as proved in the carefree desert wanderings of his youth.

He was a private person then, responsible only to himself. Now he is a public person responsible to the Canadian people. They are entitled to know what he means and intends, not in the speculations of philosophy but in the grimy business of politics. He means, I take it, that the consumer society of the Western world is nearing, if it has not passed, the peak of its consumption and should be seeking contentment in something besides goods.

PIERRE TRUDEAU
. . . heretical thoughts

This, I believe, is indisputably right, not merely in philosophical but in physical terms, since our tiny planet will not much longer endure the increasing drain on its raw materials and the pollution of its environment. Nevertheless, Mr. Trudeau, the politician, confronts a stubborn paradox which might not concern Mr. Trudeau, the philosopher.

He says that some people don't want to work, and, instead, dedicate their lives to soul-satisfying idleness which is their undoubted privilege. Is it indeed? And who, in most cases, pays for that privilege? No one but the workers. Every dollar spent by the government on welfare or anything else is provided in the end by the workers and if they stopped working government and society would collapse. The philosophers (including Mr. Trudeau) would starve.

To be sure, society is bound to support those who, for various reasons, cannot work but why is it bound to support those who simply don't like work and decide to live on the work of their fellows? How ethical, in short, is the new non-work ethic?

Again, if a man works hard in his active lifetime and saves his money, through a pension fund or otherwise, he has demanded less goods from society in this period than he could have demanded. Then surely he has the right, in his retirement, to use his postponed demand which he has richly earned.

Defrauding the Thrifty

Does Mr. Trudeau agree? Of course he must but his government does not agree, except in abstract principle and pious protestation. In actual policy, like all governments, it defrauds the thrifty worker and steals his savings through an ancient device known as inflation. This process, according to the recent official brief of the Canadian Labor Congress, doesn't matter in the least, so long as prices rise in Canada no faster than in other countries, where Canadian goods are sold competitively — a new economic revelation to be read by the retired worker with interest, perhaps with fury.

Such unsolved problems are difficult for the politician however easy they may be for the philosopher. But a still more interesting problem remains — the problem of the wealthy non-worker. After a life of accumulation he seeks contentment in idleness and finds that he has to toil for it, often harder than the worker.

What is more pathetic than the rich man trying to amuse himself by doing nothing? What exhausts any normal man so much as enforced indolence? What fate is worse than contrived dormancy? What price luxurious torpor and exquisite boredom?

Few men master the high art of successful loafing and Mr. Trudeau is not one of them. He may endorse the non-work ethic for others but he constantly overworks himself, as you can see from the deepening lines of his face on television. The politician, alas, is submerging the philosopher.

TOM WICKER

Car Profits or Clean Air?

NEW YORK — By now, we know enough about the problems of reclaiming a decent environment to understand that in this field, as Adlai Stevenson once said in a different context, "there are no gains without pains." It is just not going to be possible, for example, to indulge ourselves in an ever-growing demand for electric power, and at the same time to prevent a comparable increase in the pollution that results from present methods of generating electricity. At the least, some new technology will be needed; more likely, at the worst, the national appetite for power is going to have to be curtailed.

Now a government study proposes significant relaxation of federal restrictions on automobile exhaust emissions, primarily on grounds that to carry out these restrictions will increase the cost of a car by as much as $775 and still will not attain the desired air-quality standards.

Bill Assailed

No wonder Sen. Muskie, the author of the emission standards bill, and Ralph Nader, the scourage of the fat cats, have assailed this report, and no wonder Lee Iacocca, the president of Ford, praised it as "the best news the public has had in years." After all, clean air standards are not being set in order to hold down the price of automobiles but to make it possible for Americans to keep on breathing; and if it is true that current emission standards will not achieve the ideal air quality by the period 1975-77, is it likely that that air quality level can be reached more quickly by relaxing those emission standards?

The report advocated easing the standard for nitrogen oxide emissions from .4 grams per mile to between one and two grams (by 1976); since this is the most difficult emission to control, but perhaps also the most damaging to air quality, plant life, and humans, there is a strong suggestion here that the recommendation is more for Detroit's engineering benefit than for the quality of the air, or the relief of the consumer.

Experts at the California Statewide Air Pollution Research Centre say, on the other hand, that it would make more sense to hold to strict control of nitrogen oxide and hydrocarbon emissions, while relaxing — if anything — control of carbon monoxide emissions from the presently required 3.4 grams per mile (by 1976) to perhaps 17 grams. Through complicated technical means, they say, that might also provide the best way to limit emissions of the nitrogen oxides and hydrocarbons; but this is an approach that aims at better air quality rather than at the convenience of the auto makers.

The Government report also suggested a "two-car solution" — more stringent emissions controls on cars for use in areas most vulnerable to air pollution. But it did not explain how cars could be limited to particular areas of the country; nor does the idea seem to take account of the fact that virtually every urban area either has now or has the potential to develop a photochemical smog problem — to which emissions of nitrogen oxide particularly contribute.

Why should it be assumed, moreover, that the total cost of controlling damaging emissions ought to be passed on to the car buyer? Surely some of Detroit's own wealth, partially earned by polluting the air, should be rebated to the public through industry's absorption of a large share of the cost of pollution abatement.

The oil companies, whose sales will go up as emission controls result in greater gasoline consumption, could also be required to pour some of this windfall into the cost of controlling auto emissions; and since the public as a whole will benefit from cleaner air, there also is a case to be made for a Government share in control costs.

Practicality Queried

There is a hidden implication, moreover, that may be the most important aspect of the Government report. If it is really going to increase the cost of automobiles by $775 to reduce their emissions to acceptable levels, it seems clear that the economic practicality of the internal combustion engine is being severely reduced. This is particularly so, since the experience of California with less stringent standards than those being imposed by the Federal Government is that automobiles equipped to meet them suffer greatly in "driveability" and cost much more to operate.

The logic of the report, therefore, is not that the standards should be related so that the cost of buying a car can be held down, and Detroit's engineering problem can be eased; but that if these standards cannot be met without ruinous increases in original and operating costs, the auto companies should move as quickly as possible to some newer and better technology — whether it be turbine engines, hybrids, or some other development.

Here, as in so many other matters, the desperate need is for the right priorities — in this case, clean air first, consumer costs second, and Detroit's profits last.

Ladysmith Harbor

"Ladysmith Harbour is essentially an industrial harbor," W. R. Redel, Director of Lands, said in a letter to the Regional District of Cowichan Valley. Prompted by this remark, a meeting of concerned residents formed the "Save the Ladysmith Harbor Committee." The objectives of the group are to protect and preserve the occupational and recreational uses, as well as the industrial use of the harbor. A public meeting will be announced.

Murderers

It's odd but whenever I read your newspaper I get the unshakable feeling that it is pro-ism something or other. In the March 25 edition, front page, you report that the "I.R.A. dismissed any idea of discontinuing violent activities." Violent activities may be the interpretation of the I.R.A. but I call it mass murder. And of course in the same article you refer to the "British Army terror tactics," who in short are only trying to keep law and order and prevent the Irish from killing each other off.

The I.R.A., incidentally, now stands for Irresponsible Reactionary Aliens, the old term of Irish Republican Army having disqualified itself as such with the first indiscriminate bomb.

The original I.R.A. was the adversary of the British army, not murderers of innocent women and children, and should now be branded as such. —Ed Wakefield, 970 Birch Rd., RR 1, Sidney.

Park Fund

Despite the efforts of City Council to restrict indiscriminate building, it seems we are faced with the prospect of high-rises on our Inner Harbor.

I suggest that every concerned citizen write a brief letter to Premier Bennett requesting him to release $1 million of the fund set aside for the acquisition of parks, so that the people of Victoria can buy the property at the foot of Fort Street known as the "Reid site."

The letters should be addressed "Greenbelt" in-care-of CJVI, 817 Fort Street. Mr. Joe Easingwood has undertaken to present this correspondence to the Premier personally.—Mrs. John H. Heynsbroek, 1448 Vining St.

How True

Hearty appreciation of Bruce Hutchison's outstanding columns. I suggest that if more of us would read, note and inwardly digest some of his wisdom and humor regarding the international scene, as well as the home front; we might acquire that identity we search for.—(Mrs.) H. H.

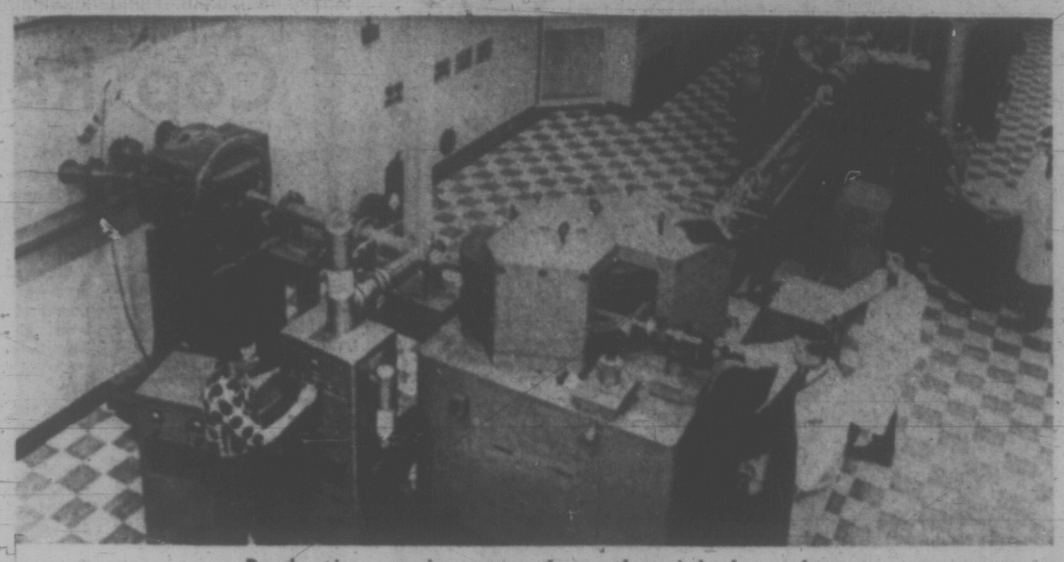
'Flexible Week' At Job Will Upset Social Patterns



Production moving away from the eight-hour day

By JAMES PURDIE
The Globe and Mail

The most significant industrial revolution since the advent of automation promises radical changes in the recreational, educational and social habits of North America, if early signs are being read correctly by five senior Canadian management consultants.

The revolution, compared by some with the invention of the assembly line and the computer, is the arrival of a flexible work week. It is a rearrangement of time that could relieve rush-hour traffic jams, extend retail shopping hours, ease weekend congestion at golf courses and ski resorts and improve productivity through a more balanced use of space and equipment.

The flexible work week is already firmly established in some key industries in Canada and the United States. For most workers, it involves a four-day work schedule, for some it means a three-day week and for a few it means a monthly commitment of work hours with flexible daily starting and quitting times.

The management consultants say a rearranged week is the natural outcome of technology and automation. About seven companies a day are switching to the new system in the United States and about 30 in Canada have made the change.

The consultants say they need 100 five-year examples before full effects of a shortened week can be assessed, but the rate of change now indicates the system will be generally accepted more quickly than the five-day week, which took 20 years to establish.

The five experts are David J. Alderman of P. S. Ross and Partners, Peter Buetow of the Thorne Group Ltd., Gordon Harrison of Samson Belair Riddell Stead Inc., J. R. Hearn of Kates, Peat, Marwick and Co. and J. M. Smith of Woods, Gordon and Co.

A Common Day

They agree that one or more forms of the shortened week will continue to make inroads into Canadian work patterns, but differ on some of the possible short- and long-term effects.

Buetow, for example, warns of dangers to the existing social system if the four-day or three-day week is widely adopted without adequate planning.

"We need a common day, like Sunday, for general relaxation, some system of days for social interchange," he says.

Hearn says it is the flexibility of work and leisure hours that makes a shortened work week a healthy idea.

"Really, what we're moving toward is a real-time, on-line society — to use computer terms — rather than a batch-processing society. We may well return to smaller service organizations because in future they must be available to suit society, not curtailed by a rigid system."

Smith says evidence to date indicates a heavier burden on management because organizations continue with a five-day week or even extend the week, while employees compress their normal work hours into four or three days.

Alderman: "We'll see the first effects when we move production away from the eight-hour day, measuring it by task, not hours. The real revolution will come when education breaks down the constraints of time. Then we will see the disappearance of the week as we have known it."

Harrison: "Our survey (conducted last fall) indicates that there will be less risk of abuse if the matter of hours and work days is put entirely in the hands of the employees. They will police the system themselves. Most clauses in existing contracts say that management will move to any system of hours suitable to employees."

The consultants agree that the first phase of the restructured week will involve increasingly widespread adoption of systems that compress the existing 40-hour, 36-hour or 32-hour week into four or three days, ranging in time from nine to 12½ hours each. The work cycles will vary from five to 28 days, depending on the nature of the work.

This is as far as the shortened work week has developed in North America to date, although interest is increasing in the European-style flexible work week, where employees set their own hours within certain limits.

Spread Demand

The second state of change will involve shortening the longer days to break down the constraints of fixed time periods. At that time, the consultants say, the resources of society will be used more uniformly. Expressways, for example, will no longer be overcrowded for two hours in the morning and two in the evening.

Peaks and valleys in the use of commuter services, urban transit, service industries, retail outlets, recreation and educational facilities will be reduced.

Society, in short, will multiply the effective use of all its facilities and institutions simply by spreading the demand across previously unused time. This means, in some ways, the breakdown of fixed-purpose time periods for such things as shopping and entertainment as well as earning a living.

There will be problems, "turmoil and change for a period," as Smith puts it, but not serious enough to prevent the new hours from gaining general acceptance in far less time than it took for industry to adopt Henry Ford's five-day week — perhaps five to 10 years.

Among these problems is fatigue that may be caused by longer work hours and the opposition on these grounds by most of the major international unions. The consultants say widespread adoption of the new system will not be possible until union objections are overcome. The only way that can happen, the unions say, is by reducing the week without extending the day — in effect, raising pay rates by up to 25 per cent.

The consultants think that most of the other problems will be overcome as the new week spreads through society. These include rearguard actions by traditionalists, who interpret the week in a biblical sense, conflicting days off among members of the same family, store closing hours, the need to reschedule education and social services.

The benefits of restructuring time in a society that no longer worries about simply making ends meet, that has so many material possessions it has to build in obsolescence, appear to be too great to pass up.

"The technological ability of society is a dividend to the people," says Hearn. "We'll take it in leisure rather than increased productivity," adds Smith.

A Time Lag

Alderman: "The nineteenth century and early twentieth century concept of industry culminated in the automobile lines. Now we have more unemployed, but the guaranteed income is happening, too. Value systems are changing. The trouble is there's a time lag of five to 10 years. The changes have all happened before we understand them."

Buetow: "In our studies of retail operations, we find most of the operators are convinced that peak business is reached in certain periods. Most of them are wrong. Retailers have already reacted to the changing customer demand patterns of a different type of society. Some have extended their opening hours; others have perhaps taken a more sensible course and have shifted their opening hours. As the retailer reacts, he may himself adopt the shortened work week or some other scheduling scheme."

Harrison: "Selye, (Dr. Hans Selye of Montreal, a world authority on human stress) says categorically that it (the shortened work week) won't work. People need to work steadily.

"I visited Riva Poor (the U.S. author whose 1969 book 4 Days, 40 Hours, created an upsurge of industrial interest in the concept) last summer. At that time U.S. conversion rate was 1.6 companies a day. Now it is nearly seven.

"Last October we found 17 firms (in Canada) experimenting with the shortened week. Now it is closer to 35."

Whatever modifications and changes occur in the new system as it develops, a giant upheaval of social patterns is assured. Although another year is needed by the consultants to measure the rate of growth and influence of the shorter week, they say, it will have early beneficial influences on the recreation, hobbycraft and education industries.

As it continues to grow, the new week is expected to produce a better educated, happier and more productive worker than North American capitalism has been able to find since it invented the five-day week.

MORE HOUSES FOR MIDDLE CLASS?

THE TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

By a curious coincidence, the same day saw the announcement of a new approach to housing by the federal cabinet, and the publication of a report showing where federal housing policy has gone wrong in the past.

Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford told the House of Commons Monday that the government was planning to create two new banks designed to attract more private money into the mortgage market. One would be a "publicly owned residential mortgage bank" which would encourage big investors such as insurance companies and pension funds to put more money into mortgages. The other would be a savings association which would accept deposits from small investors and make the money available for mortgages.

Assuming the plans go through, and a new flood of money is released into the housing market, what will be done with it? The question becomes especially urgent in the light of the report made to the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation by Montreal architect Melvin Charney.

Mr. charney is unsparing in his criticism of the CMHC, which he accuses of abdicating its responsibility to low-income groups and concentrating on construction "oriented to market interests." Even projects designed to provide low-rent accommodation for the poor have not worked out that way.

Mr. Charney also takes the corporation to task for showing little interest in renovating old housing. He points out that in cities like Toronto the bulk of the accommodation available to the poor consists of old, often deteriorating, but still salvageable houses.

BASFORD

Will these criticisms be heeded? If the government finds itself with larger funds available for investment in housing through its proposed banks, will it repeat past mistakes and channel the money predominantly into houses and apartments for the middle class? Or will it devote a larger share of its funds to constructing or renovating accommodation for the low-income families who are the main sufferers from the housing shortage? We would like to have a further statement from Mr. Basford on the issues raised by the Charney report.

Nobody Wants Fair Share

By IVOR BROWN
The London Observer

Prizes in Britain for accurately forecasting the results of football matches have now gone beyond £500,000. And a winner doesn't pay a penny of tax on his prize. Yet such a winner, if he stuck to his ordinary work, which he almost certainly will not, would be forced to pay out in income tax more and more money the harder and longer he went on toiling. Gambling is frowned on by some, but practised in one way or another by nearly all. The incentives are enormous. The State itself promotes a gigantic lottery with its Premium Bonds with large and untaxed prizes.

Nobody pretends that sending in a correct forecast to the football pools is anything but an accident. Those who scrutinize the form of the football teams before making their entries can claim that some judgment of the chances is needed, but most winners frankly admit that they were simply trusting to luck. There is no merit in having made a lucky shot. There never was such inequality of unearned income. So millions go on trying to become rich without labor.

British politicians of both parties are always talking of fair shares. Equality is said to be a commendable goal. It is in fact detested as dull. The English people delight in the possibility of picking up a fortune in a grotesquely unfair way. They may swear when they lose their money, but the grumble is soon over. Off they go to take another chance.

When I notice the number of betting shops along the High Streets and the amount of space given to racing in the popular newspapers I am reminded of the accuracy of a remark made by the wise and witty journalist, G. K. Chesterton. "The English," he said, "are not much interested in the equality of man; they are more concerned with the inequality of horses."

The most foolish of all political slogans was that which linked liberty with equality. Obviously a person is not free if he cannot work harder to earn and keep more money, which millions accept as a sensible view. The members of the Labour Party, which is most committed in theory to "fair shares," are constantly and inconsistently demanding differential payments.

The recent coalminers' strike was settled with varying rises in wages for those doing various kinds of work. No equality for them. The trade unions may talk of levelling, but their practice contradicts their principle. In their insistence on more for some, not the same for others, they are conforming with the general attiude to acquisition. Nothing is less liked than to be all alike.

* * *

The national premium bonds are made more attractive to purchasers by large additions to the prizes won by the fortunate holders of a lucky number. Every week somebody gets a cheque for £25,000 for which he has done nothing. If he had earned the money he would have to pay back three-quarters of it in income tax and surtax.

When the Labour Party was in power it could have arranged for a vast increase of small prizes which would make some approach to a policy of fair shares. It did nothing of the kind because the average man, known as "the worker" is fascinated by the idea of winning a heavy "packet" without doing any work for it. He may applaud the idea of equality when a Labour speaker is spouting on a platform, but in fact his ambition is to be as unequal as his luck allows.

Advance in professional of social status is accepted as desirable as much in the workers' housing estate as in the middle-class suburb. The idea of equality is implicit in the idea of "keeping up with the Joneses" (i.e. one's neighbors), but in fact the average family is much more eager to get ahead of the Joneses in the purchase of a larger home, a more glamorous holiday, or a more sumptuous motorcar.

* * *

Discrimination by race is forbidden by law, but separation by differing kinds of work and wage is as general in a factory as in the elegant offices of Big Business. I once discovered when travelling to America on a large liner that the grading of the many employees was a matter of bitter contention and strong feelings. We spent Christmas at sea, and when I asked my cabin steward if he had enjoyed his Christmas dinner, he told me gloomily that it had been ruined because he was put next at table to a bath steward; it was like seating a cabin boy beside the captain.

The most fluent talkers about levelling are always ready to avoid it. The left-wing member of the House of Commons is as quick as any other to insist on "Parliamentary Privilege" which puts all MPs above the law in certain matters. The taxpayer provides him with plenty of free travel in the first-class. If he were told to go second class, like most of his constituents, he would shout the house down. For him the elected are the elite.

Discrimination may be morally wrong, but it keeps people happy. Equality was the cry of the French revolutionaries. To insist on it in England today would be to provoke a revolution.

UFAW president Homer Stevens outside the legislature

Legislative Pickets Win Interview With Chabot

After initially refusing, Labor Minister James Chabot relented and met United Fishermen and Allied Workers Wednesday to discuss grievances related to the Workmen's Compensation Act.

About 90 demonstrators had paraded in front of the Legislative Buildings before the meeting. There were a few women and children and members of other unions, notably the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Transport and General Workers.

UFAWU president Homer Stevens said the fishermen wanted increased coverage under the Workmen's Compensation Act. He said fishermen working on company boats are automatically covered. Those, however, who deal independently with processors must pay their own coverage costs.

The fish packing industry, Stevens said, is dominated by two companies — the Weston Chain and the Canadian Fish Co. This means, Stevens said, that fishermen are, in actual fact, working for these two companies because there is no other company to which they can sell their product.

Stevens contended that it was the responsibility of the two companies to pay increased coverage costs for independent fishermen.

On Wednesday, the fishermen threatened to fill the Inner Harbor with boats and men if their demands were not met.

Originally, the demonstration was to be 150 unionists, backed up by a 25-boat flotilla in the harbor.

Only about six boats arrived to circle the harbor. Stevens said there would have been more but most boats have not yet been put in the water for the fishing season.

The fishermen argued that the government should abandon its plans to end the current session of the legislature today, that it should continue sitting until the needs of the people were met.

Chabot said he had first refused to meet the fishermen because he intended to wait until April 17, a meeting date set earlier this month. He later changed his mind because of a personal appeal from Stevens.

Stevens and other union officers were still trying to meet with Premier Bennett late Wednesday night. Bennett had been unable to be reached all that day.

Cop Retires With a Sigh

By DOUG MacRAE
Times Staff

If he had to do it over, he'd do it again — but only in Victoria.

A cop's job is getting tougher, and in the United States or in urban conglomerates like Vancouver or Montreal it's no longer a thinking man's career, says David Edward Anderson, who retires this weekend after 28 years with the Saanich police department.

Anderson is quitting at 56 because of ill health. He's been asked by the department to stick around "and not do much," but figures a clean break would be best.

"There's something happening in the U.S. and even in places like Vancouver," says Anderson.

"People hate cops. I spoke to an FBI man in California recently. They've got no applicants.

"It used to be, a few years ago, when departments could pick and choose among men with university educations. Now they've got to take people with, say, Grade 11 education."

It's not that bad here yet, he says.

Anderson still gets 300 Christmas cards a year, including those from people he's helped put in jail or otherwise get into law trouble.

"In this area, the young people appear to be coming along fine. The so-called hippies are no more trouble, really, than the tough gangs we used to have 20 years ago."

The detective feels, however, that no progress will be made in dealing with the spiralling crime rate — particularly as it's related to hard drug use — until the courts start dealing more harshly with convicted felons.

"Cure crime? You're not going to do it by perpetuating the image of the policeman as a friend of the law-breaker.

The courts have got to get tougher." A potential heroin salesman has got to see that someone else who did that has been sentenced to 14 years in prison."

The detective joined the Saanich department as a constable in 1944 from the Canadian Army medical corps. In his early years as a night constable he patrolled 55 square miles alone at night, taking in the Central Saanich area.

Since 1958, he has been working with Saanich's juvenile division, concentrating on police preventative measures.

In that period he has come to realize a "very, very small percentage" of the area's youth is responsible for criminal activity involving young people.

Anderson plans a lot of camping, gardening and puttering. The department has asked him to work some more, "but if you can't even drive a car, what use, really, could you be?"

Young Report Due in June

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Wednesday the prices and incomes commission is expected to report about the end of June on the causes of inflation.

In a Commons reply to Steve Paproski (PC—Edmonton Centre), the prime minister said the commission will be wound up about that time or shortly after.

The commission under Dr. John Young of Vancouver was established in July, 1969, with an original mandate to the end of December, 1971. It received a six-month extension to write a report.

Trudeay repeated that the government has contingency plans to deal with any upsurge of inflation.

B.C.'s Harold Sexton Dies at 83

Funeral services will be held at 3 p.m. Easter Monday in Christ Church Cathedral for retired Anglican Archbishop of British Columbia Harold Sexton, one of the "notables" in Canadian church history.

Sexton, 83, collapsed and died Wednesday afternoon at his home, 3905 Scolton Road, in Cadboro Bay.

Bishop of British Columbia Roy Gartrell said today:

"He was certainly one of the notable figures in the Canadian church. With a 33-year episcopate he left an indelible mark upon this diocese.

"Here was an outspoken man on many public issues and time, in some instances, has proven that he was right."

Gartrell referred specifically to Sexton's stand for reform in divorce and liquor laws, which later came into effect.

Sexton's death came as a surprise to his many friends although his health had not been good recently. Only a month ago a stained glass window, including his portrait, was dedicated in the cathedral.

Never afraid to speak out on a controversial issue, Sexton was frank about his dislike of the Vietnam war. During his long years in this province he led the move toward church ecumenism.

Born May 14, 1888, in Adelaide, Australia, Sexton received his education at St. Peter's College, Adelaide; Trinity College in Dublin, Ireland; Keble College, Oxford; the Australian College of Theology, and Trinity College in Toronto.

He came to Canada in 1935 when he was named bishop coadjutor of British Columbia. He was elected bishop of the Vancouver Island dicoese of British Columbia in 1936 and in 1952 metropolitan of British Columbia, with an archdiocese that included all of B.C. and the Yukon Territories.

He and his wife, the former Mary Hodgman of Victoria, Australia, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in January.

Following Monday's ceremony, Sexton will be buried in the churchyard of St. Michael and All Angel's Church on West Saanich Road.

Drug Smugglers Sent to Prison

PARIS (UPI) — Three Canadians Tuesday received sentences of between 10 and 13 years imprisonment for trying to smuggle 39.6 pounds of heroin out of France last summer. Joseph Perron, 41, of Saint-Tite, was sentenced to 13 years in jail. Roger Martel, 37, of 2396 Frontenac Street, Montreal, and Stanley Los, 32, of 7030 Briant Street, Montreal were both given 10-year sentences.

Fewer Hear Concert

By BRUCE OBEE
Times Staff

Attendance was down for the University of Victoria's department of music noon-hour concert on Wednesday, played by the University Concert Band under the direction of Richard Ely.

Most of the noon-hour concerts are presented on Friday, but because of the holiday this week, the concert was rescheduled.

The lack of attendance was probably due to the unexpected rescheduling, which is unfortunate because the music was good and it was the last opportunity to hear the University Concert Band this year.

The performance started shakily with a Bach chorale consisting of a number of short phrases. The band had difficulty in keeping together at the beginning of each phrase but soon redeemed itself with Beethoven's "Military March."

Following the Beethoven piece was Rachmaninoff's "Vocalize" played by soprano saxophonist, David Branter, accompanied by the woodwinds and a portion of the brass section.

The percussion section using a triangle, woodblock and xylophone, was particularly noticeable in Robert Washburn's "Partita". A rhythm change in the middle of the piece was marked by a beautiful solo played by flautist, Owen Underhill followed by another solo by trumpetist, Allen Butler.

Gabrieli's "Sonata pian' e forte," arranged by director forte," arranged by director Richard Ely, was played by two small brass and woodwind ensembles. The two ensembles sat at opposite sides of the stage playing sections of the piece alternately and then coming together for the finale.

The heavy, depressing mood of "Tapor No. 1" by composer Allan Hovhaness was contrasted by the bouncy rhythm of J. P. Sousa's "Black Horse Troop," an old favorite for marching bands.

On Friday, April 7, the University Chamber Singers will be featured at the department of music's final noon-hour concert of the year.

DISTRICT BUDGET APPROVED

A 1972 budget of 1,808,153 for the Capital Regional District was approved Wednesday.

A Capital Regional District hospital board budget of $579,179 was approved for this year compared with an estimated actual expenditure of $257,746 last year.

Executive director Dennis Young said most of the increase arises from debt charges from the capital expenditure program in 1970 and 1971.

★

Region To Move Offices

The headquarters of the Capital Regional District are expected to be relocated next year into a renovated building in the Old Town area.

Board members agreed Wednesday to accept in principle a move to 524 Yates Street, from Burnes House in Bastion Square, and that the executive committee be empowered to negotiate details.

The lease at Burnes House expires next March.

Executive director Dennis Young said the staff is "extremely cramped now" with 6,000 square feet, for which the rental is $4.25 a square foot.

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen recommended the district enter into an undertaking with the Victoria Foundation, a non-profit organization, to take a 10-year renewable lease of 12,000 square feet on two floors of the Yates Street building at $3 per square foot.

'MAGNIFICENT'

He said Victoria Foundation would be "just a vehicle for this project." The building is owned by Vancouver interests, he said.

Board chairman Hugh Curtis described the Yates Street building as "magnificent" and other directors voiced similar opinions.

The board's decision included giving the executive committee power to include the possibility of option to purchase.

★

Board May Speed Up

Time-consuming discussions by big committees of the regional board are to be tackled — by a committee.

In a resolution Wednesday, board directors noted that the committee-of-the-whole structure with an 18-member board "tends to be cumbersome and time-consuming."

An alternative, it was suggested, is individual standing committees.

Directors agreed that regional board chairman Hugh Curtis "appoint a special committee to investigate the standing committee structure" and make recommendations.

Hussein Plans Upset

NABLUS, Jordan (AP) — Arab voters in the first elections held in Israeli-occupied territory have chosen five new leaders more or less opposed to Jordan's King Hussein and committed to an independent Palestine state, election results shown Wednesday.

Despite guerrilla death threats, almost 14,000 Arabs voted Tuesday for new municipal councils in 10 towns under Israeli control in West Jordan.

Incumbent leaders in five towns were re-elected. They had held office for eight years and were traditionalists committed to continued union with Hussein.

New leaders were elected in five other towns. They appeared to favor a new order in West Jordan outside Hussein's influence, some sort of independent Palestine entity for the territory captured by Israel in the 1967 war.

The election upsets appeared to be a rejection of Hussein's plans for a semi-autonomous state of Palestine under his rule on the West Bank.

B.C. Government in Absolute Chaos Over Power Policy, Moran—Strachan

Statements by provincial cabinet ministers this week about the proposed Moran dam show the government is in "absolute chaos" on B.C. power policy, Robert Strachan (NDP — Cowichan-Malahat) said Wednesday.

Strachan said Recreation and Conservation Minister Ken Kiernan wants the dam for flood control purposes and possibly for generation of electricity.

But Premier Bennett has also said the dam won't be built as long as he's in office. Questioned recently about Bennett's remark, said Strachan, Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi pointed out that Bennett is 71 and won't be around in five years.

"That minister is doing his darndest to undermine the premier. The knife's out," Strachan said.

Resources Minister Ray Williston, on the other hand, has said that the dam won't be built for power purposes. But when told of Kiernan's push for the dam as a flood control measure Williston has backed his friend.

Quoting a newspaper account of the issue, Strachan said Williston said that if he were from Kiernan's constituency of Chilliwack in the Fraser Valley, he'd be pushing for Moran.

The last part of the chaos, said the NDP member, is the fact that the B.C. Energy Board has completed a feasibility study of the Moran and indicates in vouchers available to the public accounts committee that the dam has been studied as a power source.

"All these things show that there's absolute chaos in the ranks of the government with regard to the power policies in this province."

What really makes him mad about this, said Strachan is that Kiernan now is talking about the potential danger to the Fraser Valley from snowpack flooding for political purposes after 20 years of having ignored the problem.

The last great flood in the valley was in 1948. B.C. is committed to a federal-provincial diking program. Studies differ in opinion, but a recent federal inquiry indicated the dikes will be sufficient.

Topping the confusion in cabinet on the issue, said Strachan, Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford has written to citizens in Quesnel telling them that the issue is dead and the dam wouldn't work anyway because of a backup of silt.

"It's obvious that Kiernan doesn't have much support in the cabinet," Strachan said.

All the cabinet ministers' comments followed release Monday by Strachan of public accounts vouchers showing that energy board studies of the dam have been extensive. They concluded in November 1971.

Strachan said the government began its Hydro policies for political purposes more than a decade ago and without public discussion.

He said he released the public accounts vouchers to assure that public discussion takes place this time.

The B.C. Energy Board's study of provincial power needs through 1985 is due for release in May or June.

Insurance Loss

EDMONTON (CP) — Uninsured motorists cost Alberta taxpayers $800,000 in the 1970-71 fiscal year, the legislature was told Tuesday.

Highways Minister Clarence Copithorne tabled a report showing a growing deficit in the Unsatisifed Judgment Fund which protects accident victims against uninsured drivers. It showed $2 million was paid out in the claims compared with revenues of $1.2 million.

Come One! Come All!

We can't claim that no one will ever buy another import.

But take a look at what's happened to Pinto.

We built the Ford Pinto to compete with VW, Datsun and Toyota. And when you go up against the established small cars, you've got to be at least as good. Maybe even a little better.

That's why we've followed a policy of continuing improvement with the Pinto since it was introduced. Some of these changes are rather technical. Many of them you might not even see. But all of them were made to try and make sure that Pinto offered you a little more convenience, a little more comfort, and a little more value.

One example: the original Pinto was built to run quietly. And we have continued to try and give Pinto as silent a ride as possible. In the past year we have added even more sound insulation, and we have also re-tuned the exhaust system. Now we can't say that the Pinto will ride as quietly as a Rolls-Royce, but you will find it is one little car that's pretty easy on the ears.

Recently, we've made another change we think you'll appreciate. We've taken some options that a lot of people seem to like with their Pinto, and we've put them together in a group that offers particular value. Priced as a group for only one hundred dollars* you can now order front disc brakes, bodyside molding, whitewalls, wheel covers, and a rear window defroster for your Pinto. Your Pinto will then cost just $2393.* And at $2393, Pinto will still be priced below all three of the leading imports.

Of course, if you decide not to order this value option group, the price for Pinto is then $2293.* The choice is up to you. You see, with Pinto, you don't have to pay for what you don't really want.

But a nice price is only one reason we think our Pinto offers a little more value than the competition. Pinto has rack-and-pinion steering. VW, Datsun, and Toyota do not. The rack-and-pinion system is used by some of the world's great racing cars because it makes for precise, responsive steering. Pinto's rack-and-pinion steering system should allow you to get into tight spots — and out of them — a little easier.

Pinto also has a wider stance than the leading imports. That means that you don't have to wander on a windy day. And it's easier to pass that big truck.

Pinto is also designed to be a good looking little car. You really don't have to look practical to be practical. Pinto's sporty looks don't cost you an extra penny.

All in all, we think there are a lot of good reasons why you should consider Pinto before you buy a small car. They really all add up to the fact that we feel our Pinto offers a little more value than the competition.

If you are determined to look at an import . . . look. But before you make any decisions, take a look at what's happened to Pinto. At your Ford Dealers.

*You are about to read a rather lengthy footnote. Sorry about that—but we are trying to be as clear and accurate as possible. When we refer to the $100.00 group option price the figure is based on manufacturer's suggested retail price. When we refer to Pinto prices of $2393. and $2293., these are based on manufacturer's suggested retail price. They do not include destination and delivery, preparation and conditioning charges, license and provincial tax because these factors vary from region to region. And the comparison of Pinto's price with that of the three leading imports is based on manufacturer's suggested retail prices for the base 1600 cc engine 2-door models of Pinto, Datsun 510, Toyota Corolla Coupe, and the VW Super Beetle.

Give us your facts. We'll put you in the picture.

Merchandising and service businesses make a $50-billion contribution to the Canadian economy every year. They employ more people and produce more revenue than any other industry group.

Now, in the final phase of the 1971 Census of Canada, we're measuring the precise share of that activity generated by each business in these categories. The figures relating to your operation are vital to this measuring process.

If you are a wholesaler, retailer, or supplier of services, you will have received a census questionnaire to complete. Please fill it in and mail it back promptly.

When the Census of Merchandising and Service Businesses has been taken, we will be able to produce a clear picture of national trends in these fields, so you can see exactly where you fit in.

More than half the retail stores in Canada are operated by one or two persons, but they account for only 13.5% of sales. Stores employing more than 21 persons, on the other hand, amount to only 3% of the total, but take in nearly 40% of sales revenue.

Whatever your sales volume may be, the 1971 census data will show you how your performance compares with others of similar size, nationally, provincially, or in your own county or census district. Sales, payrolls and number of employees are among the variables you can measure.

Your individual information will continue to be held in strictest confidence, as required by law. We won't publish figures in cases where there are fewer than three firms in a given category, so no one will be able to identify your specific results.

The Merchandising and Service Division of Statistics Canada is taking this census to produce accurate, up-to-date information to help in your business planning. To do this, it needs your up-to-date results. The breadth and thoroughness of the census is what makes it so important to so many people in business and government alike.

Du Pont

Du Pont of Canada says the company expects a 5 to 6 per cent increase in the volume of Canadian chemical consumption during the current year.

Downward pressures on prices will likely continue, reducing gains from higher volumes and lower costs. As a result, earnings in 1972 are expected to be consistent with 1971.

Pine Point

Pine Point Mines Ltd. reports net earnings for 1971 were $11.95 million ($2.65 a share) compared with $20.78 million ($4.60 in 1970.)

The company said strikes and curtailments at customers' plants, lower lead prices, the import surcharge and continuing strength of the Canadian dollar contributed to a substantial decline in sales revenue.

Sales were $36 million compared with $47.3 million the previous year.

DRG

DRG Ltd. increased earnings nearly 13.5 per cent on a share basis last year, after sales rose 5.4 per cent.

The diversified stationery, packaging and adhesives company had sales of $43.95 million ($41.7 million) and before-tax income of $4.27 million ($3.97 million).

Net earnings were $2 million ($1.22 a share) compared with $1.86 million ($1.08) in 1970 when there were fewer outstanding shares.

Asarco

A combination of strikes, cost-price squeeze and soft economic conditions led to a drastic decline in 1971 earnings of American Smelting and Refining Co. and subsidiaries.

The company had sales of $656.75 million, down from $717.8 million and a net sales of $57.84 million ($80 million).

Net earnings before extraordinary items reached $46 million ($1.72 a share) compared with $88.8 million ($3.16), but the 1970 figure rose to $111.7 million ($3.97) with $22.9 million in extraordinary items.

The company's share of startup losses at 50 per cent-owned Granduc mine amounted to $3.29 million, but the outlook for the first half this year is for an operating profit.

Newman

Newman Steel Warehouse Ltd., of St. Catharines, has acquired 90 per cent of the privately-held shares of A. C. Leslie and Co. Ltd., Montreal-based national supplier of non-ferrous metals.

The Leslie company will continue operations under its own name in all province but Ontario, where Newman will predominate.

Aluminum, brass and copper products now will be available through all Newman outlets as well as steel, which the company began to handle in 1909. Leslie and Co. opened in 1866, predating the steel manufacturing industry in Canada.

Leyland

British Leyland, largest auto group in the U.K., has agreed to sell the Fisher and Ludlow division of British Leyland Motors Canada Ltd. to Lemtex Developments for $2.6 million cash.

The plant adjoins the Leyland complex at Burlington, Ont., and is the biggest manufacturer of forge-welded grating in Canada.

John Barber, British Leyland's director of finance and a deputy managing director of the corporation, said the sale is the latest step in a program of disposals of activities peripheral to the main business as a motor manufacturer, estimated ultimately to bring in some $65 million.

Polymer

Polymer Corp. Ltd., a Crown agency engaged mainly in the manufacture of synthetics, reports 1971 profit of $483,000, lowest since a financial re-organization in 1952.

Chairman E. R. Rowzee reports lower profit resulted from a number of factors, including a lagging economy, stronger competition from imports, the U.S. surcharge on imports late in the year, and strength of the Canadian dollar.

Explosions Rip Munitions Plant

BRIDGEWATER, Mass. (AP) — A series of explosions today ripped through buildings at Pyro Products, a munitions factory about three miles outside of Bridgewater, state police said.

Police ordered roads from Bridgewater to Brockton Hospital cleared of traffic so that the injured could be taken to the hospital.

First West Coast Meeting Of Conference Board Called

By AB KENT
Times Business Editor

Energy and resource development, finance and trade, with some emphasis on Pacific rim traffic are subject of the first west coast meeting of the Conference Board.

The one-day session May 11 in the Bayshore Inn, Vancouver, will be attended by some of the leading industrialists of the west, who will hear External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp speak at a luncheon.

A non-profit independent business and economic research organization, the Conference Board was founded in 1916 with headquarters in New York. A Canadian branch has operated since 1954, based in Ottawa.

Expanding Pacific Trade, by K. T. Strand, Simon Fraser University president.

MacMillan Bloedel chairman J. V. Clyne will be luncheon chairman prior to three afternoon panel discussions to take place simultaneously.

These are resources and transportation, chaired by Noranda president Alfred Powis and including Arctic oil transport, by Cecil Hurd, president of Trans Mountain Oil Pipeline Co.; energy problems in the 70s, by National Energy Board chairman R. D. Howland; resources and ocean transport, by C. W. Robinson, president of Marcona Corp.

Finance and trade, chaired by Kelly H. Gibson, chairman and chief executive officer, Pacific Petroleums Ltd., including International money and finance, by senior vice-president and chief economist J. Howard Craven of Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco; outlook for U.S. trade policy, by Lawrence Fox, U.S. commerce department; Canadian financial markets, by George T. Richardson, president of James Richardson and Sons Ltd.

Policy Issues, chaired by Bell Canada president R. C. Scrivener, including policy analysis, by Imperial Oil Ltd. vice-president R. S. Ritchie; stabilization policies, by Sen. Douglas D. Everett; government-industry relations, by Marcel Belanger, of Belanger, Dallaire, Gagnon and Associates.

Lockheed Recovering From Near 'Knockout'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Lockheed Aircraft Corp., the biggest United States defence contractor, is doing better after taking a near-Knockout financial blow early last year.

The company was near bankruptcy after the collapse of Rolls-Royce Ltd., the British maker of engines to power Lockheed's new TriStar jetliner.

Even before that, Lockheed had been staggered by a $484-million loss on military contracts.

"We think Lockheed turned the corner in 1971 after two very bleak years," board chairman Daniel J. Haughton said in an interview.

"This is not to say that we are now in the clear. We have to get many more orders for our L-1011 Tri-Star transport, deliver them to the airlines on schedule, continue to perform on our other programs, and pay off our debts. But we are going to do all these things."

COSTS HIT HARD

Lockheed earned $15.4 million, or $1.36 a share, on sales of $2.85 billion in 1971. This compared with losses of $86.28 million on sales of $2.54 billion in 1970 and of $32.64 million on sales of $2.07 billion in 1969.

The financial crisis that threatened Lockheed broke Feb. 4, 1971, when Rolls-Royce went into receivership. Rolls-Royce had been overwhelmed by skyrocketing development costs.

A mammoth rescue operation was mounted.

—President Nixon in May, 1971, got Congress to pass legislation guaranteeing $250 million in bank loans to Lockheed.

Rolls-Royce and Lockheed went ahead with the TriStar project.

IMPORTANT PAPERS SEIZED

QUEBEC (CP) — William Tetley, Quebec minister of financial institutions, said Wednesday police seized an "important quantity of documents" in a series of raids in Montreal and Toronto Tuesday.

Police said the investigation involved Buffalo Gas and Oil Ltd.

Search warrants were executed at 26 locations in Montreal and Toronto.

The investigation was requested by Tetley following suspension of trading in shares of the company on the Canadian Stock Exchange and a decision by the Quebec Securities Commission to maintain the suspension.

Police said there were no arrests made Tuesday, but some may be expected.

Exchange 'Ponders' Hearing for Andrews

MONTREAL (CP) — The Montreal Stock Exchange will proceed with the hearing of charges relating to the affairs of Holland, Andrews, Perrier and Co. Ltd. but the Canadian Stock Exchange is pondering the matter.

The unusual situation arose after lawyers for the two exchanges decided the Canadian Stock Exchange no longer has any jurisdiction over Harry Andrews, vice-president of the brokerage firm.

The charges were specifically laid against Andrews as occupier of a seat on the Canadian Exchange and against Edgar Holland, president of the firm, as holder of a seat on the Montreal exchange.

The two exchanges announced Wednesday night their lawyers have advised them there no longer is an injunction forbidding the exchanges from going ahead with the closed hearing.

CAUSED DELAY

The hearing before officers of the exchanges was to have taken place Feb. 15, 1972, but was prevented by an interim injunction obtained that day on behalf of the brokerage firm.

The Montreal Stock Exchange announced a new date will be set shortly to proceed with the hearings against Holland.

The situation involving Andrews is more complicated.

Because of certain provisions of the exchange's constitution, Andrews' membership expired Feb. 10, 1972, the date of the annual general meeting.

"The exchange consequently no longer has any jurisdiction over Andrews," the lawyers advised.

The exchange now is considering what other action should be taken concerning issues raised in the charge against Andrews.

The charges, which have not been specified publicly, resulted from the launching of an investigation of the Quebec securities industry by the two exchanges and the Quebec government.

Japan Tour City Bound

VANCOUVER (CP) — A former prime minister of Japan will arrive here Monday with 133 leaders of government, industry, travel trades, the arts and the press for the Japan Air Lines, inaugural Tokyo-Mexico City flight.

The former prime minister is Nobusuke Kishi, elder brother of the present prime minister, Eisaku Sato.

Japan Air Lines will make three flights a week to Mexico City through Vancouver starting Monday. This will boost flights to Vancouver from Tokyo by one aweek.

The airline has no privilege to pick up passengers here for Mexico City. The route is served by CP Air and Western Airlines. CP Air also competes with JAL on the Tokyo run.

The group will tour Victoria Tuesday and will leave for Mexico City Wednesday.

VSE Suspends Space Modules

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver Stock Exchange and the British Columbia Securities Commission have suspended trading in shares of International Space Modules Ltd.

The suspension was ordered because of liabilities incurred by its subsidiary, Cedarama Homes, in the United States. Space Modules Ltd. manufactures and sells prefabricated buildings.

Ford Must Sell Autolite

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The United States Supreme Court affirmed Wednesday a lower court decision forcing Ford Motor Co. to give up the Autolite name and a spark plug plant it bought from the Electric Autolite Co. in 1961.

The U.S. district court decision, upheld by the Supreme Court, also included a 10-year ban on Ford becoming a maker of spark plugs in its own right and required, that for five years, Ford buy half its annual spark plug requirements from whomever acquires the Autolite name and manufacturing facilities.

The Supreme Court's majority decision said that as a result of the acquisition of Autolite, the structure of the spark plug industry changed drastically.

As a result, the remaining independent manufacturers, who had previously competed to sell to Ford — their largest customer — were suddenly denied this market.

Sand Obstacles Overcome

FORT McMURRAY, Alta. (CP) — There is an enormous amount of oil in the Athabasca sands of northeastern Alberta, and enormous obstacles to getting it out.

Great Canadian Oil Sands Ltd. has been struggling for five years to separate 45,000 barrels a day from the sand and only now is within sight of its target. Meanwhile, the company has lost more than $60 million.

The Great Canadian extraction plant on the Athabasca River is the only large-scale commercial operation on the sands, which cover about 10,000 square miles and contain an estimated 626 billion barrels of oil.

Expected eventually to yield 267-billion barrels of synthetic crude, the Athabasca deposit is the largest known in the world.

Syncrude Canada Ltd. is going ahead with plans for a $500-million plant due to start producing 125,000 barrels a day in mid-1976.

Most of Great Canadian's problems have been mechanical, although a strike by some of the plant's 1,300 employees in 1969 didn't help.

Equipment failures have periodically closed the plant, a pioneering effort which is based on a new and still-experimental extraction process, and forced expensive modifications.

The Alberta government came to Great Canadian's assistance in 1970, reducing royalties on production from the plant by 50 per cent.

Great Canadian, controlled by Sun Oil Co. of Pennsylvania, spent $235 million on the plant, with $45 million going for interest and start-up costs. Last year, the company shelled out $13 million for additional equipment.

"It's been a gradual learning process," said Len Bland, the company's public relations director.

"But we're finally looking at the possibility this year of at least producing the 45,000 barrels a day that we are licensed to produce.

"The experience and know-how gained over the last few years is beginning to add up to a pretty logical operation."

One problem has been winter breakdowns of two huge German-built bucket-wheel excavators, each of which is supposed to gobble up 100,000 tons of sand a day.

It takes two tons of sand to produce one barrel of oil.

Mr. Bland said there have been no complete shutdowns recently and the plant has been producing about 30,000 barrels a day.

SAND CARRIED ON BELTS

Sand mined by the bucket-wheels is carried to the plant on conveyor belts, of which there now are six miles.

The extraction plant uses a hot water process developed by the late Dr. Karl A. Clark and associates at the Alberta research council.

The sand is tumbled in hot water and steam, producing a pulp that goes into four large separation cells. The oil floats to the top in the form of froth and is skimmed off. The sand falls to the bottom and is removed to a disposal area.

Further processing results in synthetic crude, a highly-refined oil that goes 266 miles by pipeline to Edmonton and then to markets in mid-western Canada and the United States.

The plant also produces gas, kerosene, naptha, oil, butanes, pentanes, coke and sulphur.

Syncrude will separate the oil from the sand by a somewhat similar process but will use huge draglines to strip away overburden and mine the sands. The draglines will feed a continuously-moving automatic train which will haul the sands to the plant.

4,500 Indians Get LIP Jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — More than 4,500 Indians have received winter employment under the government's local initiatives program, the Indian affairs department said today in a press release.

Of 277 projects approved to date, 205 have been proposed by band councils and the remainder by private groups of Indians.

Total cost of the projects is $7.5 million.

Advertising Can Create Instant Markets for Anything

By DAVID EGGLESTON
director, marketing services
Kates, Peat, Marwick & Co.

There has been a tremendous increase in the complexity of marketing problems over the past two decades. At one time it was sufficient merely to have an outstanding product to have a guaranteed market.

This no longer holds true. Adept use of advertising can create instant markets for products that fit the artificially created requirements of an impulse-buying public while truly superior products linger on the shelves.

The disturbing fact is that frequently there is failure to recognize that the ground rules that applied to successful marketing in the 1950s and early 1960s will not necessarily apply in the 1970s.

Management Memo

Old remedies no longer cure the new ills brought about by rapid, technological change and increasing consumer affluence, awareness and fickleness. Increasingly sophisticated marketing techniques must be used to solve the problems of the 1970s to enable companies to optimize their profitability.

Marketing in the next decade will require that the most successful and profitable companies have a clear competitive advantage in the marketplace. This could be an advantage of scale of operations although a preferred position could also be obtained by unique technology, access to raw materials, geographic location, superior advertising or several other factors.

Generally, end products prove more profitable than raw materials. For example, drugs are more profitable than the chemicals from which they are manufactured and soft drinks are more profitable than sugar beet. Thus there will likely be a trend to companies integrating forward into end-products.

GUIDELINES

The most important prerequisite for effective marketing is for management to know its markets and be prepared to react to changes. An intimate knowledge of the marketplace and its customers will ensure that products and sales policies can be constantly adjusted to fit changing consumer demand.

It also enables marketing management to react swiftly to changes in the company's competitive position that may require radical alterations to be made in the marketing mix.

This kind of effective market information system is best developed by close co-operation between the field sales force and the corporate or divisional market research staff.

Companies must realistically assess the strengths and weaknesses of their product line, and strive to rectify any problem areas. Although in the past many companies have been slow to phase out weak products or groups of products, the declining profit margins of recent years have caused a more ruthless attitude to be taken.

It is now generally accepted that products incompatible with other corporate activities or which fail to meet profitability objectives should either be removed from the marketplace or, if possible, sold to other companies.

Frequently, profitability can be markedly improved by taking fullest advantage of potential market segmentation. Designing products for a particular age group, sex, ethnic group or geographic area is a prime method of increasing their specificity and increasing your return.

However, market segmentation should not be taken to such extremes that the increased return on sales is offset by distribution problems caused by fragmentation of the product line.

DIVERSIFICATION

Old-line companies with long-established product lines commonly have the greatest difficulty in improving their profit position. The industries they are serving are usually mature, growing relatively slowly and offer few opportunities for distinctive new products to be introduced.

In such instances, companies must add either new product lines or diversify into new industries. Either route can prove difficult.

Over the past several years many companies have suffered severe cases of corporate indigestion after adding new products or new companies to their organization.

The changes in marketing strategy and philosophy required by old-line companies after such additions have proven intolerable to their stereotyped management.

In recent years, a favorite diversification for industrially based companies has been by acquisition into such diverse consumer products as cosmetics, plastics, housewares and wall decorations.

Generally, consumer goods are more profitable than industrial items and these moves are therefore logical means of improving corporate profitability.

However, such diversifications only succeed if the parent company recognizes that consumer marketing and industrial marketing are poles apart, use completely different techniques and have a completely different scope of operations.

For example, while industrial companies rarely spend more than one or two per cent of every sales dollar on direct advertising, more than 30 per cent of every sales dollar is frequently spent on advertising a consumer product such as a cosmetic item.

Thus, it is normally found most effective to allow a new addition to function as a separate entity rather than fully integrating it with the parent company. In this way, the consumer arm can more easily retain its individual marketing philosophy, being staffed by personnel skilled in consumer rather than industrial marketing.

The marketing division is a company's interface between the consumer and its production arm. In order to maximize its profitability, the company must ensure that this marketing link functions effectively in relating consumer demand with productive capability.

Streams of Thought

Provincial secondary school children are invited to participate in a stream clearing and essay writing contest between now and the end of June, Harold Merilees (SC — Vancouver-Burrard) announced Wednesday.

Merilees told the legislature the contest is to point out the importance of the estimated 1,600 spawning streams which feed the Fraser, Skeena and Nass rivers.

Projects and essays must be completed by June 30 and filed with John Buckley, executive assistant to Recreation and Conservation Minister Ken Kiernan, Legislative Buildings, Victoria.

Merilees said contestants must clean up at least 1,000 feet of a creek or riverbank by removing such obstacles as tin cans, bottles, scrap metal and automobile tires.

Debris must be disposed of at a recognized garbage dump or other acceptable deposit area.

Certification of clearing must be made by the contestant's teacher, adult member of an organized fish and game club, an adult boy scout or girl scout leader, an officer of SPEC or the Sierra Club or other qualified adult.

RIVER RATS

Essays must not exceed 500 words. They should contain a statement of what the contestant believes should be done to conserve and maintain the salmon and steelhead population.

All contestants will qualify as members of a provincial youth organization called British Columbia River Rats, Merilees said.

Top 100 winners will receive a badge indentifying him as a river rat. They will also contain the motto "contra nando incrementum" which means "prosperity by swimming against the stream."

In addition to their essay, contestants must submit written history of the cleaning project.

This must describe the nature of the stream, its location, what types of fish use it and the importance the student attaches to the stream's value as a source of commercial and recreational fish.

Any further questions should be addressed to Buckley. Contest judges are Judge Roderick Haig - Brown, Victoria Fish and Game Association president Howard English and Vancouver Sun outdoor editor Lee Straight.

Hydro 'Never Seriously' Considered Pipeline

By BRUCE YEMEN
Times Staff

Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan said Wednesday the directors of B.C. Hydro never seriously considered building a natural gas pipeline to Vancouver Island prior to the government's call for proposals last year.

Kiernan was replying to charges that he was guilty of "malfeasance" as a director of Hydro for failing to ensure the crown corporation received a copy of specifications for the project.

When asked why Hydro expressed a desire to build the pipeline before the National Energy Board in 1969, Kiernan simply repeated his denial that Hydro directors had ever considered such an idea.

Alex. Macdonald (NDP—Vancouver East) said it was "malfeasance" on Kiernan's part to have allowed the government to announce specifications on the pipeline project last April and not have given these to Hydro.

He also charged the specifications "fitted like a glove" the details of an engineering study done two years before for Westcoast Transmission Ltd. by the Bechtel Corporation of San Francisco.

He said the government deliberately arranged financial requirements for the job to exclude Hydro. But the government later amended its terms of reference to allow Hydro to submit a proposal.

Macdonald asked why the government would make an announcement of required specifications for the pipeline which fitted exactly those done by Bechtel.

Westcoast was not permitted to enter the project in the beginning, but Dan Ekman, former Westcoast employee and executive assistant to Premier Bennett formed Malaspina Gas Pipeline Ltd. and used Bechtel's engineering.

Macdonald noted that none of Bechtel's Canadian employees worked on the engineering study for Westcoast and the Canadian office has since closed.

"It's malfeasance in office for you as a director of Hydro to allow the government to come out with the specifications it did and not even seeing that Hydro got a copy of the specifications.

Committee chairman Herb Bruch ruled Macdonald out of order at this point, and the two had a heated exchange for several minutes, with the NDP member demanding to know when he could question Kiernan as a Hydro director.

"The way the government is carrying on, the pipeline will never be built," Macdonald said.

He noted that Island Transmission Co. of Nanaimo already has withdrawn from the competition for the right to build the line because it knows it doesn't have a fair chance to get the rights.

Kiernan rose angrily in his place and said Bruch shouldn't "stifle" his right to answer Macdonald after having allowed the NDP member to go on as long as he did.

Discussion of the pipeline issue was cut short by supply committee chairman Herb Bruch who said Kiernan's responsibility as a Hydro director wasn't debatable under his departmental estimates.

FLATFOOTS START ON RIGHT FOOT

City police face the unusual task today of tracking down a burglar wearing two right shoes.

Owner Nellie Davis surprised a man who looked about 17 years of age in her shoe store at 216 Menzies early Wednesday morning.

Good Friday Performance

The Passion according to St. John by George Frederic Handel is the featured Easter music at Belmont United Church on Good Friday.

It will be performed by the choir with guest soloists under the direction of the choirmaster, Bert Storer, at 11 a.m.

Provincial Loan Fund Urged To Promote Food Industry

The legislature's agriculture committee Wednesday called on the provincial government to create a $25 million loan fund to encourage development of B.C. food producing industries.

The committee has been studying the impact of imported foods on the provincial market and how to strengthen the position of local producers in the face of this competition.

The loan recommendation would authorize Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford to use the money to "encourage substantial development of British Columbia's food and agricultural industry among British Columbia's primary producers."

Other major recommendations include a call for legislation creating a permit system for imports of specified food and fee products.

The committee also asked the province to pressure the federal government for an "automatic surtax" based on an average price formula to replace existing methods of controlling low-priced food imports.

It also proposed the government increase sales promotional efforts of B.C. food products and called for the department of industrial development to work with the agriculture department in studying differences in domestic and export freight between various points in B.C. and Canada.

Another recommendation asked the government to request that the federal food and drug directorate make certain that no imported food products in B.C. contain residues of pesticides which are banned here.

The report said that the committee received information from the egg marketing board and egg producers indicating "severe conflict" between the groups.

It noted that Agriculture Minister Shelford has told the board to take immediate action to correct its internal problems.

Union Beef Raised

Liberal leader Pat McGeer Wednesday presented a petition in the legislature on behalf of members of a Canadian union complaining they were denied certification at a Vancouver company without a hearing.

McGeer said the rarely-used procedure, if allowed to be used again, will provide the public with a new access to the Crown.

The petition, by members of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada, was in protest against granting of certification by the Labor Relations Board to a three-party labor consortium at National Paper Box Company Ltd., Vancouver.

Labor Minister James Chabot later indicated the matter would be studied. The union seeks a vote on the certification issue.

JURY ADVISES DOCTOR PROBE

OTTAWA (CP) — A coroner's jury said Wednesday night that the College of Physicians and Surgeons and the Ontario Hospital Medical Services Commission should hold their own investigations in the death of Denise Seguin.

Mrs. Seguin, 32, of Hull, Que., died last December, about seven months after she underwent an intestinal bypass operation to reduce her weight.

After deliberating eight hours, the jury said Mrs. Seguin's death resulted from "numerous complications which developed as a result of the original bypass surgery on May 26, 1971."

Cause of death was bronchial pneumonia due to liver and kidney failure, said the jury.

It said Dr. Jean-Paul Drouin committed "a gross technical error . . . as the result of an improper placement of clamps" in the first operation.

FIVE DIED

The inquest was called after five Ottawa-area persons died following bypass operations designed to reduce weight in obese persons.

Dr. Drouin, who performed 39 such operations successfully, made the same error in his next three patients connecting wrong sections of the small intestine.

The doctor told the jury last week the errors were not the direct cause of death.

The jury was critical of some practices at Ottawa's Montfort Hospital where the operations were performed.

It found fault with incomplete notes kept by the nurses and said the hospital should spell out what operations each surgeon is allowed to perform.

It said there was no excuse for hospitals misplacing reports and charts such as had occurred at Montfort in the Seguin case.

FILES INCOMPLETE

Heart and liver tests ordered by Dr. Drouin on Mrs. Seguin were not found in her file.

The jury also said Mrs. Seguin was allowed to leave the hospital too soon after her operation.

Evidence was that she insisted on leaving five days after her first operation for personal reasons. In this way she may have contributed to her own death, said the jury.

In such circumstances, the patient should sign her own release on a form which lists the objections of the doctor to the discharge, said the jury.

The jury said "it is obvious that there was a lack of team effort in the assessment of the patient's suitability for the bypass operation."

TEAMS SET UP

There was evidence that two other Ottawa hospitals and the Montreal Royal Victoria had teams especially set up for obesity operations.

"In such a new field of surgery such as the intestinal bypass" teams should be set up, the jury said.

They should establish tests to determine whether a patient should have the bypass and keep a close check on patients afterwards.

It was obvious that personal records of doctors and their files on patients "should include more extensive information than we have seen in this case."

Dr. H. B. Cotnam, Ontario supervising coroner, told the jury he agreed with all it had recommended.

He said the three men and two women on the jury had disproved criticism that lay people could not sit on juries considering medical matters.

"I shudder to think what five doctors sitting in your place might have done," said Dr. Cotnam.

Jittery MPs Take Off for Uneasy Rest

OTTAWA (CP) — Members of Parliament are off on a two-week holiday, but few are likely to relax. Amid speculation that a general election is imminent, most headed home to patch up political fences in their constituencies.

Jumpiness about election rumors has been a feature of the fourth session of the 28th Parliament since it opened Feb. 17.

Notable in the opening couple of weeks was the intensity of opposition efforts to spotlight an issue that would embarrass the Liberal government in the eyes of the voters.

By Wednesday—30 sitting days after the session opened — election talk was still prominent, although some of the earlier edginess was missing.

The more relaxed mood Wednesday may have been generated by the pre-holiday atmosphere, perhaps by the first firm indication of spring after the long Ottawa winter.

SPRING BRINGS PICKET

Apart from a balmy break in the weather, other evidence of approaching spring was present on Parliament Hill: Workers dismantled the wooden frost guards from the front steps of Parliament and a lone picket paraded with an unusual sign. The dilemma: IMF convertibility without a comparative value."

The crusader for reform of the international money-exchange system was ignored as MPs went into the Commons to hear, among other things, another taunting reference by Prime Minister Trudeau to the burning question about the election date.

Will the government be presenting a tax-and-spending budget, inquired Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield for the umpteenth time—during daily question period?

Well, replied the prime minister, it depends on plans for the future of the session, but there would be a budget if the Commons is still sitting in June.

SUBJECTS VARY

Otherwise, the Commons spent the finill four hours before recessing until April 13 discussing policy on drugs and dairy products, debating proposed changes in the Canada Labor Code, and witnessing the ceremonial granting of royal assent to the total legislative output since mid-February—four government bills and six routine measures.

Health Minister John Munro announced rejection of a recommendation by the drugs commission of Dean Gerald LeDain that heroin be used in the treatment of addicts.

Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson announced higher subsidies for skim milk powder to encourage production.

Labor Minister Martin O'Connell announced a desire for a more co-operative spirit between labor and management to help make an amended Canada Labor Code work smoothly.

His amending bill, subject of furious controversy in its original form last year, attracted qualified approval from opposition MPs in its first test in Commons debate.

CONTRAST EVIDENT

Then, in daily question periods and during debate, the opposition was largely preoccupied in probing for weaknesses in government programs, policies and propriety.

In what sounded like a funup to an election campaign, opposition MPs were pushing persistently but switching targets frequently in an apparent search for hot issues.

There was the charge of muddle and delay in payment of unemployment insurance benefits, helped along for a while by a protest demonstration of the jobless Feb. 25 in Bathurst, N.B.

Then came the Yves Geoffroy saga, when some Conservative MPs probed for political scandal in the Christmas-Eve disappearance of the convicted wife killer and his new bride—until they were run to ground in Spain and brought back to Montreal.

There were scatter-gun assaults on the local initiatives program, based on charges that some groups receiving the winter-works grants were socially suspect as satanists, Marxists or inhabitants of Toronto's Rochdale College.

CHARGES STILL HANG

There was a flurry—still unresolved—over accusations of tampering with the telephone and mail of some MPs.

Among one-week wonders of the question period were complaints that RCMP signs emphasized the word police instead of RCMP; revelation that Information Canada itself was uncertain about its purpose, and reports that Opportunities for Youth last summer and efforts to enlist popular participation in government had been less than unqualified successes.

Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson's persistent complaints about a lack of tools to do his job as critic of government spending surfaced again. There were questions about a former Liberal party functionary being sent on a government research job to Germany and suggestions of a conflict of interest in a post office purchase of equipment from ITT Canada Ltd.

Most of those once-hot controversies subsided under denials, explanations, debate or reference to committees for further examination.

Persistent and unresolved, however, were continuing arguments about the state of the economy—specifically unemployment, although the rate dipped in February, and signs of renewed price inflation.

In a similar category bound to be featured again after the holiday, and in an election campaign when it comes—are such continuing points of dispute as the effectiveness of the regional expansion program under Jean Marchand, bilingualism, relations with the provinces and Canada's constitutional future in general.

Tuition Hike Rapped

By The Canadian Press

Educationists across Ontario have expressed fear that the increased tuition fees announced in Tuesday night's provincial budget might hamper students from low and middle income groups.

The fees are being increased by $100 and student teachers and nurses are going to be charged tuition fees for the first time.

Dr. Jan Steiner, an associate dean at the University of Toronto medical school, warned that medical schools "will again become the preserve only for the privileged."

President Davidson Dunton of Carleton University, Ottawa, labelled the fee increase "a reactionary move." He said it would raise substantial financial barriers to higher education and said "the effect will be felt particularly by students from middle- and lower-income brackets and all the many students who are living financially independent of their parents."

Dr. Roger Guidon, rector of the University of Ottawa, said the increase "threatens discrimination against the very students who need aid most."

At Carleton next year, Tuition fees, including the $100 increase, will be $641.50 for arts and science and $701.50 for engineering.

MAY AID STUDENT NURSES

The Registered Nurses Association of Ontario intends to consider providing financial assistance to students already in nursing schools.

Laura Barr, the association's executive director, said the group accepts the new tuition fee as "being realistic" but said they might hurt students already in nursing education programs.

Patient Dies

LIMA (Reuter) — A 27-yearold mother who was Peru's first heart transplant patient died Thursday after living for 34 hours with her new heart.

4,079 miles and three lampbulbs later...

When we set out from Halifax on a Firenza test drive, Hugh McCall of Canada Track & Traffic magazine was glad to come along. As it turned out, Hugh came along for more than just the ride. Nine days, 4,079 miles and 75 driving hours later, we pulled into Vancouver. We had tested the test drivers as much as the cars. Hugh had driven through every kind of weather and over every kind of road you can meet across Canada in February. Firenza handled like a dream, rode like you wouldn't believe. And even with some unforgettably rough stretches in New Brunswick, blinding snow "white outs" on the Prairies and severe headwinds in Rogers' Pass, there was "nothing to it". And 25-below presented no problem at all. Why the trip? Firenza is still a new car. It came out just a year ago. And although it's equipped specifically for Canadian driving conditions, we wanted to know first hand that it really is tough enough to take on anything. Firenza had passed very stringent cold weather testing at Kapuskasing in Northern Ontario. But, a trans-continental drive racking up as much as 578 miles a day? That is something else. So we asked a Firenza dealer in Halifax to prepare four new '72s just as if we were customers picking them up at delivery. We had a 2-door sedan, a 4-door SL, a station wagon and a sport coupe. The 2-door Firenza had a 4-on-the-floor standard shift, the others had the optional 3-speed automatic. All were equipped with four-season steel-belted radial tires (not yet available on all Firenzas). And we added a few accessories such as fog lamps and rear window defoggers anybody can order from any Firenza dealer. This was when our team of GM engineers was joined by Hugh McCall as unbiased observer and volunteer test driver. Then, we were off. No special servicing was laid on. No block heaters were used in the mornings. It was a "fun drive" from coast to coast. Right on schedule all the way. Some of Hugh's impressions: "... the way it held highway speeds even against strong headwinds on mountain curves, was impressive ...", "... I'm keen on the inertial-reel lap and seat belts. Comfortable, secure and neat ...", "... love those radials ..." That which we most wanted to prove out—Firenza's durability, toughness, riding comfort, the overall quality—all checked out with top marks. But nobody's perfect. Two parking lamps burned out. An interior dome lamp did the same. And a fog lamp was cracked by a flying stone (you can't fault the car on that one). But we got what we wanted. We simply wanted to reassure ourselves so we could reassure you that Firenza is one little import that can take on the whole continent in the depths of winter. It can. It did. They did: four models "off the shelf". General Motors' lowest-priced car has earned its GM Mark of Excellence for toughness and dependability. And for being good to its drivers and passengers. Ask Hugh McCall.

KIERNAN

Fight for More Money—MLAs Tell Kiernan

Opposition MLAs Wednesday urged Recreation and Conservation Minister Ken Kiernan to fight for more money for his department.

The $10.7 million in estimates for the departments contain "embarrassingly" inadequate votes for fish and wildlife and provincial parks, Kiernan was told.

The estimates and other $4 million for the travel industry department were approved after seven hours of wide-ranging debate.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett said the Socred government has increased the number of provincial parks in B.C. from 62 in 1952 to 287 but in the same period B.C.'s total park acreage has declined by 885,000 acres.

"If you keep this up we will have postage stamp parks coming out of our ears," Barrett said.

Kiernan said that with Wells Gray Park and Tweedsmuir Park both in the same general area, there may still be too much parkland in one area and not enough in others.

Kiernan said he didn't agree with Leo Nimsick (NDP—Kootenay) that elaborate feeding programs for wildlife are necessary to keep up stocks for hunters.

On the other hand, he said, he doesn't agree with Bert Price (SC—Vancouver-Burrard) who wants an end to recreational game hunting. Effective management of game would be impossible without hunting, Kiernan said.

Kiernan said Nimsick is wrong to image a "foul plot against wildlife" — it's just a case of population movement into rangeland areas.

He said special feeding programs for wildlife in the U.S. could result in game so plentiful it can be harvested by people walking up to it with a hammer and hitting it on the head.

Garde Gardom (L—Vancouver-Point Grey) proposed registration of all firearms and a program to license dealers. He called for regulations restricting the sale of guns, rifles and shotguns to persons with emotional instabilities or histories of violent crimes.

Kiernan said the federal Criminal Code does a good job of controlling possession of handguns and he pointed out that B.C. will introduce a program of licensing owners of firearms beginning April 1.

He said registering firearms doesn't guarantee they won't be used improperly. It's more important to register the owner of a gun, Kiernan said.

He said it would be almost impossible for firearm retailers to get proper answers from a prospective buyer about his past.

Dennis Cocke (NDP—New Westminster) objected to the "offensive" display of hunting rifles in the back windows of pickup trucks. There's no reason for these displays on city streets, Cocke said.

Kiernan defended the government's proposal to swap 8,000 acres of the Nitinat Triangle to forest companies for another 8,000 in the Pacific Rim National Park near Long Beach.

He told Dave Brousson (L—North Vancouver-Capilano) that such a deal would get an important part of the triangle into the park while narrowing the area of further disagreement to "one lake and 2,000 acres" of the triangle.

Brousson had spoken against the deal because he said it wasn't good enough to include only a part of the triangle in the park.

Kiernan told George Mussallem (SC—Dewdney) that his department is studying a plan to turn 180 miles of Fraser Valley dikes into a park. Mussallem said it would be "the greatest parkland B.C. could have."

Kiernan also said his department is awaiting clarification of the situation at Brent Mountain near Summerland where a ski development has been given the go-ahead by the government.

He said the possibility of establishing a Class "A park there would be considered providing serious conflicts of land use could be avoided.

Frank Ney (SC—Nanaimo) suggested Branch Point at Nanoose Bay become an emergency oil spill depot. Ney said the spot is strategically located to monitor spills on the east side of Vancouver Island.

He also asked for a government program to clean up litter on provincial roadsides.

Once Mine Started No Reason to Stop

By PETER McNELLY
Times Staff

The provincial government had no reason to prevent further staking of claims in Strathcona Park after Western Mines Ltd. showed there was enough ore to start mining, Recreation and Conservation Minister Ken Kiernan said Wednesday.

The issue of mining in this Vancouver Island park and associated pollution of Buttle Lake from dumping of copper tailings into it has been debated in the legislature since the mid-1960s.

Robert Strachan (NDP—Cowichan-Malahat) challenged Kiernan to outline a new policy for mining in parks after he read to the house figures showing copper deposits in Buttle lake fish have increased four times since the Western Mines began operations in 1967.

Kiernan said there was some doubt whether 50-year-old Crown-granted mineral claims in the park had enough ore for a mine, but after operations began it was sensible to permit further staking.

WHY?

Strachan had demanded to know why the government has given out "dozens and dozens" of new claims in the park.

"If you have the basis for operating, is there any point of withholding the claims from them on the same basis," Kiernan said.

He explained that Western Mines might not have had an economically practical operation under the scope of its original grants.

But then he said Western Mines isn't mining on any of the new claims and may never do if they don't show sufficient ore.

It was learned last December that claims in the park had been aproved as recently as last October and that the recreation department had permitted a special area to be created around the Western Mines site in which further claims may be staked without department approval.

NEW CLAIMS

Strachan said giving out additional mining claims and opening the way for even more claims in the future "ties the hands" of the government for another 21 years in Strathcona Park.

In Strathcona Park today, 17,000 acres of its total of 561,000 acres are not designated for park use.

Many of the new claims are held by Cream Silver Mines Ltd. which has a working arrangement with Western Mines to extract any ore that may exist.

Strachan said the mean count of copper deposits in Buttle Lake fish was 48 parts per million in 1966. This increased to 194 parts per million in 1970 for fish near the dumping area and 195 parts per million for fish in the other side of the lake.

IT'S POLLUTION

He quoted a statement Kiernan made in 1966 saying dumping of tailings would be permitted but it wouldn't cause any pollution.

"It is pollution," Strachan said.

He said the question is not whether the pollution is dangerous to the fish or harmful to humans who eat them.

"There's a change being made in the living conditions of the fish in that lake and it's almost certain to have a detrimental effect in the long run," Strachan said.

Kiernan said Strachan should know that all mining is being done on crown granted mineral claims which were first issued in 1918. His position throughout the years on the issue has been that it would have been too expensive for the government to have bought out the grants.

Leo Nimsick asked whether Kiernan intended to stop further dumping, and the minister re-affirmed previous statements that dumping would not continue after the original ore body is worked out.

Company estimates indicate that the original ore body will be gone before the end of 1973. Mining began in 1957.

Good Sense Expected

Recreation Minister Ken Kiernan was criticized in the legislature Wednesday about a book written By Ronald Worley, his deputy minister of travel industry.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett asked the minister for his policy about political activity by his employees.

"I expect them to use reasonably good sense about it," Kiernan said.

"Are you unaware your deputy wrote a political book?" Barrett asked, referring to Worley's book, The Wonderful World of W. A. C. Bennett.

"Is it good practice for your deputy, a senior civil servant, to write a book such as he wrote?" Barrett asked.

"I don't have any particular opinion on the matter one way or the other," Kiernan replied.

"That's where the problem lies. You don't see what's objectionable about it," Barrett said, citing British parliamentary tradition as guidance on the matter.

He said Kiernan's reply was "more than flippant — it was somewhat ignorant" of parliamentary tradition.

Barrett suggested Kiernan would feel differently about the issue if Worley had written a complimentary book about the opposition leader instead of about the premier.

"It's wrong, Mr. Minister, it's wrong," Barrett said, suggesting Worley should have at least taken a leave of absence to write the book.

Crunchy Style

The crush is on at Hartland Road garbage dump where this new $50,000 compacting tractor has started working for Victoria Disposal Co. The first of its kind in Western Canada, the machine powered by a Cummins Diesel V8 motor weighs 32,220 pounds and is more than 22 feet long. Foreman Louis Nagy expects the machine's toothed wheels will squeeze about 30 per cent more garbage into the dump. The tractor was specially designed for garbage dumps. (Irving Strickland photo.)

Region to Try For Tax Share In Bus Proposal

The Capital Regional District Board proposed Wednesday that local government take over transit buses from B.C. Hydro.

It was the first move by local government towards a solution to an issue frequently raised over the years.

The region's offer, which calls for a share of gasoline taxes for operating revenue, drew a "no comment" from B.C. Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum.

NO ACTION

A resolution identical to the one passed by the regional board was to have been issued by the Greater Vancouver regional board earlier Wednesday but the body did not take action on it.

In Burnaby, Wednesday, Vancouver regional directors were told the B.C. government has made an offer of its own about taking over the B.C. Hydro buses but details were not disclosed.

In February, Premier Bennett proposed sharing half the losses of the bus system in Victoria and Vancouver, with the regional districts purchasing the systems at a nominal fee.

$2M ANNUALLY

Access to half the gasoline tax revenue is the key to takeover of the bus system. The Capital region estimates this would bring in more than $2 million a year.

The offer suggests B.C. Hydro sell its bus system for a nominal $1, and the government pay an operating grant in the first year of $300,000 to the Capital, and $1.2 million to Vancouver.

North Saanich Mayor Trevor Davis was the only director to oppose the offer. He unsuccessfully introduced a motion that would allow individual municipalities to opt out of paying their share of operating costs.

CRISIS

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen said Vancouver is at a "crisis point" in accommodating car traffic.

He said today he is looking forward to an "intelligent answer to an intelligent proposal" but has received no reaction from the provincial government.

Regional board chairman Hugh Curtis said the metropolitan areas have been "hampered by deteriorating service and transit is an integral part of community development."

He said the resolution envisages a takeover of Hydro bus systems but with extensions into suburban areas. But Pollen said the system would not preclude private bus systems.

Some Vancouver board members commented that the provincial government would never accept the resolution, therefore it was useless to present it.

The Vancouver board's transportation committee chairman, Allan Kelly, told his directors the B.C. government's new offer has the blessing of the premier. That offer apparently does not apply to the B.C. Hydro bus system in the Capital region.

STUDENT JAILED FOR SELLING HASHISH

A Grade 12 student who peddled hashish to classmates from his school locker was sentenced in provincial court today to four months definite and eight months indeterminate in prison.

Nigel Keith Slater, 19, of 400 Culduthel, told police he bought five ounces of hashish for $250 and was selling it for $4 or $5 a gram. His locker at Mount View Senior Secondary contained 25 grams of the substance, individually wrapped in foil, when it was searched March 10.

Judge William Ostler rejected a request by Slater that he be allowed to complete his school year.

"No doubt the persons at the top are the truly hard criminals and should be caught if possible and punished, but those persons cannot function unless they have people like you who are willing . . . for the sake of a few filthy dollars to corrupt your schoolmates," Ostler told the accused.

The judge noted that Slater had told an investigating probation officer he "had plans of going into business on a larger scale."

In hot water with the Greater Victoria School Board over the long-simmering View Royal Elementary sewage problem, senior medical officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread has decided the issue is not within his jurisdiction.

Laurel Benham, senior health inspector for the Greater Victoria metro health board, said today Whitbread this week sent a letter to the school board, informing it that its decision to build a secondary sewage treatment plant at the school will have to be approved by the Provincial Pollution Control Board.

Earlier, Whitbread had stated he would not approve such a system following his ultimatum about school closure in six weeks if the school ground sewage seepage was unresolved.

The only way sewage issue could be resolved, Whitbread indicated, would be by the installation of a holding tank.

Trustee Peter Bunn, chairman of construction and maintenance for the school board, declined comment today because he had not yet received Whitbread's letter.

But Bunn, who said he had enough of Whitbread's nonsense, did reveal that the board started this week to temporarily clean up the sewage at the school by pumping it out of the septic tank into the trucks.

He said it is the intention of the board to solve permanently the problem before the next term begins to get the school "up to snuff" with a long delayed expansion program.

"Messed Around Long Enough'

Bunn said Whitbread is using View Royal Elementary as a political lever "to clobber the people of View Royal into a situation they don't want" — which is the installation of sewers throughout the area.

He said Whitbread interprets the Public Health Act "in different ways for different situations."

"Whitbread has messed around long enough," Bunn said. But "nobody wants to accept responsibility for him."

Bunn said if he gets his way the board will go straight to Health Minister Ralph Loffmark to get the school issue resolved.

"If you talk to the office boy long enough, you want to see the manager."

Benham said the secondary treatment plant wanted by the school board would only improve the sewage situation "a little" and would not stop sewage from coming out into ditches on the school grounds and thus into Portage Inlet.

He said a similar system planned by Saanich municipality was turned down by the Pollution Control Board.

If the school board persists in planning a treatment plant, Behma said the health board would appear in opposition at the public hearing that wuld be called by the Pollution Control Board.

Logging Inquiry Plea Backed

Board Switch Supports Nitinat Drive

Citizen groups today supported Mayor Peter Pollen's call for a public inquiry into logging practices.

Pollen issued the plea Wednesday when the Capital Regional Board reversed its earlier position and came out in support of including the Nitinat Triangle in Pacific Rim National Park.

He told the board the multiple-use concept of Crown lands as advocated by the logging industry and the B.C. Forest Service was "probably the greatest fraud ever perpetrated on the public.

"It is time for a public inquiry into logging practices. The entire system of logging should be reviewed.

"After seeing what logging companies are doing to our lakes and rivers and evidence of land erosion caused by logging practices, I think it is time we took a look into the situation."

Rick Careless, chairman of the Victoria branch of the Sierra Club, said the Sloan Royal Commission on Forestry in 1956 recommended a review of forest practices in 10 years.

"This has been ignored," he said. "Since then there have been other demands on public lands and nothing has been done to resolve these conflicts of interests.

"There is ample evidence that policies enacted in the 1950s are outdated and should be reviewed by an inquiry."

Howard English, a director of the B.C. Wildlife Federation, said for years people have been fighting to preserve the resources of the province.

"The needs of people are being completely ignored," he said. "The controversy over the Nitinat Triangle is an example. It should never have occurred. It should have been set aside for people years ago."

The regional board's decision supporting the conservationists proposal to include the triangle in the national park, was a reversal of a March 15 parks committee recommendation.

Mayor Pollen also reversed his stand. At the parks committee meeting he had said the proposal was "ludicrous" and came out in favor of the multiple-use of forest lands.

He told the board he thought at the time conservationists were asking for the whole of the Nitinat area be included in the park.

"Since then I found out they are only asking for three-small lakes — 18,000 acres," he said. "I'm completely in favor of the compromise. They should not take anything less."

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford and Central Saanich Mayor Archie Galbraith said the whole of southern Vancouver Island would benefit from the inclusion of the lakes in the parks.

Said Mayor Stan Dear of Sidney: "We should preserve a few remaining wilderness areas for the public."

Dr. John Harris, a member of the Victoria Outdoor Club conservation committee, said the board should have made a decisions on the Nitinat Triangle long ago.

"But it is encouraging to see a level of government support the proposal," he said.

Freak Criminal Month Has Police Hopping

By DOUG MacRAE
Times Staff

A month-long wave of criminal activity has kept Victoria city police hopping since the first of March, with nearly three times the normal monthly load of suspects charged and processed by the department.

Police records officers said 104 persons had been photographed, fingerprinted and dealt with from March 1 to March 29, compared with the average monthly figure of 44. Another dozen or so were expected today and Friday to round out the month.

The figures do not include traffic offences or minor violations such as vagrancy or creating a disturbance.

A department spokesman said many of the month's crimes have been committed to support drug habits. Increases were most marked in the areas of theft involving more than $50 and shoplifting.

Those arrested are showing a lower average age, the officer said. Offences involving juveniles — persons aged 16 or younger — also have increased but are not included in the month's processing figures.

On the bright side, police report an encouraging response to the newly-initiated "appearance notice" system of having accused persons appear in court on their own undertaking.

Since the system was inaugurated under reforms to bail law at the first of the year, police say 98 per cent of accused persons are making good on promises to appear in court.

"Officers are bending over backwards to adhere to the liberal intent of the law," the spokesman said. "A man almost has to be caught with a smoking gun in his hand to be taken into custody."

The department has been "taxed" by the upsurge in crime this month, but is still able to cope, the officer said.

Q. Is it possible to see the inside of Government House at any time? Could you also say how invitations are extended for the State Ball and how to get an invitation to attend the annual garden party at Government House? — G.O.

A. One can only see the inside of Government House as a guest at a tea, reception, dinner party or, of course, the State Ball. Invitations to the latter are issued to those on the official Precedence List, which is a provincial version of the one used in Ottawa. It includes leaders of the churches, armed forces representatives (including the RCMP) and other leaders. Normally, mayors and heads of such organizations as the Red Cross are also invited. Invitations to the garden party are sent to everyone who has signed the guest book at the entrance to Government House during the preceding year. The visitors' register is available during regular office hours. Those signing must be residents of the province and can only sign for themselves.

Student Artists Win In Anti-Smoking Contest

Jeffrey Smith of Monterey elementary school will receive $25 and a commemorative plaque. A $10 cheque and plague goes to Cheryl Parlee of Burnside elementary school.

The competition is open to all grade 6 and 7 students in British Columbia and the Yukon Territories. A total of 1,200 entries were received.

The Grand Provincial Award, $50 and a plaque went to David Steen of Buckingham elementary school in Burnaby. The presentation was made by Lieutenant-Governor J. R. Nicholson.

Easter Blood Target Set

A target of 400 pints has been set for special blood donor clinics to be held in Easter Week.

All of the clinics will be open to the general public.

On Tuesday clinics will be held from 9:30 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m. on the second floor of the T. Eaton Co.'s home furnishings building.

Wednesday's clinics will take place in the South Vancouver Island Rangers' clubhouse on Luxton Road in the Happy Valley area. The clinics are scheduled for 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. and 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Thursday's clinics will be held in the nurses' residence of the Royal Jubilee Hospital lasting from 9:30 a.m. to noon and 1:15 to 4:30 p.m.

Two clinics will be held at Work Point Barracks next Friday. They're scheduled for 9:30 a.m. to noon and 1:15 to 3 p.m.

A Pinch of This and a Touch of That

FOR A START ON THIS bright day, I must take my lumps from a pride of roused Victorians. These were quick to pounce when I reported last week that some Canadian writers win their first acceptances in the United States or England.

Not being masochistic by nature, I will let one ruffled reader protest for all.

"Egad, sir," he writes "wot about the rest of Britain, or the United Kindgom . . . but not, sir, 'England'.

"It's just a piece of the whole. What you did is the same as referring to Quebec as Canada."

"Yours in tartan.

"David (call me Scots, not Scotch) May."

By way of reparation, I can assure Scotsman May and anyone else who might be interested that many a striving Canadian owes his first appearance in print to Blackwood's, a periodical of venerable age and high repute.

Published in Edinburgh, in the United Kingdom.

With that matter taken care of, I will help myself to a consoling slice from a veritable apple pie of a letter that comes from Mrs. Enid Van Buren, 1030 Pendergast.

"There are times," Mrs. Van Buren tells me, "when I feel a profound urge to get busy and write a letter of appreciation to all the people in the Press, TV etc., telling one and all how much they've added to my life in pleasure, fascinating interest in a topic, and for trying to get me to think, understand and sympathize."

For those kind words, much thanks from this servant of the press. But was it really necessary to include TV and that chatterbox, Etcetera?

Here's a note from Brentwood in which a question is asked that I haven't been able to answer.

"Re your mention of the excellent 'Chariots of the Gods' on CBC.

"Do you happen to know whether Erich Von Daniken's book has been translated into English or French?"

This last week or so, we've been mildly puzzled by the presence on the roads of young people with the modern hitch-hiker's bindle on their packs.

Their packboard-packsack combos were featherweights of the newer sort, their neatly-rolled sleeping bags didn't appear to have seen any great amount of use, and their boots looked no more than nicely broken in.

Was a new and perhaps more affluent wave of long-haul hitchhikers getting an early start on this year's See Canada trek?

A Victoria Cool Aid staffer to whom I passed the question doesn't think so. The chances were, she said, that most of the pack-toters we've been seeing are American students who have been taking advantage of the earlier United States Easter vacation to go walkabout.

"Its true we've had an increase in registrations at the hostel," she said, "but we put it down to the influx of Americans. Last week we averaged 12 a night, and one evening we had 20."

From such signs as are available, however, this could be a big year for province to province and coast to coast rovers, with increasing emphasis on group travel in any vehicle that will cope with the long roads.

Not for a while yet, though. Spring may be in full surge on this green coast, but there's still plenty of snow and hard going in the larger Canada.

Chastened by the pummeling touched off by that omnibus reference to England, I asked an Amsterdam-born Victorian the other evening whether it was correct procedure to refer to someone from the Netherlands as Dutch.

Not so, he said. The Netherlander could be a Friesian, a Frank or a Saxon. Only if he hailed from north or south Holland could he be considered truly Dutch, and even then, he might prefer to be called a Hollander.

"For myself," he said with a grin, "I know other Canadians are going to keep right on calling me Dutch, and I don't lose any sleep over it!"

Leafs Just Need Tie To Eliminate Detroit

By The Canadian Press

Vic Hadfield all but destroyed Detroit Red Wings' National Hockey League playoff aspirations Wednesday night while Toronto Maple Leafs were manhandling Boston Bruins.

Hadfield scored two goals 49 seconds apart late in the game to lift New York Rangers into a 2-2 tie with the Wings while Toronto blitzed the injury-plagued Bruins with 44 shots en route to a 4-1 victory.

The results left the Leafs with 78 points in the East Division and two games remaining in the schedule. Detroit, with 76 points, has one game left—at Chicago on Sunday.

Toronto, at home to New York Saturday and in Boston Sunday, needs only a tie to clinch fourth place.

Elsewhere Wednesday, the battle for fourth in the West remained unsettled after Pittsburgh Penguins came from a 4-1 deficit to edge California Golden Seals 5-4 and move into a fourth-place tie with Philadelphia Flyers.

In other games, Montreal Canadiens battled back at Chicago for a 5-5 tie with the Black Hawks and Los Angeles Kings trimmed Vancouver Canucks 4-2.

The Wings, sailing along on first-period goals by Nick Libett and Mickey Redmond, kept the New Yorkers in check until Hadfield exploded with his 47th and 48th goals at 16:54 and 17:43 of the third period.

New York Finishes Second

The tie clinched second in the East for the Rangers, who have been hit by series injuries in recent weeks: to centre Jean Ratelle, winger Rod Gilbert, defenceman Brad Park and forward Bruce McGregor.

Ratelle was No. 2 man in the scoring race with 109 points when he was knocked out of action with a cracked ankle several games back. Linemate Gilbert was sidelined last week with a neck injury and Park with a knee ailment.

INJURIES HIT BRUINS

The Leafs, meanwhile, took advantage of knee injuries to Phil Esposito and Bobby Orr to shackle the Bruins with power play goals by Ron Ellis and Jim McKenny late in the opening period for a 4-0 lead.

All-star defenceman Orr, who injured his left knee in a 6-3 loss to Detroit Tuesday, saw only one shift on a first-period power play than donned street clothes.

Boston coach Tom Johnson said later he didn't want to use Orr at all but the defenceman said he wanted to test the injury.

The game, which threatened to get out of hand when Toronto's Bob Baun and Bruin winger Wayne Cashman drew fighting majors in the first period, almost carried over into the corridor to the players' dressing room.

Leaf coach King Clancy, apparently taking offence at something Johnson was yelling at referee John Ashley, rushed toward the Boston bench but was brought up short by the Bruin trainer.

Baun didn't see any action following the fight after taking two solid hits on his already damaged nose. Clancy said the veteran defenceman wanted to play "but he's too valuable to me at this stage and I couldn't see him going out and getting the nose busted up again."

Auhor: Attractive But Not So the Book

Sport, seasoned with salt, in book form is the newest litany of the day. But even if locker rooms reek of the stuff of racial and social bigotry, does that makeevery publication gospel, or recommended reading?

Not likely; and if the question was: "have you read The Plastic Orgasm?" the answer is "yes," and if it naturally followed: "did you think it was good book?" the reply has to be a definite "no, not really."

There was a mention here earlier of the book which is a story of Canadian football as seen through the pretty eyes and bitter heart of an attractive white woman who married a black man.

LaVerne, Barnes, wife of Emery Barnes, one of the famed headhunters of B.C. Lions past, is the disaffected person who contends among other things, that the game is irrelevant, dehumanizing, brutal, and even soul destroying to a rational society.

So, everybody's going to pot. Which is normal, because most books on football these days deplore the game as an institution that represents so much what is wrong with our society today. And this deserves study.

But in LaVerne's case, as she hits at everything connected with the sport — nothing is sacred or good — perhaps her sincerity is suspect.

Some Sociological Facts of Life

"I'm not bitter," she once said, as she explained she was against the system, a system that glorifies the football player; the many prejudices that exist; the seemingly everlasting problem of the black man; the boy-girl relationship of the players and their willing sex pots in the towns across the country; and questionable business ethics.

She takes a good rap at the so-called football superman, the weekly buildup for the weekend slaughter before the masses; the fan, old super fat, with booze on his breath; and she really explores that sex angle — but, in doing so, freaks out.

When she suggests that loose women are used to lure the hesitant star, what else is new? Also, when the football demi-god snaps his fingers the party girls come running, she says.

Sure, LaVerne, Sure! The story of the chase and the chased is as old as life itself, but is there any case on record of a football player ever being raped? Besides, LaVerne makes a charge, that won't win her many female admirers, when she says that "Canadian girls, like Avis, are second best."

In the area of social research, Laverne may be more on track. She did admit that her publication was meant to be more of a sociological essay than a sports book, and that it already has been accepted as must reading in some Canadian Universities.

Now For Some of the Wrong Reasons

And if this is subject matter for social research, fine. But as an intellectual offering of literary note, it fails badly.

For a lady, some of the words aren't very ladylike. LaVerne does herself and the publishers a disservice with the use of far too many four and five-letter words. That isn't social research! Frankly, in places, the book is vulgar, even in this age of permissiveness. And if it sells for this commodity, then it sells for all the wrong reasons.

But it's not the first, and not the last book on the subject.

Peep-and-tell is the in-thing. Dave Meggysy said many of the same things about U.S. football from a player's angle. Johnny Sample explained how the "dehumanizing" process was brought about; George Sauer said he was quitting at the peak of his career because he didn't like the conditions — "to be a player is to be treated like a child."

But then, no player is forced to play the game either, a game that LaVerne describes as "a nauseating kind of con job."

And if football is considered less than honest, is that new, in any business? Forget it!

No, LaVerne, and you, too, dear reader, it was a noble try — close, but no cigar.

Below-Belt Blow

VANCOUVER (CP) — Promoters in Vancouver who plan a closed-circuit telecast Friday of the Muhammad Ali-Mac Foster fight in Tokyo were hit below the Belt Wednesday with news that a Seattle television station will also broadcast the fight live.

Murray Pezim Productions Ltd. thought it had exclusive rights to televise the fight in the Vancouver area, and has been selling tickets at $7 each.

But the promoters learned Wednesday that KING-TV in Seattle, which can be picked up by cable throughout the lower mainland, also has rights to the fight.

SILVER WINS PLAYOFF FOR PROVINCIAL TITLE

KELOWNA — A rink skipped by Art Silver of Victoria defeated George Hamilton of Kelowna 11-6 in a special playoff, Wednesday to win the B.C. seniors' (60 and over) curling championship.

Silver finished the three-day, round-robin competition tied with Hamilton for first place with 6-1 records.

Joe Hadfield of Chilliwack, Metro Prokopchuk of Penticton, Les James of Kimberley and George Schultis of Salmon Arm all finished with 3-4 records. Reg Darwin of Richmond was 1-6.

Cowichan Golfers Early With Island Open Entries

The Duncan-area club has always thrown its best threats into the Island's major match-play tournament. Lat year the best of all was Wakeham, the talented preofessional who defeated Gorge Vale amateur Reg Clarkson to win The Times Trophy for a third time.

Whole his entry hasn't been received as yet, Wakeham has indicated he will be on hand to defend his laurels.

But some of Wakeham's clubmates wasted little time in filing their entries. The early-birds include Bert Wright, Tom Kerrone, Don Gard and Al MacLeod, a former Victoria amateur champion who now plays out of Cowichan.

Entries from two former champions — Colwood's Laurie Kerr and Gorge pro Earl Davies — are also among the more than 90 received to date by tournament secretary Leo Derman.

Deadline for entries is Monday, and indications are that a full field of 160 will again start in the Island Open.

The six-week tournament opens April 9 with an 18-hole qualifying round at Royal Colwood. Match play gets under way April 16 with the first round at Glen Meadows.

Other match-play rounds will be played at Gorge Vale, April 23, at Uplands, April 30, and Victoria Club, May 7, before finalists are singled out for the windup at Colwood on May 14.

The Gang from Red Rock Leads Curling Uprising

Eddie Asselin and his Red Rock gang from Northern Ontario staged a rebellion at the 13th annual Canadian Firefighters Curling championship at the Victoria Curling Club Wednesday.

An when the uprising was over, Asselin's unheralded rink, and the host B.C. foursome of Aubrey Neff of Vancouver were suddenly out in front of the championships, and defending champion and pre-title event favorite, Doug Wyatt of Saskatoon, was in second place.

Asselin outcurled Wyatt in the morning draw to defeat the three-time champion, 5-4, with a last rock takeout of a partially guarded rock. He returned in the evening to sneak by Bob Swarbrick of Manitoba after two extra ends, 7-6.

It was the third extra-end game of the championships for Swarbrick. He stole victories in the first two. This time Asselin stole the winning point against the Manitoba skip.

This gave Asselin a 5-1 record — he has lost only to B.C.

GOOD DRAW

Meanwhile, Neff, who earlier lost to Wyatt, had to struggle to get by his two opponents, Don Nelson of Calgary, 8-6, in the morning, and Chester Estabrooks of Sackville, New Brunswick, 10-9 in the evening.

Against Alberta, Neff was facing two counters when he went down for last rock. There was some question as to whether he would fire a runner and attempt a raise takeout on shot rock which had an excellent chance of success, or draw.

Finally, he chose the draw and put the stone almost squarely on the button between the two Alberta rocks.

Against New Brunswick, it took a tricky shot through a narrow port to get Neff a four ender in the sixth when he was trailing 7-3. He then stole a pair in the seventh, but still was forced to make his last shot good on a takeout to edge the Sackville crew.

Wyatt, meanwhile, who had been guilty of missing a covering guard against Asselin in the morning, when he lost, ran into another hot skip from Alberta in the evening.

He and Nelson battled on almost even terms in a well-curled game in which the first three ends were blanked.

Wyatt made the first crucial mistake when he came up light on a draw attempt in the sixth, and Alberta stole two.

On the seventh, Wyatt had another great chance to take over. He was lying two and had a fourth stone in the rings when he went down for the first of his rocks. He then elected to take out the Alberta stone, but miscued when he drove in back on one of his own rocks.

Wyatt said later "It was a bad call."

Wyatt got to within 4-5 on the ninth, but Nelson had full control in the 10th to win it.

As matters stand today, if there is a tie between teams after the morning round, there will be a playoff this afternoon.

And the possibility existed that even four teams could be tied. This would happen if Alberta should defeat Northern Ontario, Saskatchewan should win over New Brunswick, and Southern Ontario over B.C.

New Site for Rugby Final As Tide Tackles Norwest

Stakes at the gate should be greater now that the site of Saturday's McKechnie Cup rugby final has been switched, but the prize on the field will remain the same.

Victoria Crimson Tide will be shooting for the inter-city championship against Norwest — a representative side selected from North and West Vancouver clubs.

With the Crimson Tide aiming at the city's 18th McKechnie Cup triumph since the trophy was first presented in 1896, Victoria Rugby Union officials have switched the showpiece match of the season to Royal Athletic Park.

Originally the game was slated for Macdonald Park, traditional home of rugby in the city and the arena where the Tide reached the final last weekend by upsetting UBC Thunderbirds 13-8.

However, Macdonald has been declared an "open park" thus eliminating admission charges. Only about $100 was received in a collection at the Tide-Bird struggle and officials decided to move that match to Athletic Park, hoping for improved gate receipts.

Admission charges for the 2:30 p.m. contest will be $1 for adults and 50 cents for children.

Coach Ray Calton will be making only one change in the Tide side that handed the mighty Thunderbirds their lone loss of the season. Rick Rollins will replace winger Tom Lippa, who has been sidelined by an ankle injury.

The Victorians, who last won the cup crown in 1969, will be going against another club that produced a surprise in last weekend's semi-final round. Norwest also came out on top by a 13-8 count in a victory over the highly-favored Vancouver Reps.

Strike Threat Eases In Baseball Dispute

By The Canadian Press

Baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn expressed optimism Wednesday in New York for a settlement in the threatened players' strike amid reports that the players had eased off in their demands.

"One thing I'm happy about in the midst of this difficulty," the commissioner said at his headquarters here, "is that the clubs and the players have been meeting regularly.

"They're doing so today, I'm sure, all night and tomorrow and so forth to see if they can find a solution."

An unconfirmed report from Scottsdale, Ariz., Wednesday said the players had watered down their original long-term demands for improvement of the owners' pension payments, the crux of the dispute.

The Major League Baseball Players Association, through executive director Marvin Miller, had been demanding a $650,000 increase, raising the contributions for the first year to $6.1 million, to be increased to $7.25 million by the fourth year.

An alternate proposal was for an increase of $1.2 million under a one-year agreement.

Now, sources close to player deliberations say, the players have modified their original demands, saying they would accept an $800,000 increase, double what the owners had offered but $420,000 below what they had asked originally.

Players' representatives of the 24 teams scheduled a meeting in Dallas Friday to discuss a threatened strike. The season opens April 5.

In Scottsdale, Miller announced that Chicago Cubs players had voted 28-0 to strike, leaving only Milwaukee Brewers to vote.

Elsewhere on the baseball front, Frank Howard was reported to have signed with Texas Rangers for the same salary he received last year, an estimated $120,000.

The slugging first-baseman and outfielder said he would end his holdout and begin training today.

Small Streams Are Often Good Steelhead Producers

Vancouver Island's multitude of creeks, either tributaries or flowing directly into the sea, provide a classroom with almost certain success for the novice steelheader. These seemingly unproductive creeks often scoffed at by the tyro and the uninitiated, are looked upon by the fish hawks as providing sure action.

Many of these creeks are complete systems in themselves having their own watershed and emptying directly into the sea. Some are also well known for their steelhead populations. The better known are French Creek — situated just north of Parksville, Black Creek (midway between Campbell River and Courtenay), Goldstream (just north of Victoria) and China Creek (south of Port Alberni).

Trout creek — north of Campbell River, Chase River — south of Nanaimo and many others are well known by locals, but not too well known by visiting anglers.

Other productive small creeks are tributaries to major rivers and while not always readily-accessible, are the nurseries for these river highways. Better known among these are Haslam Creek, flowing into the Nanaimo; Caribou Creek, flowing into the Oyster, and Big Tree Creek, flowing into the Salmon River.

Access along all these creeks or tributaries is usually difficult because of heavy undergrowth along the banks. However, smaller versions of conditions the angler will find on larger streams and rivers make these ideal learning laboratories.

The angler fishing these small creeks must be prepared for many hazards he will not find on a large stream. Also, normal tackle can become very awkward. Black Creek, as one example, is the only major steelhead stream I fish where it is common on a cast to get the tip of my rod tangled on the brush on the far side of the creek.

The small, compact pools of these creeks are often looked upon with disdain by hooked steelhead. Inevitably, after the first run, they will try to leave the pool and run downstream around the equally inevitable riverbend, overgrown with heavy brush. These leaping trophies will also tangle the line in streambank bushes if not carefully fought. A short rod with a minimum 20-pound-test line is a must if you are to hold these fish.

A misconception often carried by novice steelheaders is that the size of the stream will indicate the size of fish. This is not the case with steelhead. Their size is entirely dependent upon their length of stay in the sea and the quantity and quality of feed available there. Lunker steelhead up to twenty pounds are possible in all creeks. A general average would be between eight and twelve pounds.

Miniaturization of pools is truly the key to these creeks. The pools are a workable size, allowing the angler to learn the fundamental rules of reading the water. The holes in each pool are very special, easy to locate with only a few casts and drifts, and easy to memorize. Holding water may be limited, however, and every stretch of green water, no matter how small, must be drifted until the angler is certain he knows the lies.

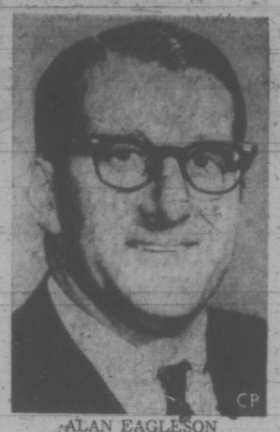
Success will be measured by the amount of travelling the angler does on the creek. If there is one rule, it is — Don't tarry! Take your casts, starting almost at your feet and working slowly across the stream making sure each drift has your lure or bait on the bottom. Strike at any foreign movement no matter how sure you are that it is only a twig on the bottom. If you have no strikes, move to the next deep or green water and work the same way. When you touch a fish, memorize the spot for certain casting the next trip.

I have also found that it is very profitable to work a known hole two or three times even if I don't touch a fish the first time through. I know if there are fish in the river, they will hold in that spot and extra casts may produce a wary fish that didn't react the first time I drifted through.

There is also an added bonus to the angler who will work these small streams. That is the often-large population of sea-run cutthroat trout. This population is well known to the bait steelheader, particularly in late March and April when the majority of these "yellowbellies" enter for spawning.



ALAN EAGLESON

FIRST SWING COSTS EXTRA

MONTREAL (CP) — Forward Ted Taylor of Vancouver Canucks and defenceman Larry Johnston of Detroit Red Wings have been fined $500 and $400 respectively for a stick-swinging incident in Vancouver March 21.

Clarence Campbell, National Hockey League president, said the incident occurred after the two players had collided early in the third period of the game.

"The additional $100 fine to Taylor is prompted by his striking the first blow," Campbell's statement said.

Cash Hiked for Stanley Cup Win 'But It's Not Enough'—Eagleson

MONTREAL — The National Hockey League Wednesday announced big increases in playoff bonuses for players — including $15,000 for each man on the team that wins the Stanley Cup, an increase of $7,500 over last season.

In Toronto, the NHL Players' Association lawyer Alan Eagleson insisted the increases were not enough. He said the players would seek further negotiations with the league after the playoffs are completed.

Hockey moves closer to parity with professional football and baseball in playoff awards with the increase to $15,000.

This amount is in addition to the award money earned for a team's finish in the final regular-season standings — $2,500 for a player for first place; $1,250 for second; $750 a player on a third-place team; $500 a man on a fourth-place team.

The league now will distribute a total of $966,000 in playoff and regular-season championship awards.

The new package announced by league president Clarence Campbell shows $756,000 set aside for playoff award money and $210,000 for the order of finish in the standings. This is compared with a total of $777,000 designated for both categories last year.

The increase means each player on a Stanley Cup-winning team will receive an additional $7,500 in award money this year. The members of the losing team each receive $7,500, up $1,500 from the 1971 scale.

By comparison, members of the winning team in United States pro football's annual Super Bowl receive $25,000 each, while each member of baseball's Pittsburgh Pirates received an estimated $20,000 for their 1971 World Series win.

- First-place finish, Stanley Cup winner — $17,500 per man, ($10,000);
- Second-place finish Stanley Cup winner — $16,250 ($8,750);
- Third-place finish Stanley Cup winner — $15,750 ($8,250);
- Fourth-place finish Stanley Cup winner — $15,500 ($8,000);
- First-place finish Stanley Cup loser — $10,000 ($8,500);
- Second-place finish Stanley Cup loser — $8,750 ($7,250);
- Third-place finish Stanley Cup loser — $8,250 ($6,750);
- Fourth-place finish Stanley Cup loser — $8,000 ($6,500).

The rest of the award money remains the same as in other years. $3,750 a player for the two teams losing in the Cup semi-finals, and $1,500 for each player on the four teams which lose in the quarter-finals.

In all cases, there will be 21 full units for each team, including the regular-season championship awards.

In his announcement, Campbell said the NHL owners and the NHL Players' Association had agreed on an extension of the current arbitration system through the 1974-75 season.

"Since May, 1971, we have been negotiating on a total package," he said. "In June, 1971, we reached broad agreement on the increase for the Stanley Cup playoff awards, and we have continued to negotiate the remaining details since that time.

"We are hopeful that we can conclude the remaining items at the annual June meetings," Campbell said.

Meanwhile, Eagleson said the players could not reach agreement with the league in the playoff bonus schedule and doesn't expect to settle the issue until the annual meetings in June.

He said players on the expansion team feel the playoff schedule is beneficial to just two teams — Boston Bruins and Chicago Black Hawks, respective winners of the East and West divisions — and possibly New York Rangers and Montreal Canadiens.

Eagleson suggested the NHL owners had to do something, having backed themselves into a corner by raising playoff ticket prices on the presumption that playoff-bonus negotiations would be satisfactorily concluded and thus justifying the increases.

Title United's Goal

Victoria teams will be in position to ensure happy finishes in the regular season of the Pacific Coast Soccer League when they tackle rivals Saturday in Vancouver.

Decathlon Mark

SANTA MARIA, Calif. (CP) — Gordon Stewart of Vancouver set a Canadian native record Tuesday when he finished second in the Easter decathlon with 7,439 points.

Funds for Dome

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The Michigan Municipal Finance Commission approved Tuesday the sale of $126 million in bonds for a domed sports stadium in Detroit.

Plans call for completion in time for the 1975 baseball season.

Safety Suggestions Sought

By PAT DUFOUR

This is the weekend that will launch another season of pleasure cruising and fun for many.

For some, it may lead to tragedy.

Esquimalt-Saanich MP David Anderson, himself an ardent boater, shares our concern about the growing number of marine incidents and the lack of adequate marine rescue facilities.

He'd like to do something about in the only place that will produce remedial results — the political arena in Ottawa.

This week he appealed to the boating community to help itself by coming up with some recommendations.

He says, "I have been trying to get the views of responsible people who are familiar with the sea and also familiar with the inherent limitations of any search and rescue system in waters as treacherous and cold as ours."

So far, he says, he's received "far more information from people familiar with highway accidents and ambulance services" than from those who make the sea their business — or hobby.

If you have some concrete suggestions, how about sending them along? We've been beefing long enough. This is our chance to do something.

★ ★ ★

The Strait of Georgia is going to look like an invasion area this weekend with a record 88 boats, more than 20 of them American, pacing it out in the fourth annual Southern Straits of Georgia classic.

★ ★ ★

Waters of the Gorge, too, will have their share of shipping Saturday, even if it's mini-sized craft. These will be the dinghies taking part in the annual Gorge race, sponsored by the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association.

AROUND OUR SHORES

It begins at 11 a.m. at Craigflower Park on Admirals, carries on to the Inner Harbor and back up the Gorge waterway — tide permitting. This race usually produces some spills and thrills — good material for ardent "shutter-bugs."

To round out the weekend's racing, the Elk Lake Sailing Association will hold its annual Elk Lake regatta Sunday. Registrations must be made at Hamsterly Park at the north end of the lake before the 10 a.m. start time.

Members of the Victoria Canoe Club will also be doing their thing this weekend. They're off to the Pachena Beach and Bamfield districts, gathering Friday at 10 a.m. at Cowichan Lake.

★ ★ ★

Working-up for the Straits of Georgia race this weekend, Sea Fox III had a hint of victory Sunday when she placed first in the second race sailed off Oak Bay by members of the Turkey Head Sailing Association.

The first race of the day was called because of lack of wind.

Lansdowne Nips Arbutus

Lansdowne finished with 52 points and Arbutus had 50. Willis placed third with 29 points, followed by Oak Bay, Shoreline and Elizabeth Fisher. Highrock, Central and Colquitz were other schools entered in the one day competition.

Nicki Winter of Arbutus won the intermediate girls' singles and combined with Bill Myles for the intermediate doubles crown to be the other double winner.

First three finishers in each event:

Weekly Meets Planned

Invictus and the University of Victoria cross-country team will co-sponsor a track and field coaching clinic April 8 and 9.

The first session (April 8) will run from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. in Centennial Stadium and the second will be from 10 a.m. to noon in the Cunningham Building at UVic.

Elsewhere on the Victoria track and field scene, both indoor and outdoor training sessions for the Flying "Y" club will begin April 1.

One innovation for Victoria this year is the prospect of a mid-week all-comers' meet to be held each week throughout the season at Centennial Stadium.

First major sanctioned competition of the season is the George Pearkes-Ceevacs invitational meet in Duncan, May 20 and 21.

So what?

The Evinrude Starflite V-4 engine design has held the world's outboard speed record for the past 11 years. That's interesting. But most of the people who buy our Evinrude V-4's aren't racers. They just want the best engine they can buy. And they're going to buy it from whoever makes the best engines.

And that's where the World's Speed Record comes in. Because setting that record and holding it for 11 years has taught us a lot about how to build faster, stronger, more reliable production engines. That's why the big Evinrudes (the 85, 100 and the new 125) are all V-4's. The tougher, shorter V-4 crankshaft can take a lot more than conventional in-line crankshafts. And deliver a lot more, too. Evinrude's V-4 design also cuts down on engine height for greater stability when the going gets rough.

You may have thought that our 131 mph. record had nothing to do with you. As a matter of fact, it's helped give you a better outboard. And if our competition didn't think so, why are they still trying to beat it?

Campaigns Helping Young Job-Hunters

Students who had difficulty finding a summer job last year may find a slight shuffle in the location of opportunities this year but similar problems concerning the number of job openings.

Some large corporations have reduced student employment plans but the Canadian Chamber of Commerce is continuing its program of urging businesses to hire more students for part-time work.

Projections by federal government agencies indicate a drop in student-job openings but special programs available to students are being expanded.

A cross-Canada survey by The Canadian Press shows that little change in over-all student employment levels is anticipated for the summer compared with last year.

A recent manpower department survey showed that the average unemployment rate last summer of returning students was 17.9 per cent—ranging from 22.2 per cent at the high-school level to 6.1 per cent for university students.

HIGHEST IN QUEBEC

Regionally, student unemployment was highest in Quebec—24.4 per cent—and lowest in the Prairie provinces where students helping out on family farms were classed as employed.

The Canadian Chamber of Commerce urges its members to hire a number of students equivalent to five per cent of regular work force—one student for every 20 regular jobs. Neil V. German, chamber president, reported recently that student hiring last year amounted to 5.4 per cent of total employment of member firms.

Bell Canada policy sets a five-per-cent guideline and a company spokesman says current employment levels indicate about 2,000 students will be hired, but the number is not fixed because local offices do the employing.

International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. anticipates a sharp drop in its summer employment program and Falconbridge Nickel Mines Ltd. has announced a curtailment of its program.

Aluminum Co. of Canada Ltd. expects its student hirings will be "substantially less" this summer.

The federal government hired about 23,000 students last summer but this year Canada Manpower projects a need for only 18,500, based on departmental requests.

The manpower department survey of employment last summer was not of sufficient depth to categorize students employed through the Opportunities for Youth (OFY) grants. This year the OFY budget has been increased to $33.98 million from $24.71 million and employment this year is projected at 29,000 compared with 27,832 last year.

Don Cook of the Canada Manpower office at Memorial University, St. John's, Nfld., says there is no indication of a decrease in hiring in Newfoundland.

Officials co-ordinating student employment in Nova Scotia said most major companies do not plan changes from previous years in employment levels.

Alex Penman, manager of the Saint John, N.B., Canada Manpower centre, said he anticipated the student employment situation in the area "would be as good as last year." R. P. Campbell, New Brunswick deputy labor minister, said the province hired 300-400 students last year and "was considering" maintaining that level this year.

Andre Parent of the Quebec Manpower office in Quebec City predicts a record year for the province with at least 15,000 students expected to be hired by governments and the private sector of the economy. He projected government hiring at about 12,000, or about the same as government and private hiring combined last year.

WILL BE HIRING

Government employment office officials in Ontario cautioned against interpreting the announced cuts by some companies, such as Inco and Falconbridge, as a trend. Reports from other companies indicate many do not plan reductions in student employment levels.

The Ontario government hired about 12,500 students last year as part of its regular program for summer projects and vacation relief positions. The government provided jobs for about 3,000 last year through special programs and plans to provide summer work for about 7,000 this year.

A survey of major companies in the Prairie provinces indicates that hiring plans will be about the same this year as last year.

Most major British Columbia companies say they anticipate no cuts in student employment. However, pulp and paper companies say they may reduce student employment levels because of the depressed market for pulp.

Succession Duties Shunned By Alberta Government

By The Canadian Press

Alberta is the best place in Canada for dying, if you want to bequeath your property and prosperity to kinfolk without giving the government a share of it.

It's the age-old question of succession duties—the amount you can leave in your will to relatives and the amount that will be taken as taxes.

Until Jan. 1, the federal government was sole collector of succession duties, of which it returned percentages to provincial coffers. Now it has vacated the field except to act as collection agent for those provinces which ask it to.

The federal government dropped the succession duties in favor of a capital gains tax and the four Atlantic provinces and Manitoba and Saskatchewan began collecting succession duties Jan. 1 to make up for a loss of revenue while legislation was being prepared.

Although the return can be lucrative, Alberta still regards the tax as a dead issue and takes no part of it. Even when Ottawa was collecting and disbursing, the province gave its share back to the estate.

But other provinces are reaping gains, in varying degrees.

The Atlantic provinces have presented or are preparing bills under which Ottawa would still collect the duties for a period of three years for a three-per-cent fee.

Each of those provinces has agreed on a $500,000-exemption on the duties paid by a husband or wife on the other's death, up from the $150,000-exemption under the old formula. However, in estates passed on to children and grandchildren the exemption is $50,000.

Quebec has suggested it will not move into the area vacated by Ottawa but will make other adjustments so it will not lose revenue as a result. Finance Minister Raymond Garneau says details of the plan will be explained in the provincial budget a couple of weeks from now.

In Ontario, Provincial Treasurer Darcy McKeough said in his budget brought down Tuesday that a special committee will "undertake a thorough examination of the existing Succession Duty Act." He suggested there will be an easing of the present exemption which now is $250,000 for widows and widowers.

A bill is before the legislature in Manitoba, where at present there is no duty on estates valued at $50,000 or less. The bill provides for a progressive scale related to the value of the bequest.

Saskatchewan also has a bill before the house which proposes a sliding scale including provisions that no estate of less than $10,000 will be taxed. But on an estate with an estimated net value of between $10,000 and $20,000 the tax would be 12 per cent, rising to 45 per cent for estates valued between $250,000 and $300,000.

The British Columbia government has amended its act to raise the maximum exemption to $150,000 from $60,000.

WAITING TO BE ARRESTED four demonstrators kneel in front of federal building in Harrisburg where trial of seven anti-war campaigners nears conclusion. Girl in centre has handcuffed her wrists to a chain to impede arrest. (AP wirephoto.)

Berrigan Trial Near End

HARRISBURG, Pa. (Reuter) — The trial of the Harrisburg Seven, which most observers had expected to be one of America's classic courtroom dramas but instead evolved into a dry, tedious courtroom proceeding, was due to go to the jury today after almost five weeks of testimony and argument.

The panel of nine women and three men were to begin deliberating after Judge R. Dixon Herman explains the legal issues involved in the trial.

Charges against Rev. Philip Berrigan and his six anti-war co-defendants include conspiring to kidnap White House adviser Henry Kissinger, blow up heating tunnels of government buildings in Washington and raid draftboards.

A demonstration outside the federal courthouse in support of the defendants Wednesday resulted in the arrest of 166 persons, police said. All were charged with disorderly conduct as they stood with linked arms on the sidewalks surrounding the courthouse.

Almost 100 of the arrested demonstrators were found guilty and agreed to pay fines and costs of $36 each. Another nine persons refused to pay the fines and were given five-day jail sentences.

STRESS— YOUR HEART'S DEADLIEST ENEMY?

Fatty foods, smoking, lack of exercise—all can cause heart disease. But there's a far greater enemy: stress—the body's involuntary reactions to today's demanding life. Impressive new evidence indicates that, in the highly competitive business world, everyday tension and anger cause more coronary heart disease than all the traditional culprits combined. April Reader's Digest describes dangers to watch out for, and tells why it is vitally important to overcome stress and anxiety, at home and especially on the job. South Africa Gets Heavy on Pot

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — Gibson Mhlongo soaked his aching feet in a marijuana solution. Solomon Motaung sipped marijuana soup whenever he suffered a sore chest.

Both were arrested under new South African anti-drugs laws which pay no regard to venerated home remedies or the prescriptions of witch doctors.

Black people's use of marijuana, known here as "dagga," is not part of any modern drug subculture. It has been accepted casually by generations as a useful part of their lives. But now it is officially regarded as an evil to be crushed at all costs.

Across the country courts have been handing out prison sentences since an act regulating the "abuse of dependence-producing substances" became law Dec. 6.

Unless judges find mitigating circumstances, the minimum term for selling dagga is five years. The minimum for simple possession is two years behind bars, compared with a fine of about $40 before the law went into effect.

"South Africa is confronted with a monster because she pushed the panic buttons too rapidly," says a law professor.

But the social welfare minister, Cornelius Mulder, says the law is doing what it was designed to do.

"The punishment must be severe; otherwise it will not be effective." Mulder asserted. "We must shock these people into realizing what a menace drugs are to our country. . . . We have made it easy for these people to apply for rehabilitation.

"But we have no intention of being lenient with those who are not prepared to cooperate. I have seen overseas what can happen if action is not taken in time. I have seen human wrecks in America, Britain and Holland, wrecks caused by drugs."

Gibson Mhlongo, 38, insisted he never heard of the new law.

"I bought the dagga to wash my feet because they were sore," the laborer told a magistrate. "My foot swells for a month at a time. The witch doctor who throws the bones told me to buy the dagga."

Accused of possessing less than half an ounce of dagga, he received a three-month sentence but it was suspended for three years.

Solomon Motaung, 36, said he brewed a dagga concoction to treat an ailing chest caused by sand at the brickworks which employed him. He declared: "I do not smoke it, I cook it and then drink it. It does my chest a lot of good. Dagga is very good for the health. The medicine my doctor gave me did me no good."

Motaung pleaded not guilty to peddling the weed after being nabbed by an undercover policeman. He's serving five years.

Dagga was widely and legally used in this country for 267 of its 320 years of white settlement. Jan van Riebeeck, who established the first white settlement at Cape Town, referred in his diary to that "highly esteemed herb."

As an everyday part of frontier life, dagga was smoked for relaxation at dusk, made into ointments, and mixed with cattle fodder to tranquilize upset animals. One book of folk remedies lists 15 cures which recommend the drug.

Improve your lot.

Weed-N-Feed with 'Killex' helps your lawn without making you work for it, because it feeds and weeds at the same time.

One reason is the 'Killex'. It's the most effective known weed killer for home use . . . and it really gives hard-to-control weeds a knock-out blow. So you don't have to weed the lawn.

The other reason is the long-lasting Ureaform slow-release Nitrogen which keeps on feeding your lawn long after Weed-N-Feed with 'Killex' has been applied.

So you don't have to apply it very often. Although when you do, a 22 lb. bag will cover 5,000 sq. ft. – far more than any ordinary heavy-weight lawn fertilizer can cover. (One of the reasons is that in the heavy-weights, the carrier is a dense, heavy material, like sand, which weighs 100 lbs. a bag. In light-weight Weed-N-Feed with 'Killex' the carrier is vermiculite, which weighs only a couple of pounds a bushel).

BELFAST (AP) — For British soldiers in the streets of Northern Ireland, it is a war against a hidden enemy.

Any man on patrol, no matter how quiet the streets may seem, can run into a sniper's bullet at any time.

More and more often the British soldiers, sent here in response to an appeal from the Roman Catholic minority in 1969, are being taunted by an enemy who inflicts injury or death and melts away into the civilian population.

Part of the soldier's job in combatting guerrilla war is to bring the enemy into the open. At night, in Belfast, troops with blackened faces flit from corner to corner in the Catholic areas with the aim of getting shot at — so that they can shoot back.

A private soldier earns an average equivalent of $9.10 a day. The rates vary according to length of service. Out of this he pays for some of his food and smaller items of uniform.

The army was first called on to the streets of Northern Ireland in August, 1969. No soldier was killed until February, 1971. Now the army's death toll stands at 56. More than 400 soldiers have been wounded.

Aussie Coalition Threatened

CANBERRA (CP) — Australia is closer to a change of government than at any time in the 23-year rule of the coalition of Liberal and Country parties.

This is a wide consensus in Canberra, the national capital, and is confirmed by all the public opinion polls and surveys.

The main reason is the minor economic recession which has hit Australia. The government has been blamed even though the recession has been caused by factors almost entirely out of its control.

But this bursting of the boom which has characterized Australian economic life for so long has highlighted for many people a fact which has been troubling close observers of this nation's politics for years. This is: How long can a parliamentary democratic system be credible when a government remains unchanged for two decades?

The crisis for this government came a year ago when Prime Minister John Gorton voted himself out of office because he knew that a substantial minority of his own parliamentary party were dedicated to bringing about his downfall even if that meant the collapse of the government as well.

William McMahon came to office on a minority vote as the only real alternative to John Gorton, and his year of office has been a catalogue of problem and pitfall.

The government was supported by only 40 per cent while the opposition Labor party was backed by 49 per cent. With only eight months to go before a federal election, these are chilling figures for McMahon and his ministers. For, on past experience, Labor actually gains support during an election campaign.

Strengthening the feeling that a change of government is at last highly likely is the fact that for the first time since 1949 defence and foreign affairs wil not be issues in the coming election.

In past elections, the government has been able to capitalize on basic Australian fears of being invaded by Asian hordes by accusing the Labor party of being "soft" on communism. Labor opposition to participation in the Vietnam war—regarded by the government as an "insurance" policy for American support when needed—and the stationing of Australian troops overseas have been used as an example of Labor's indifference to the country's defence.

CHINA SHOWS INTEREST

Communist infuence in the Labor party through its affiliation with trade unions which have Communists in leading positions has been another damaging weapon in the government's hands.

The China "threat" now seems to have diminished and the Russians have opened a diplomatic offensive in Australia to calm local fears about the presence of Russian naval ships in the Indian Ocean and the spread of Russian influence in Southeast Asia.

While the Australian government has been responsive to this Russian overture there has been no progress in Canberra's tentative moves towards better relations with China.

McMahon has admitted that the Chinese last year extended through third parties an invitation for a junior Australian minister to visit China. The Australian government rejected the idea.

Term Paper Business Eyed

NEW YORK (AP) — A move is under way in a small but growing number of states to curb what is becoming a successful service industry in college towns from the Ivy League to the Pacific Coast-merchandising term papers on the open market.

In the California legislature, the New York courts and the Massachusetts attorney-general's office, public officials backed or goaded by college authorities are moving against young entrepreneurs who are getting rich by churning out other people's homework.

Ever since a pair of pioneering brothers launched a Boston term-paper factory 18 months ago and extended its operations to 49 other branches across the U.S., more than 100,000 papers have been sold to students and the number of competing firms is proliferating.

"I am helping students overcome the busy work and repetition and wasted time of going from shelf to shelf and page to page doing term papers in which no learning is involved," says Ward Warren, 23, who with his brother, Kenneth, 27, founded Termpapers Research Unlimited Inc.

DID LARGE BUSINESS

The brothers say they did $1.8 million worth of business last year.

Termpapers Unlimited and the others advertise openly in campus newspapers — "Are you cramped for time? Let us help you," reads one — and reach students who pay from $2 to $6 a page for documented research on topics as varied as Aztec social structure to Zambian foreign policy.

The papers are composed by ghostwriters, including moonlighting faculty members, graduate students and technical writers-many with MAs and PhDs — who sign agreements relinquishing their rights to their works.

The ghostwriters get anywhere from $2 to $5 a page for their products.

This view and the practice of peddling term papers — is the target of a measure introduced by California Assemblyman Jim Keysor that would make it a misdemeanor to sell term papers to students in higher education institutions.

HAS FILED SUIT

In New York, Attorney-General Louis J. Lefkowitz has filed suit against a term-paper purveyor on the ground that it aided students in fraud. A bill before the state legislature would exact fines of $250 against firms that sold the papers to students at state-chartered academic institutions.

In Boston, the Massachusetts attorney-general and lawyers for a number of colleges and universities have been considering strategies for legal action against the term-paper firms.

The reaction of educationists and administrators to the term-paper business has been mixed, ranging from violent opposition to philosophical re-evaluation of the efficacy of term papers.

Archie Epps, Harvard dean of students, calls the term-paper companies "a blot on the conscience of American institutions of higher learning."

On the other hand, David J. Carson, dean of students at Babson College in Massachusetts, Ward Warren's alma mater, sees the term-paper companies as a spur to new thinking.

"Perhaps there will be some serious and beneficial gains out of all this if it causes some re-evaluation of the whole process of which term papers are a part," he said.

Ward Warren said students seem to have no second thoughts about buying a term paper.

Would he himself purchase a term paper prepared by a commercial service? Warren was asked.

AIR STRIKE BLAMED FOR SLUMP

OTTAWA (CP) — The strike by 1,600 air traffic controllers in January was mainly responsible for a slump that month in national output, Statistics Canada reported Wednesday.

The statistics bureau said its index of real domestic product, based on 1961 output equalling 100, fell to 171.1 for January from 171.7 in December. The index measures the physical output of goods and services, not its value.

The 11-day strike was mainly responsible for a cut of nearly 30 per cent in the output of the air transport industry, with ramifications through many other industries.

PROVINCE OF BRITISH COLUMBIA
PUBLIC UTILITIES COMMISSION

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

A Public Hearing will be held by the Public Utilities Commission commencing at 9:30 a.m., Monday, May 15th, 1972 in the Hotel Vancouver, Vancouver, British Columbia, for the purpose of hearing the applications of:

British Columbia Hydro and Power Authority
Centennial Natural Gas Pipeline Ltd.
Georgia Gulf Transmission Co. Ltd.
Malaspina Gas Pipeline Ltd.
Pacific Northern Gas Ltd.

for the construction and operation of a pipeline or system to serve Powell River and Vancouver Island with natural gas.

Persons who wish to appear at the Public Hearing and give evidence or otherwise take part in the proceedings in any respect should notify the Secretary of the Public Utilities Commission in writing at the undernoted address by April 15th, 1972 stating their name, address and the nature of their interest. Persons entitled to be heard will be so advised.

Before you open your wallet, open your mind.

Next to buying a home, the largest investment you make is a car. It is a major investment. That's why it pays dividends for you to examine everything with an open mind before you open your wallet.

One car to be sure to examine is a Peugeot. It's built to last.

For one thing, a Peugeot paint job is the toughest you can get. A special "electrophoresis" process puts paint where spray can't reach—and an ordinary dipping process leaves air pockets. So, your Peugeot retains its bright, youthful look for many a year.

Then, upon arrival in Canada, your Peugeot gets still another anti-rust treatment—that you would normally have done at an extra cost to you.

You'll like the ride too. When you hit a bump, only the wheel moves up and down. Peugeot's four-wheel independent suspension gives you a much more comfortable ride.

Other big pluses are Peugeot's pre-heated carburetor that helps warm up the engine faster even in sub-zero weather. And Peugeot's new oversized starter, alternator, and battery. All special equipment for Canada.

Peugeot has been building cars and winning the affections of car-owners since 1889. Compare Peugeot with any other car. Then, with an open mind, open your wallet.

Gun-Shy Karate Expert Ends Up in Hospital

ANAHEIM, Calif. (UPI) — "I'm only going to tell you once. I hold a black belt in Karate," said Ty Ritter, 25, on March 3 to two holdup men who entered the all-night grocery store where he works.

Ritter told police then that karate was fine as a weapon against unarmed bandits, but he wouldn't try to use it against a man with a gun.

Another bandit entered the market Wednesday, armed with a revolver.

The bandit, angered that Ritter would keep a gun to deal with bandits, shot Ritter in the leg with his own pistol.

DURANTE
... stiff hoofing

LAS VEGAS — Jimmy Durante has opened his 56th year in show business here, using the same magic that worked so well when he began his career on Coney Island in Brooklyn in 1917.

Durante, 79, said after his opening show at the Sands Hotel Wednesday that he will continue performing "until the crowd tells me to quit."

The Schnozola, who began his career 55 years ago to the day as a piano player in a restaurant, drew three standing ovations.

ADELAIDE — A convicted killer who says he wants to die had his appeal to be hanged rejected by the South Australian state Supreme Court today.

Dennis Neil Lawrence, 45, a former salesman, claimed commutation of the death sentence on him to life imprisonment was invalid.

VANCOUVER — A hairdresser serving a 30-day sentence for advertising prices charged by his three salons was released from prison Wednesday on day parole.

Leonard Kosterow, 33, chose to go to jail last week rather than pay $375 fine for violating the British Columbia Hairdressers' Act which forbids advertising of prices.

Kosterow, who served the fifth day of his sentence Wednesday, said he has heard unofficially that his sentence may be cut to 14 days by the provincial Attorney-General's department.

MIAMI BEACH — Gabriel Heatter, who kept wartime audiences turned to their radios with "there's good news tonight," died today at the age of 81 at the Miami Heart Institute following a five-year illness.

WASHINGTON — U.S. Sen. Edmund S. Muskie has disclosed that from November, 1970 through January this year he received $2,027,840 in political contributions from 13,982 persons. The Maine senator was the fourth Democrat to disclose his contributions for the 1972 presidential contest. The others are Sen George S. McGovern of South Dakota, Mayor John V. Lindsay of New York, and Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota.

Charging that the disclosures are a grandstand play to build up a false campaign issue, Sen. Henry M. Jackson of Washington has refused to follow suit. Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama said Monday that he will list his contributors some time this week.

Pvt. Gankin, too surprised to shoot, clouted the bear on the head with the butt of his submachine gun, the newspaper Red Star said today. The bear fell down the stairs and broke its neck.

CHEQUES TO TRIGGER 'DOMESTIC WARFARE'

OTTAWA (CP) — The spectre of the home as a battleground was raised in the Commons Tuesday over the prospect that new family allowance benefits will go to husbands instead of wives.

If they do, Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West) predicted, Welfare Minister John Munro will be "responsible for the biggest outbreak of domestic warfare in our history."

Lambert said present payments go to mothers as a matter of course. New legislation, under debate in the House, does not stipulate this, he said.

Moscow Cabbies Retain Their Independence

By STEPHENS BROENING

MOSCOW (AP) — With the cardboard tip of a cigarette pinched between his gold teeth, the driver sped past the Central Market, narrowly missing a couple of pedestrians who made odd gestures at him with their arms.

He wheeled his five-year-old Volga round the corner and fled up the Garden Ring road. The earflaps on his shapka were down, and it was difficult to gauge his expression. Some thought he was grinning.

Behind the wheel was a Moscow cab driver known as "shef" or chief to his clients. He calls the traffic cops "nachalnik" — boss — to their faces. Out of earshot he calls them other things.

DO AS THEY PLEASE

Cab drivers appear to do pretty much as they please—taking or refusing fares according to whim or some free-enterprising design.

Officially, drivers-like coal miners or lathe operators—have a plan, a production target to fulfill.

The basic target for each of the city's 14,350 taxis is 13 hours' driving a day for an average distance of 300 kilometres, with no more than 50 kilometres of "kholostyak," riding "bachelor." A kilometre is about two-thirds of a mile.

With the meter clocking 10 kopeks a kilometre, that means a day's driving should gross about 30 rubles, or $36 at the official rate.

The drivers gets six of the first 10 kopeks of every fare, and three of each succeeding 10. If he drives a full 13 hour-shift, as many do, he'll take home about 10 rubles a day. "Shef" is not going to get rich that way.

From Siberia and Central Asia they arrive at Kazan Station loaded down with sacks and strings bags and paper suitcases. They once reminded somebody of a soldier who had just dropped from a plane with battle gear, so they're called "paratroopers," the drivers who work the stations consider them fair game to pay what the traffic will bear.

Another kind of specialist works the theatres and department stores trying to assemble passengers going the same direction. Instead of splitting the fare, each is expected to pay what the meter reads.

Not only is Ivan the cabbie elusive, Muscovites complain, but he's rude and doesn't know the city.

Literaturnaya Gazetta, which publishes the nearest thing to social comment in the Soviet Press, took a look at the cab situation recently and wrote:

"On Dec. 8, 1971, at 1906 hours an exceptional event took place. A cab driver agreed to stop and take a passenger. Without asking questions, the driver allowed the passenger to enter, and, according to all available evidence, he was willing to drive in any direction. . . ."

N.S. Budgets Deficit

HALIFAX (CP) — Finance Minister Peter Nicholson of Nova Scotia brought in his second deficit budget Wednesday, projecting a 34-million deficit on expenditures of $549.4 million and revenues of $545.4 million. Capital expenditures are estmated at $112.3 million.

The Liberal government also announced an increase in the price of beer, wine and spirits effective in April. It is already collecting increased personal income taxes, succession duties and gift taxes and has submitted legislation to impose a tax on transient accommodations.

Nicholson said the government cut departmental estimates by $56 million and he could have brought in a balanced budget, without further tax increases, by cutting services by another $4 million and taking a "slightly more optimistic view" of projected revenues. But he opted instead for a "true, unvarnished and undoctored" budget.

The Lost Ones

THEY NEED HOMES, BUT WHO NEEDS THEM?

By BRYAN McGILL
Times Staff

Wanted: Super parents. Fast. They must be interested, willing to try, have a strong constitution, a sense of humor, and an ability "not to faint at the drop of a four-letter word."

But they're not wanted for super children. Quite the contrary. They're needed for teen-agers who, are bored, passive, depressed, emotionally upset, but possessing potential.

Family and Children's Service workers revealed Wednesday at a press conference they have 30 teen-agers they need to place right away in foster homes. But there are no foster parents at hand.

The dilemma is getting worse, they said, as more and more teen-agers — the majority of them girls — are coming under care after leaving their unhappy homes, while more and more natural and foster parents become "turned off" by them.

Some girls who have been placed are "hanging in by their teeth" and could be back soon awaiting a new set of foster parents.

If these teen-agers are not placed in homes soon, they will eventually end up in "less than satisfactory situations" — in hostels, or lonely boarding house rooms, or even back at the source of their problems, their original homes, said Mrs. Melissa King, supervisor of the service's Receiving and Diagnostic Centre, 3914 Carey Rd.

A couple of them might end up in one of the service's group homes, but these are "plugged full." A new one, due to start up soon is accounted for even before the staff has been hired, Mrs. King said.

New Problem

The problem of teen-agers coming under care — a relatively new phenomenon of the last five or six years — is that "a lot of children are now feeling the pressure of freedom," said Lorne De Girolamo, a senior child care worker.

"They are pushing for a little more freedom and fighting against the controls of parents" — which creates conflicts and stress.

But, strangely enough, he said, they are in a lot of instances able to accept from foster parents the same kind of control they resent in their own homes.

Mrs. Marie Bradshaw, who does home recruitment for the service, said prospective foster parents snap up children under 10, but for a variety of reasons won't take teen-agers!"

"Many say they haven't had any experience with teen-agers. Some hesitate to bring these worldly-wise teen-agers among their own teen-agers. And some say 'I have just been through it all raising teen-agers!'"

And "it seems to be a time to hate teen-agers," added Ed Sibbald, an extended care counsellor.

Mrs. Bradahaw said that younger couples, those in their 20s, are providing the best response.

And they are able to form relationships with the teen-agers rather than impose parental controls, said De Girolamo.

The workers depicted the ideal foster parents as ones with stamina, "tolerance to accept the kid back after he goofs" and willingness "to wait a bit longer to get goodies from these children."

One "big key in being a super parent," said Mrs. King, is an ability to keep the teen-agers busy and working on their self-esteem.

"Every child here is bored to death. They will sit until a worker comes along and sets up a basketball game."

"This problem of ennui can't be solved by having them go to school, because they have dropped out and were in the back row since they started."

Activity Program

She said that staff members will soon be carrying out a day activity program which they hope will help solve the problem of these teen-agers driving foster parents "up the wall" with their passivity.

Staff members will bring to the foster teen-agers their own talents and hobbies like creative dance, drama, work and marine biology to get "a learning process going" where a child's self-image starts improving.

And for each teen-ager a foster parent takes in, there will be the support of a social worker, and a monthly provincial government payment of between $75 and $100 for room and board.

For more information on fostering, the service will hold an introductory session at 8 p.m. April 10 in the Junction Centre Building, 1627 Fort St.

Sex Mags: The Hangup Cure

NEW YORK (AP) — The next magazine you buy may just help you pinpoint your hangups, solve your emotional crises or explain what's wrong with your neurotic neighbor.

In a new spurt of do-it-yourself soul-searching, the American reading public is looking inward with the help of magazines whose titles sound like college sociology courses: Psychology Today, Society, Human Behavior and Sexual Behavior.

Some recent samplings of articles: Is it True What They Say About Harvard Boys; The Inner History of Richard Milhous Nixon; Are Homosexuals More Creative?; The Age of Encounter; and Sex at Harvard.

Besides an in-group repetitiveness of subjects ranging from the Harvard story to group sex and children's draw-a-car tests, the magazines share certain common identifying characteristics.

All are relatively expensive — $1 or $1.50 an issue, tend toward academic authors who frequently write in tandem, have small staffs and few ads — except for Psychology Today. And all claim readers who are basically healthy, well-educated, academically oriented and concerned.

"I think there is a sudden awakening to the behavioral sciences to get us out of the trouble we're in; physical technology won't do it," said Harvard behavioral psychologist B. F. Skinner.

His book, Beyond Freedom and Dignity, was excerpted first in Psychology Today and he later was the subject of a profile by his daughter, Julie Vargas in Human Behavior.

Dr. Zigmund Labensohn, a psychiatrist in Washington, D.C., praised the magazines for their efforts in creating "an informed public," but warned against possible dangers.

"The trouble is that many authors find that the only things that really sell have a certain element of sensationalism in them," he said.

"When you write about things like the primal scream, people read it and apply it to themselves. The well-balanced piece that gives information won't hurt. But I worry about the pieces that tend to give false hopes, half-truths and promise shortcuts. I distrust shortcuts."

Trusted or not, the magazines are growing vigorously.

"The social sciences are where the action is," says Ira Manson, publisher of Los Angeles-based Human Behavior. Its initial printing of more than 20,000 includes news magazine-style reports on alcoholism; psychodrama and nude theatre, to name a few.

Psychology Today, the chief product of the giant and successful CRM Corp. in Southern California is celebrating its fifth anniversary with a thriving circulation of 650,000 and its largest ad revenue ever.

"We've finally gotten around to the richest subject there is — the person," said editor T. George Harris, formerly of Look. "This is what news is all about."

Is Breast Cancer Hereditary?

CLEARWATER BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — If a young woman is found to have cancer in both breasts, a Texas researcher says almost half the other women in her family may be expected to contract the disease sometime during their lifetimes.

Dr. David E. Anderson of Houston, in effect, erased the old breast cancer risk rate charts this week when he presented new evidence about the nature of the disease to a science writers' seminar sponsored by the American Cancer Society.

Among other things, Anderson said his studies among the families of breast cancer patients show that there are at least two general types of breast cancer instead of just one as was formerly believed.

Up to now it had been assumed that about one in five women related to breast cancer victims could be expected to incur the disease.

But Anderson said his findings indicate "the chance could be as high as 45 per cent to some women, notably those who are related to cancer patients with premenopausal and multiple disease."

Anderson and his group at the M. D. Anderson Hospital and Tumor Institute have been working with the mothers, daughters and sisters of almost 200 families in compiling his statistics.

They found that there are two types of breast cancer, one which occurs in younger women before the menopause period and another which occurs afterward.

Also, Anderson said, genetic factors seem to play an important role with premenopausal patients with premenopausal cancer in both breasts. But he said he could not say at this point breast cancer is hereditary.

"It appears to be a genetic factor but that doesn't rule out the possibility of other factors as well," he said.

Anderson said the female relatives of young women with cancer in both breasts "are in the highest risk group" that has yet been identified in breast cancer. He urged women in that group to take advantage of new early detection techniques that can detect tumors the size of a pinpoint.

"If we find it at that stage we get 80 to 100 per cent cure," said a spokesman for the American Cancer Society.

Group to Fight Abortion Laws

A citywide campaign to get support for repeal of federal abortion laws will be conducted in May by the University of Victoria abortion action committee.

The campaign is part of a national "Petition Action Week" from May 1 to 6, sponsored by Canadian Women's Coalition for Repeal of Abortion.

The UVic committee announced Wednesday evening that it will form a Victoria community section of the coalition. A public meeting took place in the Student Union Building. Attendance was poor, with only committee members and two reporters attending. The national coalition, formed earlier this month in Winnipeg, supports the removal of abortion from the Criminal Code, sex education in the schools, information on birth control made available to all, and the right of each mother to decide if and when she wants a child.

The eight female undergraduates who make up the abortion action committee hope to get 4000 signatures by mid-May to a petition asking that abortion be removed from the criminal code. They already have 1350 signatures from people at the university.

The UVic committee will hold another meeting next Wednesday in hope of a bigger turnout.

If every boy and girl knew and applied some simple safety rules, many highway accidents could be prevented.

If you have a young child, you may want to send for the 16-page Highway Safety Code for Children. With the help of this gaily colored booklet you can explain how, where and when to cross the road and impress on him the other safety tips in this important little publication.

Your youngster will also learn how to avoid an accident when he boards or leaves a bus and when he plays or rides his bicycle.

$5 Wipes Out a Lot of Worry

By ANN DUNSMUIR
Times Staff

Despite jolly government advertisements that claim it's fun to fill out tax forms, most citizens remain sceptical. They look on this compulsory springtime rite with all the enthusiasm of a conservationist asked to approve "limited cutting" in provincial parks.

April is probably the only month of the year when householders wish they had more dependents eating them out of house and home. Even a live-in mother-in-law looks good at income tax time.

Tend to Panic

Citizens with a hazy grasp of basic arithmetic tend to panic when they see the form all those horrid little boxes that have to be filled with accurate numbers. The knowledge that the department may view any mistakes as "a serious offense" adds to their general sense of doom.

But it's comforting to know that income tax people take a charitable attitude toward well-meaning citizens who "make mechanical errors."

Paddy Muller, chief of assessing at the Victoria District Taxation Office, says there is no penalty for mechanical errors when a return is filed before the April 30 deadline.

"If a person late files, the penalty is 5 per cent of the tax owed," Muller said.

The penalty is more severe for people who don't report all their income. Under reporting of income is described as "gross negligence" in section 56 (2) of the Income Tax Act.

'Severe' View

Gross negligence results when "a person knowingly or in circumstances amounting to gross negligence" fails to report all income for the year.

Muller says the department is "fairly severe" about unreported income.

"Even oversights are taxed," he said.

As an example, he described the case when a citizen fails to list an income of $500.

"The increase in his tax would be $100, and he would also have to pay an increased tax levy penalty of 25 per cent of the increase in tax.

The department takes an even dimmer view of people who don't file income tax returns at all.

"Failure to file a return can lead to prosecution," Muller said.

Wage earners don't stand a chance when they neglect to file a return. The department gets a copy of each worker's T-4 slip from his employer and T-5 slips listing investment income from companies making payments to shareholders.

The first step in the collection process is a letter demanding that the black sheep return to the fold and file a return. If this is ignored, the result may be either prosecution or an arbitrary tax assessment accompanied by a demand for payment.

The department usually chooses arbitrary assessment.

"We are loath to prosecute," Muller said. "It's bad publicity."

Won't Write It

"We won't write it out for a little old lady because of the legal implications," Muller said.

Income tax consultants like Maurice Gillard, who works for a local firm, not only fill out forms for their clients but can often show them how to save a few tax dollars.

The cost of such service starts at $5 and rises according to the complication of your particular case.

For example, some people pay more Canada Pension than is necessary.

"People who work for more than one employer pay more pension than is required and can claim a refund for overpayment," Gillard said.

No Secrets

"We have no secrets. We just know what can be done and what can't," Gillard added.

A great many of his clients are confused elderly people. Many are recent widows who have never filled out a tax return before.

Apparently some little old ladies can be pretty unreasonable. On of them asked to wait a moment, stuffed all her papers back in her shopping bag and left in a huff because she had "come in between buses and her transfer would run out."

"Most people manage to hang on to T-5 slips listing bank interest and dividends because these come early in the year when income tax is on everybody's mind," Gillard said.

"And, a great many people don't realize they can deduct union dues and lose the receipts."

On the other hand clients tend to bring in quantities of receipts for medical and dental expenses that "can't be used.

Biggest Messes

"These expenses must exceed three per cent of net income."

Gillard says "the biggest messes" a tax consultant has to straighten out are small businesses.

Some businessmen don't keep proper records and "have figures jotted down here and there on odd scraps of paper."

For this type of businessman, the news that "the department is loath to prosecute" must be considerable comfort.

Chess Cure For Trouble

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ruth Cardoso, chess champion of Brazil, says there should be a chess board in every school "so young people could learn to be patient and to think logically." In Vancouver recently for the 1971 Canadian open chess championships, she said: "I think if more people would play chess there wouldn't be any wars; they could resolve their troubles on the board."

A 120-Pound Goldfish

JELLY SIDE DOWN
nancy stahl

If I were to announce my intention to smother my body in Jergen's Lotion and swim upstream to the headwaters of the Mississippi river to spawn, my husband's only concern would be over whether I would be home in time to fix supper.

But let me spend over 20 minutes in the tub, and he begins pacing frantically outside the bathroom door, pausing every 30 seconds to press his lips against the keyhole and whimper, "You are all right in there, aren't you?"

Now I have never heard of anyone coming to grief while lying perfectly still in two feet of warm water. Getting in and out of bathtubs is the dangerous part. Unless someone else carelessly drops an electric can opener into the water, one could probably spend several weeks in a bathtub without suffering anything more serious than a rather pronounced skin pucker. In fact, the bathtub has proven to be safer than the bed. Aerial photos of bombed cities invariably show the plumbing towers unscathed while the rest of the house is reduced to a mass of rubble.

Occasionally my husband disguises his concern with a bit of sarcasm such as "How long do you intend to lie there in a pool of your own scummy ick?"

This reference to the day's flotsam and jetsam, now rendered aquatic and floating idly on the surface of the water like an oil slick off the Santa Barbara coast, would perhaps make a novice bather leap from the tub babbling in disgust.

It takes a veteran bather to dismiss such petty remarks with a curt rejoiner such as, "Until they repeal the income tax," and resume dreamy speculation as to whether the bandage bobbing around by her left kneecap had been there when she drew the bath.

To be fair, I must admit that I often doze off in the tub. Despite repeated assurances that I always wake up when my nostrils slip below the water line, my husband is convinced that if he relaxes his vigil for a moment he will find me floating belly up like a goldfish.

Having a 120-pound goldfish cluttering up your only tub is untidy enough, but the whole unfortunate incident would necessitate a police investigation:

"Why did you suddenly miss your wife after 17 hours?"

Painting Stolen

PARIS (AP) — Five paintings by French masters were stolen Wednesday from a gallery just off the Avenue des Champs Elysees. The gallery director, Jacques Verriere, estimated the value of the paintings by Bonnard, Renoir, Utrillo, Derain and Boudin at $586,000.

Indefinite Proposal

DEAR ABBY: About a week ago my boy friend and I finally set our wedding date. Nobody was surprised because we had been going together nearly three years.

My mother asked me how he proposed to me, and I told her I didn't think he proposed at all. She looked at me like I was crazy, and asked, "You didn't propose to him, did you?"

Then we got into a big discussion, and I told her that nobody proposed to anybody, we decided a long time ago to be married. My mother insisted there had to be a "proposal." I still can't remember any.

Can it be that proposals have gone out of style? Please put your answer in the paper. My mother still thinks I'm crazy. And sign me — "Getting Married Without a Proposal," or Sally J.

DEAR SALLY: You're not crazy. I'll bet that nine out of ten couples who have gone together for a long time have no recollection of a "proposal." (If any of you readers can recall the time, place (and words) of your proposal, I'd like to hear from you.)

DEAR ABBY: I do not want to go to my funeral! I have devised the following plan to avoid it:

While my funeral service is being preached at the church, I have instructed the undertaker to take my body to the cemetery and bury it. Should anyone care to look at my grave after the services have been concluded at the church, they may do so.

It is grief enough to lose a loved one without having to follow a closed box in and out of the church, and then slowly to the cemetery. And then have to stand there and watch it lowered into the ground.

Not for me! Some of my family think I am nuts. What do you think? I'd like the opinions of others, too. — Mrs. M.B.B.

DEAR MRS. B.: I am with those of your family who do not think you are "nuts."

Jail 'Grad' Has It Tough

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — The first "graduate" of the Yoke Crest — an experimental prison without bars, locks or guards — says the pressure there was so great he was tempted to return to a regular prison to finish his time.

"It was the toughest thing I've ever done in my life," George Dabrow said. "Now I look back and it's the greatest thing in my life."

That pressure is what Yoke Crest is all about. It's generated by a psychological program that's at work 24 hours a day and stresses peer therapy such as group-encounter sessions.

The prison is a three-storey house in the middle of a residential area a few blocks from downtown Harrisburg. Neighborhood children play in the big yard.

Darbow, 32, was transferred to Yoke Crest last August from a suburban prison where he was serving one to two years for conspiracy to defraud.

After a few weeks in Yoke Crest, he was allowed to leave for short visits with his family. In December, with the help of the staff, he got a job as a driver for a state cabinet member, returning to Yoke Crest after work.

Recently, Dabrow was allowed to return permanently to his wife and three children in nearby Mechanicsburg. He's required to visit Yoke Crest periodically for more therapy and he's keeping his chauffeur job.

Dabrow was the first successful milestone of the Yoke Crest idea. Twenty-five convicts are there now.

'Go Fetch My Slippers, You Super-Tranquillizer'

NEW YORK (UPI) — One expert on human behavior now turns his expertise to a dog's life and why people help him lead it.

Dr. Ernest Dichter, noting that the pet population and pet food sales are booming, asks why in a supposed convenience age people put up with the extra work and nuisance of keeping pets.

The answers are several, especially in relation to dogs, says Dichter. A dog may be better than a mood pill, a kind of super-tranquillizer. You may come home tired and cantankerous. The rest of the family barks at you but the dog does not. He keeps his good mood, calms you down and stays faithful, no matter how grouchy you are.

Dichter, head of the Institute for Motivational Research, Inc., Croton-On-Hudson, N.Y., writes in the current "Findings," an institute publication, that a dog's appeal also is in his almost perpetual youth. "A dog is almost a denial of death. A dog may be the equivalent of 70 years old and still (be) lively and bouncing. The continued high spirits of a 'senior citizen' dog is reassuring to the owner, a kind of hope that declining powers aren't necessarily inevitable."

A dog offers sort of a permanent parenthood. Even as he grows up and older, says Dichter, he continues to need to be taken care of — fed, walked, bathed, brushed and petted, in contrast to the frustration feeling of many parents with their children.

Children, in turn, after years of loving care suddenly revolt, become difficult to live with and eventually cut the apron strings entirely — no longer needing the services and advice of their parents.

A dog offers "free" love. With your family — if you don't remember your wife's or husband's anniversary, if you don't understand your children — you may lose their love very quickly. But all you have to do is feed and pet a dog and he'll love you forever.

Dogs reward your training and work. When you train them, they stay trained. Children on the other hand start to develop minds of their own and start revolting against you. Dogs don't and there are few other situations in life where the individual can continuously enjoy a sense of mastery.

U.S. Gives Boost to Working Mother

NEW YORK (UPI) — Sometimes it hardly pays for a woman to work outside the home, by the time she totes up child care expenses, the cost of extra clothes, transportation, lunch at the office and the fact that her earnings might push the family into a high income bracket.

Now, Uncle Sam has changed the tax rules for benefit of working wives, widows or divorcees, who number more than 24 million according to U.S. Labor Department count.

The changes won't affect your 1971 returns, but could mean substantial savings in 1972 returns. The changes in the internal revenue code permit a whole new range of deductions for the care of dependents both in and out of the home while the wage earner goes to work.

If you qualify under the new rules for dependents you can increase your take home pay immediately by filing for another exemption where you work. And remember, keep detailed records of spending throughout 1972.

Outline of the new rules is contained in the current Consumer Views," a publication of New York's First National City Bank. Its editors worked with the Internal Revenue Service in putting it together.

Just who benefits? Families with working mothers do, as do women who are heads of households, fathers raising children alone, and many working couples and individuals caring for dependent adults.

Luxuries Out

The children must be under 15 and an older dependent must be living with them and must be physically or mentally incapable of taking care of himself. This would include an incapacitated father, mother, grandparent or other relative as well as a spouse (say an aged husband or invalid wife).

The new deductions may be taken only if they enable the taxpayer to be gainfully employed. The cost of a nursemaid who frees you to go to a party or see the opera cannot be deducted.

The deductible household service expenses have not yet been spelled out in detail by the treasury department. But many experts say they include the salary of a housekeeper or maid, even though she does many other things around the house, besides chid care, the costs for a cleaning woman, a laundress and in some cases a cook.

But Consumer Views points out that wages for a gardener, chauffeur or bartender are not deductibe.

How about outside-the-house expenses? These must be only for the benefit of a child under 15. Permissible deductions include charges for a day care centre, group day care, nursery school, private kindergarten, after-school play group, day camp and babysitting in someone else's home.

No School Fees

Not permitted are costs of private schools from first grade up. There are limits on the amounts you may deduct. The total allowable is $400 a month, no matter how many dependents, for both inside and outside services.

There are certain deductions if incapacitated dependents 15 and over have income so check your tax expert on how this will affect you.

For outside services alone the deductions are only for dependents under 15 and there are lower limits. $200 monthly for one dependent, $300 for two, and $400 for three or more.

A married working mother and her husband both must work fulltime during the month for which they claim the child care deduction — "fulltime" means employed for three quarters or more of the customary work week.

There is one big limit for many people in the new tax laws. Consumer Views says a married couple or a single taxpayer gets the full deduction only if adjusted gross income is under $18,000 a year. For the couple earning an adjusted gross over $27,000, there are no deductions.

Janitor Fills In For Magistrates

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — Couples who want to get married right after they get their marriage licenses in St. Louis' city hall are turning for help to the nearest janitor.

The janitor is the Rev. Louie C. Johnson and he is about the only person on the premises able and willing to do the job.

Missouri Attorney General John C. Danforth ruled recently that judges and magistrates cannot accept fees for marriages.

Consequently, judges and magistrates in the St. Louis area have refused to perform marriages. Many couples obtain their marriage licenses at city hall, then are disappointed to learn no one will marry them immediately.

Couples who want fast action, however, can talk to the woman sitting at the elevator control console in the lobby. She will direct them to the Rev. Mr. Johnson, who may be waxing a floor or sweeping out a courtroom.

"I've never turned down anyone who asked me to marry them," he said. "I usually perform about three or four marriages a month.

"But last week I had three in the space of a few days. I don't know why, but it could be the attorney general's recent ruling."

The Rev. Mr. Johnson, 53, is bishop of the Christ Temple First Church.

"I take them into an empty courtroom, and they're married in about 10 minutes," he said.

"It's really quite routine. Some people who haven't been able to pay anything at the wedding have sent me a few dollars or dropped something off later; others haven't. I'm happy to help them out."

View Changes On the Bench

WHITEHORSE, Y.T. (CP) — "Your outlook is completely changed when you're in that position," says Ione Christensen, a justice of the peace for the Yukon Territory who was named the Yukon's only female judge of the juvenile court last summer. The 36-year-old Whitehorse housewife says of her courtroom duties: "You have a tremendous respect for people's rights . . . they're not criminals, they're you or I or the neighbors. You have to protect them, and the public of course."

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

What Is Easter All About, Really?

REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

The disciples of Jesus were completely unnerved by his crucifixion. They could not understand what had happened. It had happened so quickly.

One of their number betrayed him to the authorities. Then the sudden, swift trials. With unjust haste he was hanged on a cross — and in three hours he was dead.

This was not what the disciples had expected. Their master, whom they believed to be the Messiah sent by God for the salvation of all men, had been ignominiously put to death as a common criminal.

And probably they feared for their own safety: after all, they had been his accomplices.

Then on the third day some of Jesus' women followers went to the tomb in which his body had been laid, taking with them spices for the neglected office of embalment. They found the stone which closed the tomb rolled away. They stood there, incredulous and perplexed and frightened.

Theyn, as Luke tells the story, two men in dazzling apparrel appeared and said to them, "Why do you seek the living among the dead? He is not here but has risen."

The women sought out the disciples and told them about this strange experience. But, as Luke reports, "These words seemed to them an idle tale, and they did not believe them."

Very slowly the disciples came out of their despair and doubt and came to accept the fact that the crucifixion was not the end of Jesus. And it was out of their awareness of the risen Christ, out of their experience of the Resurrection, that came the Christian faith and the Christian Church.

The details of the Ressurrection, its means and its mechanics, are shrouded in the mists of history. There are serious inconsistencies in the accounts of the event given in the four Gospels. But the reality of the Resurrection-experience of the followers of Jesus persists.

The rise of the Christian movement, including the writing and selection of the documents which comprise the New Testament, can be accounted for only in terms of the Ressurrection-experience.

Christian faith is not simply a matter of approving a body of teaching given out in Palestine nearly 20 centuries ago. The Church is not simply a memorial society, a sort of Jesus fan club. The Church is the community of the Resurrection, a fellowship created and carried through the centuries by experience of its living Lord.

Easter is the festival of the Resurrection. Only incidentally is it an occasion for us to think about our own life after death. Only coincidentally is it a time for rejoicing over the passing of winter and the coming of spring. The authentic meaning of Easter is established not in parade but in prayer.

Easter Services Outlined

St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Cathedral will hold a vigil service Saturday, beginning at 11:30 a.m. The "new fire," the Easter candle and baptismal water will be blessed. The congregation will be invited to renewal their baptismal promises.

Sir John Stainer's oratorio The Crucifixion will be presented Good Friday at 7 p.m. in St. Martin's-in-the-Field Anglican Church.

The performance will be an ecumenical one with choirs of St. Martin and Garden City United Churches taking part, along with men from Emmanuel Baptist and Arion choirs.

Soloists will be William Broadhead of Christ Church Cathedral, James Oakman of Emmanuel Baptist and Ken Hope of St. Martin's.

Ken Nelson is conductor and organist is Mrs. Ruth Powell.

The same group performed the oratorio in Garden City United Church on Palm Sunday.

A special invitation to visitors has been issued by Rev. Alan Beaton to attend a 10:20 a.m., Good Friday service in Knox Presbyterian Church.

Other special events Friday include the presentation of the St. John Passion at 11 a.m. by the church choir in Belmont United Church and the Nelson Mass of Haydn at 8 p.m. in St. John's Anglican Church. Taking part will be boys' choirs of St. John's and Glenlyon Boys' School, accompanied by the Victoria Conservatory of Music orchestra, directed by John Gallienne.

Boyd Hood of the University of Victoria's music department, will play the aria from Handel's Messiah, The Trumpet Shall Sound, at an 11 a.m. Easter Sunday service in the Church of Our Lord.

Organists will be Charles Dorrington and Frances Carter.

Visitors will be welcomed to a special Easter meeting of the Metropolitan United Church Women, to be held 2 p.m. Monday in the chapel.

Mrs. Geoffrey Smith will speak on Easter '72. Soloist will be Mrs. Harold Robinson. Tea will be served later in the woman's parlor.

Classification Replaces Censorship

By VICTOR STANTON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Censorship is out; classification is in.

That, essentially, is the new outlook of groups and individuals appointed by provincial governments to decide what Canadians will or will not see on their movie-theatre screens.

A Cross-Canada Survey by The Canadian Press shows that of the eight provinces with some form of movie-censoring body, only three—Nova Scotia, Manitoba and Alberta—retain the title of censor board, and Manitoba's is an interim body awaiting government legislation to change it to a classification board.

Of the other five provinces, New Brunswick and Saskatchewan have classification boards, Quebec has a cinema supervisory board, Ontario censorship is in the hands of the theatres branch of the provincial department of tourism and information and British Columbia has a classification director.

B.C. pinpoints the fact that whatever the name, censorship is still the game by also having a censorship appeal board, whose function it is to support or overrule the decisions of the classification director.

Censor's Shears Wielded

The emphasis in all the provinces is on deletions of what is considered unsuitable in a film rather than the outright banning of the film.

To this end, rating systems have been adopted in all provinces.

Nova Scotia has three classes: Restricted to 18 years and over; not suitable for children; and general audiences.

New Brunswick rates movies as general (suitable for any age), adult (a warning to parents that there may be some scenes of violence or sex some may not want their children to see) and restricted (theatres may not legally admit anyone under 18 who is not accompanied by a parent or guardian).

Films in Quebec are rated: For all ages; adolescents (14 years and up), and adult (18 years and up).

Ontario has no specified category for films suitable to all ages, but puts an adult entertainment label on those the theatres branch considers should not be seen by children unless accompanied by an adult, and a restricted tag on those for which it sets a minimum age limit of 18 years.

Manitoba has general, adult and restricted categories, as does British Columbia.

Saskatchewan has the maximum number of ratings of any province: General; adult (little interest for children but they can attend); adult—not suitable for children (an advisory category); restricted (closed to children unless accompanied by a parent or legal guardian); and X (closed to all persons under 18).

Alberta's Four Categories

Categories in Alberta include: Family; adult not suitable for chidren (used to warn parents about the movie and let them use their own discretion); adult (no one under 16 permitted unless accompanied by a parent or guardian); and restricted adult (no one under 18 admitted).

Only in Quebec do the classification ratings also apply to videotape theatres.

In other provinces which have theatres that show videotapes of films on ordinary television screens, the theatre operators are outside the jurisdiction of the censor or classification boards.

In addition to the ratings, which movie theatre operators are required to display on al advertising for the films they show, advertisements for some movies have included an advisory notice that they may contain subject matter or language—or both—that "may offend some movie-goers."

Ray McDonald, B.C.'s classification director, has said in a public statement that providing information about films should be the only role of cassification boards.

He said he refuses to look at his job as that of a guardian of public morality.

"I consider that morality is essentialy a concept of religion and belongs most properly to the private conscience of the adut individual. What might be considered obscene, indecent or immoral to some peope may offer no offence whatever to others."

Mr. McDonald, 55, said he believes there will aways be a need for film classifications for information purposes only because people have the right to know in advance what kind of movie they are going to see.

Classification Preferred

A. Y. Goss, 51-year-old chairman of the New Brunswick classification board, expressed a similar viewpoint:

"I don't feel by banning films we're going to solve anything. People will accept cassification of films. They will not accept censorship any longer."

O. J. Siverthorne, 63-year-old head of the Ontario theatres branch and a 38-year veteran in the job, doesn't believe there can be such a thing as a "free cinema" without censorship, although when it comes to names he has often been quoted as saying he prefers the title classification officer to censor.

To the question of why fims should be censored at all, he repies:

"Would you like us to pass everything and just put a label on it? It's impossible."

What does he think the effect of a "free cinema" might be?

"I think there woud be a lot more raping, wouldn't there? Bunch of pigs making fims. We'd be well advised to be in the department of justice, with al the obscenity and pornography going on."

Mr. Siverthorne says, however, that "brutality in films is more harmful than sex, much more harmful."

Mr. Silverthorne heads one of the largest boards, with seven members, including two women, the youngest 26 years old. His salary of $20,000 a year is probably the highest in his field in Canada, although no salary is available for the head of the seven-member Quebec board.

Manitoba's interim body has nine members, but proposals before the government call for a permanent board of five.

New Brunswick has a six-member board, and Mr. Goss, its head, is paid $9,400 annually, including compensation for his duties as amusement tax inspector.

Boards in Nova Scotia, Saskatchewan and Aberta all have three members, as does the appeal board in B.C.

Mr. McDonald earns $11,340 in B.C. whie the head of the Alberta board has a salary range of $11,448 to $14,448. In Nova Scotia salaries for all three members total about $25,000.

Pact Returns Turbo-Train to Service for 3 Years

MONTREAL (CP) — An agreement has been signed providing for return to service of Canada's first turbine-powered passenger train early in 1973 for three years.

The agreement was reached between Canadian National Railways, which will operate the service between Montreal and Toronto, and United Aircraft of Canada, the owners of the turbotrain.

The trains will be modified before being placed in commercial service for a three-year period during which Canadian National would evaluate the economic and performance results.

President N. J. MacMillan of CN and President T. E. Stephenson of United Aircraft announced the agreement Wednesday.

Modifications by United Aircraft will be followed by a series of operating tests during which the trains will travel about 15,000 miles.

Canadian National said the planned modification program will improve the reliability of the super-streamlined train.

The turbotrain service was introduced on the Montreal-Toronto run Dec. 12, 1968, but the trains were removed Jan. 6, 1969, for modifications required for winter operations.

Following the modification program, three of the five trains first introduced were returned for another test period starting May 25, 1970, with morning service in each direction. On June 22, 1970, afternoon service between the two cities was added.

However, on Feb. 1, 1971, the trains were again taken out of service when the railway found their reliability had declined because of mechanical difficulties.

Original estimates were that the trains, to be leased to CN by United Aircraft with an option to purchase, would cost about $10 million each but delays and modifications have increased the cost by several million dollars.

The turbotrain was designed to cover the 335-mile Montreal-Toronto journey in four hours, five minutes cutting nearly an hour off the time required by the CN's Rapido.

Under the new agreement, the trains will be modified to provide three nine-car trains rather than the previous five seven-car units. The additional cars will increase the carrying capacity by each train to about 400 passengers.

In addition, a number of mechanical changes will be made on the equipment, including an increase in horsepower.

Natural Perfumes Often Neglected

As you proceed with redesigning the garden for more outdoor living, give many thoughts to fragrant plants.

Today we tend to neglect natural perfumes in favor of, or because of, unnatural pollutants assailing our noses from all quarters, but within our own gardens surely we should still enjoy plant fragrances.

Supposing you have already the background layout of paved area, overhead shelter, and some of your favorite shrubs moved to new position, you still lack small plantings near the place where you hope to spend leisure evening and weekend hours.

This is where fragrant perennials come into the picture. Once put into the garden, provided with the small amount of care they need twice annually, they continue in their appointed job of delivering their fragrance for several years.

Herbaceous perennials are plants having soft stems usually dying back to ground level in fall, roots remaining more or less dormant in winter, and producing new growths from the same roots each spring.

If these plants are to continue giving us plentiful growth, lovely flowers and the perfume we planted them for, we must lift the roots from the ground about every fourth year, remove the newer portions for replanting into compost enriched soil, and discard the woody wornout pieces.

Among this class of perennials are only a few which have fragrance.

* * *

Lily-of-the-Valley (Convallaria majalis) makes a wonderfully fragrant groundcover for a partially shady bed near a patio or terrace. The flowers are prolific with their heady perfume in late May and early June. For the rest of the season the eight-inch-high foliage effectively covers the soil, requiring only a thorough soaking once a month in summer.

For a sunny bed on another side of the patio nothing gives more fragrance for a longer period than pinks and carnations, members of the genus Dianthus, if you choose them specifically for fragrance.

Dianthus Inchmery, once a great favorite in Victoria, has more robust foliage and blooms with a clove scene, as do the various seedling forms of Dianthus Winteri.

Of more permanence than these since they do not need reviewing are fragrant Peonies and Daylilies (Hemorocallis).

The peony variety Sarah Bernhardt is probably the most perfumed peony ever raised; while Hemerocallis flava, the Lemon-Daylily, imparted its fragrance to many of its newer offspring.

Fragrant perennials must be searched for and cared for if we are to enjoy their loveliness in our leisure gardens of the present and of the future.

SOLUTION MONDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

One of the six federal careerists chosen for the 1971 Rockefeller Public Service Awards was Samuel M. Cohn, of Falls Church. Mr. Cohn, or "Mr. Budget," as he is known to top-echelon government officials, is the Assistant director for Budget Review in the Office of Bureau and Management. In the award to him, it stated that he has been "a source of significant assistance to effective presidential management since the Truman era."

In the early 1950s, Cohn was an up-and-coming top-level tournament bridge player. One of his regular partners in those days was Robert Jordan of Philadelphia, who, since that time, has on many occasions represented the United States in World Championship play, and is currently considered to be one of the world's top-ranking players.

However, owing to the demands of his increasing governmental responsibilities, Cohn was forced to give up bridge completely. During the past dozen years, he has not played at all, although he still keeps abreast of the new developments in the game by reading bridge literature.

Here is an example of Cohn in action. The deal came up in a tournament in 1953. He was sitting South. I happened to be his partner.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ◇.

When West opened the diamond three, Cohn assumed that an "honest" lead was being made, namely the fourth-from-the-highest in the longest suit. Thus West had exactly four diamonds, since the deuce was in evidence in dummy. Cohn promptly put up dummy's ace — and felled East's king.

It now became a routine matter to drive out West's ace of hearts and claim the contract with three overtricks. When the scores were posted, it was observed that of the 13 times the deal was played, Cohn was the only one who had made 12 tricks.

Why did he put up the diamond ace instead of finessing against West's presumed king? Well, he had correctly assumed that West had exactly four diamonds. If they were the K-x-x-x, then he could play low on the opening lead and win the trick with his queen. He would now take another successful finesse but West would still have the guarded king remaining.

Thus, by playing low from dummy on the initial diamond lead, Cohn could never win more than five diamond tricks. By putting up the ace instead, there existed the outside chance that West's singleton diamond was the king. And so it was.

'Break Up Universities'—Study

the prairies

CALGARY (CP) — Universities should be gradually broken up and replaced by independent degree-granting schools and liberal arts colleges, says a report commissioned by the Council of Ministers of Education of Canada.

The 450-page report says universities are research-oriented with professors devoting much of their time to specialized knowledge that students cannot absorb.

A seven-man committee headed by Dr. Stephen Peltchinis, an economics professor at the University of Calgary, wrote the report after a year of investigating the financing of post-secondary education.

The reports suggested liberal arts colleges offer three-year programs and the first and second years of four-year programs.

The schools would offer degrees in economics, dental hygiene and other applied fields.

Universities have become detached from the community and students they are supposed to serve, the report said, and have acquired "all the undesirable characteristics of big business and big government."

A large number of students drift into universities not because they want to be there but "for lack of suitable education alternatives which do not require prior commitment to a program."

Some of the aimlessness is the result of inadequate and "frequently misleading" counselling high schools but much of the problem could be solved by liberal arts colleges and specialized schools.

Immunity Remains

WINNIPEG (CP) — Radio and television coverage of proceedings in the legislature will not affect immunities enjoyed by MLAs, Attorney-General Al Mackoing told the legislature Wednesday.

At the present time, no member can be held liable to civil action, arrest, imprisonment or damages as the result of anything he says in the legislature or in any of its committees.

Church Head Dies

WINNIPEG (CP) — Metropolitan Ilarion, head of the Ukrainian Greek Orthodox Church of Canada, died Wednesday night in hospital. He was 89.

The spiritual head of more than 300 churches in Canada died of congestive heart failure after being admitted to hospital last week.

Dumping Charged

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta egg producers charged Tuesday that Edmonton firms are dumping their eggs into the province's surplus removal program and replacing them with eggs brought in from Winnipeg at about half the price.

The charges were made at the annual meeting of the Alberta Commercial Egg Producers' Association.

Prize Bulls

'Greater Upheaval'

WINNIPEG (CP) — The senate's proposed guaranteed annual income program would only create more poverty if implemented, Dr. Morris C. Shumiatcher said Tuesday.

Dr. Shumiatcher, author of Welfare: Hidden Blacklash, said the guaranteed annual income would produce "greater social upheaval and discontent because there would still be discrepancies between those receiving the guaranteed minimum income and other income levels."

Railway Blamed

EDMONTON (CP) — There was sharp disagreement Tuesday on whether Northern Alberta Railways' Edmonton-Dawson Creek, B.C., passenger service is dying a natural death.

Edmonton Mayor Ivor Dent told a Canadian Transport Commission public hearing the railway itself is helping to kill the service. The commission was holding a one-day hearing on the NAR's application to discontinue the 490-mile passenger run through the Peace River country.

Higher Taxes

EDMONTON (CP) — The average property tax of city home owners will increase at least $8 more this year than earlier expected, the public school board was told Tuesday night.

The $8 increase, which would make the average tax bill $64.75 higher than in 1971, results from a higher than expected increase in the provincial property assessment for the school foundation program.

Ney Splashes Into Art World

DUNCAN — Nanaimo Mayor Frank Ney's self-caricature won first prize in the mayors' art contest at the Cowichan Valley Regional Arts Council's second annual Easter Arts Fair which opened here Wednesday.

In his drawing Ney depicted himself as "Frank the Painter," wondering how he should start a painting of the Nanaimo bathtub races. His wife, standing behind him with a tin of household paint, suggests he start on the ceiling.

The mayor's contest, introduced this year, was one of the highlights at the official opening of the event Wednesday evening.

Mayors Frances Elford of Oak Bay, B. R. All, Lake Cowichan, Jim Quaife, Duncan, and Gerry Smith, North Cowichan, all received honorable mention for their entries.

The public will be able to view the exhibits from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. until Saturday at the Curling rink on James Street. Exhibits jumped from last year's total of 212 to 368.

Tonight's entertainment will be the Cowichan Valley Concert Orchestra, on Friday the Bakkus rock band and Saturday's will be Margot and Sheila Marley, accordionists.

All entertainment is from 7:30 to 9 p.m.

Weight Loss Mounts Up

KOPS queen, (Keep Off Pounds Sensibly) Lorraine Jent who lost 16 pounds and has kept them off for six months; Joyce Hayes who lost 63½ pounds in eight months; Milly Mawby who lost 38½ pounds; Joan Bronson lost 31¾ pounds and Delores Boutilier and Marion Laird, 17 pounds.

New leader Yvonne Cahoon and co-leader Joan Bronson will take over running the Duncan branch in April.

Politicians To Give Talks

Forthcoming general meetings of Victoria Chamber of Commerce will be addressed by politicians.

New leader of B.C. Progressive Conservatives, Derril T. Warren, is featured at an April 12 meeting in Empress Hotel.

Jean-Luc Pepin, federal minister of trade and commerce, will attend a May 8 meeting in Strathcona Hotel.

Both are luncheons, set for 12:10 p.m.

The Lord is my shepherd: I shall not want.
He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.
He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.
Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies; thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.
Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to thank all relatives and friends, Doctors, nurses, and staffs of both the Royal Jubilee and the Queen Victoria Hospitals, for care and devotion during my wife's illness over the past years. Dear Marie Catherine Skuce was a kind and loving companion, a devoted homemaker, sadly missed and remembered by her husband Richard, daughter Eileen and Paul. In God we trust. — Sincerely, Richard Skuce.

We wish to express our sincere thanks and appreciation to our many friends who were so kind to us during our recent bereavement in the loss of our beloved, Mrs. Daisy Kissinger. Special thanks to Rev. Cyril Venables and the pallbearers. — Husband, Leonard; son, Fred, Stanley; daughter, Mrs. V? (Nicky) Huth; sister, Maude, and good friend, Mrs. Jessie Champion.

The parents and sister of the late Karl Wolfgang Ladinig, wish to express their grateful thanks to the many friends who so kindly contributed to the Narcotic Addiction Foundation of B.C. in his memory.

9 IN MEMORIAM

GRIFFITHS — In loving memory of a dear son and brother — passed away March 31, 1970.
Time speeds on, two years have passed,
Since death its gloom, its shadow cast,
Within our home, where all seemed bright
And took from us a shining light.
We miss that light, and ever will,
His vacant place, there's none to fill,
Down here we mourn, but not in vain,
For up in heaven we'll meet again.
Sadly missed and Always remembered, Mom and Dad — Beverley and Keith.

WOOD — In loving memory of our dear father and grandfather Henry James (Harry) Wood, passed away March 4, 1937 and our dear mother and grandmother Corilla Jane Ellen Wood, passed away March 30, 1968.
To hear their voice and see their smile,
To sit and talk with them awhile,
To be together in the same old way,
Would be our dearest wish today.
—Ever remembered by their sons, daughters and grandchildren.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

An Interesting New Type of Surgery

In Time magazine recently, I saw an article about a remarkable experiment in which a little girl was helped in an interesting way. The girl of five kept having one serious infection after another since she was born. During one 18-month period, she was hospitalized nine times with dangerous infections, including a pneumonia. It was doubtful she could survive.

Dr. Arthur Ammann, of the University of California's Medical Centre in San Francisco, concluded that the child's problem was that her thymus gland (a bit of specialized tissue that lies just back of the breast-bone) had not developed. This gland has much to do with the protection from infection, particularly in children. Dr. Ammann then transplanted a thymus gland taken from a fetus that had become available when a woman was given a therapeutic abortion. This operation worked perfectly, and ever since, the litttle girl has been doing well.

It will be interesting to see if more such operations will be performed in the future.

AVOID MEDICINE IN EARLY PREGNANCY

Recently, I have read of women who were given some strong drug or were vaccinated against some disease during the first two months of pregnancy. Apparently, as a result, their infants were born badly damaged, mentally or physically. I wish every woman who has any chance of becoming pregnant will be very careful to avoid taking strong drugs, if this is possible. And they should not be vaccinated. It is during the first weeks — perhaps even before the woman realizes that she has become pregnant — when the most damage can be done to the developing fetus as a result of taking chemicals.

Today several of the physicians who have been studying the effects of marijuana have become worried over the possibility that smoking it during the first two months of pregnancy can cause the fetus to be badly injured. Some mothers who smoked pot during early pregnancy have given birth to severely damaged infants. But it will take time before we know that the damage was due to the marijuana. In the meantime, a young woman who is likely to miss a period any day would be wise not to smoke pot. By the time she knows that she is pregnant, a terrible injury to her child may have taken place. Smoking regular tobacco can injure a tiny fetus, also, causing it to be born so small that it may die shortly after birth.

VAN ISLE MARINA
COMMAND BRIDGE CRUISER
Everybody wants a flying bridge — this boat has it — sure it has been added to an older 33 ft. planked hull cruiser. Has a 225 h.p. GREY Marine engine, only 275 hrs. since major overhaul. Fully carpeted, dual controls, sleeps 6, stand-up head, and galley you can move around in. The asking price is $12,500, and with a few more dollars you can have a $35,000 boat, a real family cruiser.
We have a 20 ft. fiberglass boat, only 1½ yrs. old, only 130 hrs. of operation since new. Owner says sell — not a mark on her. Everything top condition. Great family fun boat. Sacrifice.
Here is a 32 ft. GRENFELL design aft cabin cruiser in new condition. You can go wherever and return in real comfort. Cruises 17 knots, max., 24 knots. Sleeps 6, with lots of goodies already on. Teak deck, mahogany planked. Owner has acquired another boat and says sell now, asking $28,500.
Come and let us show you.
These are only a few of our wide selection of used boats. If you want to buy or sell, let us do the work. Come out and see STEVE WURSTER and JACK FALKINS for assistance.

COASTLINE TRAILER
CENTRE
642 Burnside Road

Where you'll find the most complete range of travel trailer floor plans — styles and prices, in greater Victoria. On display now trailers from 15' to 27'.

"KUSTOM KOACH"
The Canadian built trailer that offers more standard features than most trailers have options. Features like: eye-level ovens, 10 gal. hot water heaters, spare tire, carrier, and cover, built-in stabilizers, 12 volt lights in the luggage compartments, 30 lb. tanks plus much more.

"TRAVELAIRE"
Since 1963 this trailer has been considered Canada's number one travel trailer because of its style, towability and honest to goodness top value.

"NOMAD"
The travel trailer that cost you a lot less money than most, yet gives you a top quality trailer you'd be proud to own. Try and beat this 22 foot model for value. Standard equipment includes furnace, 3-way fridge, hot water heater, shower, tandem axle, double sinks, full price only $4395.00.

BBC Orders Cutback on Gore

LONDON (AP) — The BBC has ordered producers to soften violence and bloodletting on the television screens—even in news bulletins.

Color television has added to the impact of violence by making a sight of bright red blood even more horrific, it emphasized.

The clampdown came in a new code of stricter rules governing television violence, written by David Attenborough, BBC television programs director.

The new code, which replaces one written 12 years ago, comes amid mounting concern over television violence and permissiveness. It followed a BBC-sponsored survey which said half the TV programs shown in Britain contained some violence. Sixty per cent of them were U.S. imports.

The 13-page code was seen as a first step by Britain's television networks to moderate the increasing violence on home screens. The BBC runs two of the country's three TV channels and has had a policy of permitting greater realism —including nude love scenes —than its rival, the commercial Independent Television Authority.

NO CLIFFHANGERS

Attenborough says Cliffhanger serials should always show the hero safe because "tomorrow is a long way off, next week an eternity away" for children, he said.

Scenes showing cruelty to children, family quarrels and the death of an animal should be "sparingly portrayed."

Attenborough ordered a total ban on details of fights and weapons—the use of knives, broken bottles, karate chops, nooses and the locking up of prisoners in "undesirable places."

News bulletins and documentaries, Attenborough added, were the most difficult programs to control as violence is accepted as being "uncontestably" news.

But he ordered producers to edit out scenes of violence unless their news value outweighs the objections likely to come from viewers.

Loffmark Wants Heart List

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark Wednesday roasted heart surgeons who complain about the long waiting list for open heart surgery at Vancouver General Hospital but refuse to make the waiting list known to the hospital or the provincial government.

Loffmark was commenting on the terms of reference he has given to a special medical review board that will investigate procedures in the heart surgery wards at Vancouver General, St. Paul's and Royal Jubilee Hospital in Victoria.

One section of the terms of reference asked the committee whether doctors who blame apparent shortages of hospital facilities solely on the government are "acting in a responsible manner."

"The special medical review board is asked specifically to direct its attention to the very important question of whether an individual doctor is acting in a responsible manner when he makes comments either publicly or to his patients that failure to admit is the fault of the govenment, without at the same time indicating that there are other factors influencing admitting policies," the terms of reference state.

Loffmark said this is not an attempt to censor the medical profession, and indicated he looks upon it as a way of putting pressure on the heart surgeons to reveal who is on their waiting lists.

Solarium, Pearkes Clinic Financial Studies Urged

Bob Hutchison, retiring president of the Queen Alexandra Solarium's board of directors, Wednesday urged financial studies of both the solarium and the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Crippled Children.

The studies, to be compiled by the Greater Victoria Community Council and later made public would pinpoint any areas where money could be saved through co-operation.

"I am confident that both organizations could well gain a great deal of insight if such an independent study were undertaken," he said, "and the public would be assured that costly duplication is, as we believe is the case now, being avoided."

Hutchison said the clinic, which leases solarium land at $1 per year, had different function, providing out-patient care while the solarium was a long-stay and rehabilitation hospital.

Call for the studies apparently rises from complaints about the solarium's programs, coming from several sources, complaints that many facilities are duplicated by the clinic, and that transportation units are not shared, even though the two institutions are adjacent to each other.

Hutchison said that the hospital's management engineering service had been asked to make another study designed to show how to improve the solarium's splint and brace shop.

Hutchison told the meeting the number of patients had risen from 53 to 70 during the past year. Eleven patients had been transferred from Woodlands School and admitted into the solarium's extended-care program.

Murder Weapon Found In Surrey Slayings

SURREY (CP) — RCMP have recovered a high-powered rifle which may have been used in the killing of a 27-year-old Surrey man and the girl he was to have married.

William Tupniak and Marilyn Jean Cathers, 24, were found shot and stabbed to death in the kitchen of the home where Tupniak had lived since Christmas.

An RCMP spokesman said Miss Cathers had come to Surrey from her home in Sooke Friday to spend the weekend with Tupniak before leaving for Ontario. It is believed they were killed Monday.

Both Tupniak and Miss Cathers had been stabbed several times and shot by two different guns.

"We believed robbery may have been part of the motive for the killings," said the police spokesman. "There was no evidence of assault on Miss Cathers."

A neighbor of Tupniak's said he "seemed to be a really decent fellow." The dead man owned a fishing boat in nearby Richmond.

Budget Approved

VANCOUVER (CP) A 1972 budget of $8.4 million was approved by the Great Vancouver Regional District board Wednesday.

The new budget is up from $4.9 million in 1971.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

John Joe Bereczk, 35, who gave his address as a downtown hotel, was septenced to one year in prison Wednesday on a charge of breaking, entering and theft.

Bereczk got $3.60 in change from a Feb. 18 break-in at Hair Beauty Salon, 538-A Yates. He had an extensive criminal record dating back to 1958.

Two shoplifters were given suspended sentences and placed on probation by Judge William Ostler.

Mary Krecul, 42, of 3301 Linwood, pleaded guilty through a Polish interpreter to lifting 82 cents worth of peppermint extract and coffee sticks from the same store on the same day.

★ ★ ★

John Reed Douglas Wood, 29, of 1043 Dunsmuir, was fined $250 for possession of hashish. Police said Wood arrived at city police headquarters March 17 and asked Sgt. Ivan Purdy to arrest him on the possession charge.

★ ★ ★

Judge E. F. N. Robinson gave Randolph Garry McDougall, 23, of 491 Forward, one year in jail on a charge of breaking and entering with intent to steal.

McDougall was found crouched at the rear of Able Trading premises, 422 John, after the burglary alarm was triggered March 9.

He was also sentenced to one month concurrent on each of three counts of false pretences, cashing three worthless cheques for a total of $85.

He was given another two-month concurrent sentence for obtaining lodgings by fraud after he ran up a bill of $85.05 at a downtown motel last November.

★ ★ ★

In traffic court, Robinson fined Beverley Anne Garland, 32, of 1221 Pearce, $250 and gave her a partial three-month driving ban for impaired driving Jan. 16 on Government.

★ ★ ★

Adranus Willems, 36, of 3174 Carroll, was fined $400 and prohibited from driving four months except for work purposes after he was convicted of driving with a blood-alcohol content of more than .08 in the Mill Bay area March 8.

BLASTED CAR lies shattered on a Belfast main street after a bomb killed a demolition expert who was trying to defuse it. Parts of the wrecked car went soaring over four-storey buildings and the expert, Maj. Bernard Calladene, was hurled against a wall.

Kidnappers Kill 3 Hostages, Die

KIZILDERE, Turkey (UPI) — Turkish commando units found three foreign hostages murdered inside a house today, then killed 10 terrorists in a room-by-room gun battle, the government announced.

The government said an earlier report by local authorities and the state controlled news agency that the hostages and their abductors died in an explosion was untrue.

Commandos stormed the two-storey house in this mountain village of 1,337 after terrorists holed up inside all day opened fire on troops, the government said.

Inside, the government said, troops found the bodies of three men — two British and one Canadian — kidnapped Sunday night near a Turkish air force base.

"A room by room battle followed inside the house and all the terrorists were captured dead," the government statement said.

The civilian victims were identified as Gordon Banner, 25, and Charles Turner, 45, both British, and John Law, 28, a Canadian from Quebec City whose family lives in England.

They were working in Turkey as civilian radar technicians when they were kidnapped in the Black Sea town of Uyne. A letter left behind said they would die if three condemned terrorists were executed.

The village — the name means red or bloody stream — is located 76 miles from the scene of the kidnapping.

The government statement said troops found the hostages dead, shot and bound hand and foot, when they entered the house.

CREEP FORWARD

"Despite announcements over loudspeakers calling on the bandits to surrender," the statement said, "the terrorists opened fire on government forces . . ."

Then came the order to attack.

Turkish troop reinforcements poured into this remote village 200 miles northeast of Ankara and commandos crept to within 50 yards of the house where the extremists were holding the men who had worked in a NATO headquarters.

Meanwhile in Buenos Aires the fate of kidnapped Fiat executive Oberdan Sallustro remained a mystery today more than 24 hours after the deadline for his execution by Argentine guerrillas.

Argentine government pressure has prevented Fiat from meeting the guerrillas' major conditions for his release — distribution of $1 million worth of school supplies to 300,000 poor children.

ARCHBISHOP Harold Sexton died Wednesday. Burial will be at ancient West Saanich church following cathedral service. Story on page 6.

HALF ALBERTA GLUED TO TUBE

EDMONTON (CP) — Watching television is the most popular spare-time activity for Alberta, says a report on the quality of life by the Human Resources Research Council.

Every evening about 800,000 people, approximately half the population, each spend two hours before television sets, the report said.

"Pub-going and the consumption of alcohol probably ranks second," adds the report.

"Alberta has 690 licensed public drink spots where, along with intake in private homes, 24 million gallons of beer, 1.8 million gallons of wine, 75,000 gallons of liquor and 37,000 gallons of cider are consumed" annually."

Britain Now Rules Ulster

BELFAST (UPI) — Britain formally took over rule of Northern Ireland today in a day marked by a major gunbattle across the border with the Irish Republic, an assassination attempt in Londonderry and bomb explosions in Belfast.

The British parliament completed legislation ending 51 years of Protestant rule by the Nothern Ireland Parliament, Queen Elizabeth II gave her royal assent and Northern Ireland Premier Brian Faulkner resigned.

For the next year at least Ulster, as the six northern counties are called, will be ruled by William Whitelaw as secretary of state for Northern Ireland in the British cabinet. If this move ends the violence that has taken nearly 300 lives in the past three years Britain will review the situation.

MORE TROOPS

Faulkner announced he would deal openly with Whitelaw but the British government announced it would send more troops to Northern Ireland over the Easter holidays "as a normal precaution." A force of 4,000 has been alerted to reinforce the nearly 15,000 already here.

A British army spokesman said more than 3,000 rounds of ammunition were exchanged in what he called a "major battle" between four gunmen in the Irish Republic and Northern Ireland policemen who came under fire at Belleak, 10 miles south of the border town of Rosslea.

"They were firing from trees across the river which forms the frontier at this point," the spokesman said. "That made them doubly hard to spot."

In Londonderry, Ivan Cooper, a member of the Northern Ireland parliament, said someone tried to assassinate him with a bomb planted in his car. He is a civil rights leader who has pleaded the cause of the Roman Catholic minority in the Stormont as parliament here was called.

HOAX CALL

Cooper, who said he had received hundreds of threats from enraged Protestants, told newsmen he was awakened at 5:45 a.m. by a telephone call saying a friend had been taken to a hospital. He checked the hospital and found the call was a hoax.

"Just then the bomb went off," he said. "It was a personal bomb, designed not to do damage to property but to me." Cooper was not injured.

Four bombs exploded in Belfast Wednesday and Wednesday night, one of them a huge one that killed an army officer and shattered windows in city hall and the royal courts of justice.

NEWS BRIEFS

Second Session

HELSINKI (Reuter) — U.S. and Soviet negotiators met today for the second session in the current seventh phase of the strategic-arms limitation talks.

Peking Mission

VALLETTA (Reuter) — Maltese Prime Minister Dom Mintoff, fresh from negotiating a new defence agreement with Britain and NATO, was scheduled to fly to Peking today, possible seeking Chinese economic aid.

Nixon to Iran?

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Nixon was expected to visit Iran and possibly other countries in late May or early June after holding talks in Moscow, where he hopes to improve relations with the Soviet Union and sign a treaty limiting nuclear armaments.

Four Killed

BRIDGEWATER, Mass. (UPI) — An explosion ripped through a fireworks manufacturing complex on the outskirts of town today, killing four persons and touching off a fire which levelled the seven-building, one-story factory.

Refinery Blast

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — A fire and three explosions rocked the storage area of the state-owned Petrobras refinery in Duque De Caixas today, killing at least four persons and injuring more than 50, many seriously.

Bolivia Expels 112 Reds

LA PAZ (Reuter) — Bolivia has given 119 Soviet diplomats and embassy staff seven days to quit the country, saying they were linked with a Cuban-inspired invasion due to have begun at dawn today.

Foreign Minister Mario Gutierez insisted the mass expulsion did not mean Bolivia is breaking off diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union. It was not immediately known if the ambassador was among those being expelled.

Interior Minister Mario Addett said Wednesday night the government intercepted documents which proved foreign participation in the internal affairs of the country and the existence of a plot code named Operation Dawn, organized by the Havana - based Latin American Solidarity organization.

The operation involved "the landing of men" on Bolivian soil and was timed to start at dawn today, he said. He gave no details.

Since Bolivia is landlocked, the minister's remarks presumably referred to infiltration of guerrilla fighters from some neighboring country, observers said.

DOESN'T GIVE DETAILS

Addett did not specify the nature of the Soviet involvement in the alleged plot.

The two ministers appeared together in a television broadcast to announce the move against the Russians.

The Soviet embassy staff is believed to be the biggest of any foreign mission in La Paz — as many as 500, some reports say.

Earlier this month, Addett claimed to have uncovered a plot to turn the country in to "a Castroite concentration camp."

The interior ministry said at the time that "a foreign embassy" was involved.

Gunship Downed

SAIGON (AP) — A North Vietnamese surface-to-air missile shot down one of the United States' biggest computerized gunships Wednesday, and all 14 crew members aboard are missing and feared dead, the U.S. command announced today.

Total Destruction Of Fisheries Seen

ROME (Reuter) — World fisheries face total destruction unless techniques already available for saving them are properly used, Canadian and U.S. experts report.

The warning comes in a paper prepared by the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization for presentation to the UN conference on human environment in Stockholm in June.

Written by Dr. Henry Regier of the University of Toronto and Donald W. Kelley of Sacramento, Calif., who, formerly worked at FAO, the paper criticizes human failure to identify emotionally with fishery life.

It says that a tendency to regard the water environment as alien and hostile has hindered public understanding and action on the question.

And while public awareness has increased, so has the rate of all forms of pollution of lakes, streams and oceans, and the exploitation of fisheries.

FAO attached to the paper a series of recommendations for action. These noted that while the harvest of proteins from the sea has increased by about six per cent a year over the last 25 years, yields from fish-farming and of certain fish stocks now are decreasing because of overfishing, pollution and other man-made changes in the water environment.

The recommendations urge the expansion of scientific research and the use of unconventional and so-far-unexploited fishery resources such as

By LEE LESCAZE
The Washington Post

DACCA — Anger at sharply increased food prices and continuing smuggling and hoarding of grain has caused the first anti-government demonstrations in Bangladesh.

The scattered protests over the last 10 days have been quickly controlled, but government officials are concerned that continuing food shortages and abuses of the government grain distribution program will produce more serious disturbances than those that have taken place in the Rajshahi and Sylhet districts. A small clash broke out at a government warehouse in Dacca Tuesday.

In Rajshahi, university students stopped two trucks, which were illegally carrying grain from Bangladesh stocks to India. The students distributed the grain to local people and then seized the district's chief food officer. They damaged several grain shops during a rampage that was marked by slogans critical of the ruling Awami League Party and Prime Minister Sheikh Mujibur Rahman.

According to reports reaching Dacca, grain stocks in government warehouses have declined in the last month to 240,000 tons, and only about 50,000 tons are scheduled to arrive in Bangladesh through United Nation's relief programs in the next month.

With the government-owned stocks donated by foreign countries shrinking, prices on the open market for rice grown in Bangladesh have doubled in some areas this month.

$24,058 On PM's Office

OTTAWA (CP) — It's built-in cabinet work, new suede chesterfields and chairs and a new wool pile carpet in Prime Minister Trudeau's Parliament Hill office at a total cost of $24,058.

The Commons was told Wednesday in a written return for Robert C. Coates (PC — Cumberland-Colchester North) that the new decor was included in a recent renovation of Trudeau's office.

Six firms were involved in the project, the reply by Works Minister Jean-Eudes Dube said.

The renovations, including repairs and painting of the ceiling, fixing up the woodwork, installing built-in cabinets and putting in a new lighting system, cost $16,487.

New furniture, including a coffee table and end tables besides the leather-covered chesterfields and chairs, cost $6,308. The new rug cost $1,263.

Construction Crisis Looms

The threat of a province-wide labor-management confrontation in the construction industry surfaced today with an apparent impasse in negotiations between carpenters and the Construction Labor Relations Association.

The B.C. Provincial Council of Carpenters released a statement charging employers in the construction industry with "preparing for an early shutdown affecting many of the larger projects in this province."

Lorne Robson, secretary-treasurer of the council, said the CLRA is "refusing to bargain or utilize the services of the mediation officer" by insisting that the issue of the shorter work week be dropped as a prior condition to having negotiations proceed.

The apparent impasse could lead to a lockout-picket situation across the province as early as next week, the carpenters said.

The carpenters' statement said less than half of the clauses in the agreement have been resolved. "Many of the outstanding provisions are long-established conditions that the employers are endeavoring to weaken or remove from the carpenters' agreement," the statement said.

The conditions include holiday pay, local travel, shift differential, starting times, coffee breaks as well as the major issues of wages and hours of work.

Spokesmen for the Construction Labor Relations Association, which handles negotiations for the 4,000 carpenters mentioned in the carpenters' statement, were unavailable for comment.

Separate Jordan-Israel Peace Possible—Hussein

WASHINGTON (WP) — King Hussein of Jordan carefully left open Wednesday the possibility that he might make a separate peace with Israel if a concerted Arab effort at settlement proves impossible.

In an interview in the red carpeted library of Blair House, the U.S. presidential guest house, Hussein twice declined to rule out a Jordanian - Israeli agreement when explicitly questioned, "is there a possibility that Jordan will make separate peace with Israel?"

Hussein is in Washington on a "private" visit during which he has conferred with President Nixon, security adviser Henry A. Kissinger, Secretary of State William P. Rogers and Defence Secretary Melvin R. Laird.

Hussein just replied indirectly, "peace is our objective. It has been and will always be . . . We hope and aspire for a peace which is a general one and a lasting one. And until now we have worked with others, hoping that such a peace will be achieved. But it all depends on the Israelis and their attitude."

When pressed a second time, again, the 36-year-old monarch, said "I believe that the greatest difficulties lie on the Jordan-Israeli side, so to speak — difficulties of the human element, the human suffering, the tragedy of the lost land, the people who have suffered so much. . . . I believe that the Syrian one or the Egyptian one is considerably easier."

In a wide ranging session, during which a Jordanian security officer and an American secret service agent were also present, Hussein made these points:

—The "overwhelming majority of the people of Palestine" support his plan for a united federal kingdom after Israel withdraws from the occupied west bank of the Jordan River.

—Relations between Egypt and Jordan are strained. He said he hoped that this is a "passing phase," but that he was "disappointed and shocked" at the conduct of Egyptian legal proceedings against the alleged killers of Jordanian Prime Minister Wafi Tell, who was assassinated in Cairo in November.

While here, Hussein is discussing his proposal for an autonomous Palestinian state on the West Bank and seeking additional U.S. economic and military aid.

The king appeared to be at ease but slightly tired. He wore a gold-colored suit and tan shirt.

Hussein said his federation plan would meet the social, political and economic aspirations of the Palestinian population.

"I believe it (the proposal) puts the problem in the proper context, the problem of the Palestinian people their plight, their rights and their homeland," the king said.

"But outside the territory of Palestine, which is all under occupation at this stage, it gives them the identity which is dear to them, and at the same time it insures that we remain as one family and we do not leave them on their own, as they feared. For this we will never do."

He said that in the "context of a final solution and a final peace, Jerusalem must be the meeting place for all," adding that Jordan is "open minded" on how the problems of sovereignty over Jerusalem will be resolved.

"Some might say that Jerusalem must belong to people of the Jewish faith, as Rome belongs to Christians and Mecca to Moslems. But no other city, no other point in the world is such a meeting place . . . and is such importance as Jerusalem is to all."

But, he said, "and this is a must . . . our rights — the rights of the Palestinians, at least" must be recognized.

"Then we are willing and ready to discuss every way and any means" to resolve the Jerusalem question.

When asked about the report that Jordanian air force planes were sent to Pakistan, the king expressed "surprise" that the report would surface during his visit to Washington, "unless it is really an attempt to affect the visit in one way or another."

He said there is "close cooperation" between Jordan and Pakistan, and "any moves that we might have carried out are within that context."

Strike Notice

VANCOUVER (CP) The union representing Vancouver's 1,400 outside civic workers Wednesday served 72-hour strike notice on the city.

The outside workers, members of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, handle garbage collection, sewer and water construction and maintenance, park maintenance, road, sidewalk and lane repairs, and maintenance of equipment in shops and garages.

Debate Delayed

BURNABY (CP) Directors of the Greater Vancouver Regional District Wednesday delayed for one month discussion on the proposed third crossing of Burrard Inlet.

A motion by Burnaby Mayor Robert Prittie to involve the regional district in the crossing question was tabled on a vote of 32-to-23.

Vote by Telephone Suggested Cure for Low Turnout

Why are Saanich residents so apathetic when it comes to voting in municipal elections?

A two-year study of the problem by a University of Victoria political scientist presents no definite answers, but it does suggest two major remedies for the malaise.

In his report presented Wednesday to Mayor Hugh Curtis, Dr. Mark Sproule-Jones proposes a return to political wards and the introduction of a system of telephone voting.

He says the ward system would enable voters to identify more closely with candidates for office, and make them feel their vote would carry more weight.

Voting by telephone, Sproule-Jones says, would cut down considerably the time and effort involved in casting ballots.

Under this system, a week before the election each eligible voter would be mailed a code number which he would use as identification when phoning in his vote.

Sproule-Jones suggests certain safeguards to counter fraudulent voting.

Some Saanich aldermen commented today that they would like to see serious consideration of the telephone voting system, if they could be convinced that it would be foolproof.

But they said they would be reluctant to see a return to the ward system of electing council members, which Saanich abandoned in 1949.

Curtis today was non-committal on both proposals, although he noted that the "revolutionary" telephone voting system would require changes to the Municipal Act.

He said although he originally suggested the study, it was entirely a UVic project and not commissioned by Saanich.

Curtis asked for the study of political attitudes in the municipality after the poor voter turnout of 24 per cent in the 1969 municipal election.

Sproule-Jones, assisted by Saanich municipal clerk Gordon Hayward, drew up a comprehensive questionnaire and selected a group of 109 for detailed questioning. Questions were posed so that the answers could be analysed by computer.

AVERAGES

The average turnout of eligible voters between 1961 and 1969 was 26.88 per cent.

"Not only does Saanich have low turnout rates in absolute terms, but also compared to other cities and municipalities in Canada and abroad . . ."

A 1957 survey of 122 Canadian cities and towns showed an average turnout of 38.3 per cent. In 1970, the Saanich poll hit what was believed to be an all-time low — 14 per cent.

Sproule-Jones' report, which will be available Monday for study, draws an interesting picture of the Saanich resident who does turn out to vote.

MIDDLE-AGED

He is likely to be middle-aged, originally from the Prairies, comparatively well-to-do, and with fewer than average years of formal education.

The survey shows that 34.9 per cent of Saanich voters were born in Alberta, Saskatchewan, or Manitoba and 18.3 per cent in the United Kingdom.

Long-established residents are more likely to vote than newcomers, men more than women. Voters include a significant proportion of those in the higher income brackets.

Pollution, the report shows, is the No. 1 municipal issue in Saanich. More than 45 per cent of those sampled considered it the most important single issue.

KNOW PROBLEMS

But political inteest ranks low. Of those polled, 68.8 per cent said they have not attended any kind of political meeting in the last four years while 63.3 per cent have never written to or talked to a municipal official.

Despite this lack of enthusiasm for things political, Sproule-Jones says the Saanich electorate "has a strong conception of the problems and issues currently facing the municipality."

Two-thirds of the voters "frequently read all the articles on Saanich municipal affairs in the local press, while 40.4 per cent frequently discuss public issuss and another 48.6 occasionally discuss public issues with their friends."

Satisfaction with the status quo is indicated in the findings that 99 per cent of those surveyed felt Saanich is a good or fairly good community to live in, while over 94 per cent considered the council is doing its job well or fairly well.

"There is little evidence to imply that the Saanich voter is disillusioned and disaffected with the processes and products of local democracy," Sproule-Jones says.

The voter doesn't feel his own participation can directly influence municipal activities, but prefers "to play a watching brief role with regard to Saanich politics."

Veteran Saanich alderman Les Passmore said today he has never been unduly concerned about low voter turnouts at elections, as he firmly believes those who do turn up to vote are representative of the general thinking of the electorate.

Chabot Explains Position

Labor Minister Jim Chabot said today he will consider it "a breach of commitment" if labor unions continue to operate under contracts with restrictive clauses affecting other labor unionists.

Chabot sent a telegram Wednesday to the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council and to the B.C. Federation of Labor which he said is "a clarification" of the garee-ment made last week when Chabot agreed to withdraw Bill 88.

"There appears to be some confusion as to what happened and to what is going to happen in the province in the future," he said.

Union spokesmen said Wednesday they understood the terms of last week's agreement to affect those restrictive clauses which would have been included in new contracts negotiated this year."

A spokesman for the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council said today the council will seek further meetings with Chabot in order to clarify the minister's position.

"There is a grey area here which we need to clarify if nsgotiations are to proceed in an orderly manner," the spokesman said.

The building trades council and the federation of labor are expected to release a joint statement soon responding to Chabot's telegram to them Wednesday.

EXISTING CONTRACTS

Chabot, in his telegram, referred to those restrictive clauses already existing in contracts. The telegram reads, in part, "During this period (1972), I will expect relaxation of the restrictive clauses that interfere with the rigrts of other trade unionists."

"I don't know what their (trade unions') impression of our agreement is," Chabot said in an interview today. "I gave them my impression and gram)."

"I feel it is a breach of my expectations (in the tele-commitment if clauses are inrestrictive to other trade uncluded in contracts which are ionists," he said.

In a related strike situation on Vancouver Island, there is no change from Wednesday. Members of Local 213 of the Teamsters Union today continued to strike the Victoria operation of Butler-Lafarge Limited and picketed the Nanaimo and Duncan operations.

GIFT TAX ACT DRAWS WARNING

VANCOUVER (CP) — The B.C. branch of the Canadian Bar Association Wednesday issued a warning to B.C. citizens to use extreme care in making gifts or charitable donations.

The chairman of the branch's taxation committee, John G. Smith of Vancouver, said:

"The new Gift Tax Act introduced by the minister of finance and passed by the Legislature Monday gives the provincial government the power to tax charity.

"Gifts to any charity, no matter how worthy, no matter how local, can be subjected to a tax of 15 to 50 per cent. So can gifts between members of the same family, although there is an exemption of $2,000 for gifts to individuals and $10,000 a year for gifts between husbands and wives."

Smith said the public must be warned that this tax can seriously endanger the plans of all charitable organizations.

"It also deters individuals wishing to make charitable donations of any size.

"National and international charities, educational trusts — in fact any trust, building funds for charitable or educational purposes — gifts to all of these will be taxable."

Smith said the requirement that every gift must be the subject of a report to the government is impracticable with respect to small family and charitable gifts.

"Yet a $10-a-day fine for not reporting has been established and can be assessed by the provincial minister of finance. There are no exceptions and no minimums that are exempt from reporting," he said.

"That is a law that is wide open to the abuse of harassment and accordingly is bad law."

The branch urged the government to delay proclamation of the Gift Tax Act until such time as clarifying regulations have been announced to the public.

. . . FISH

To allow a greater yield of proteins from fisheries, the paper says, fish stocks should be managed rationally through controls including monitoring and periodic assessments of fish catches, the development of fish farming and limits on waste disposal.

The report says that rivers and lakes, once the source of pollution is removed, do gradually recover their earlier state of health. "Thus not all biological communities in environments once polluted are necessarily condemned to death," the paper says.

"The future of fisheries seems to be one of endless monitoring, experimentation, refinement of theory and careful management practices."

"Time is not on our side. In spite of growing environmental and economic awareness, we have grave concern about the future ecological state of the freshwater and inshore marine communities from the viewpoint of fisheries.

"Yet the technology exists that would maintain environments in a reasonably healthy state and permit the partial recovery of others for purposes of increased fish production," it continues.

"Given an adequate commitment by the world's people, progress should be prompt, and hopefully rapid enough," the paper concludes.

Expense Account Policy Adopted

The public accounts committee today unanimously adopted a policy statement that provincial cabinet ministers accept no expense money or other payments from private organizations while travelling on government business.

The motion was approved after the committee agreed to table an earlier motion by Liberal Leader Pat McGeer to limit government expense payments to out-of-province trips where such costs are unpaid by inviting groups.

Government members of the committee said that motion didn't go far enough because it left the implication that it was acceptable for cabinet ministers to accept expense money.

The new motion said that the committee can finish the present government policy that ministers must accept no expense money from n ongovernment sources while travelling "on behalf of our representing the province."

LACKS INFORMATION

McGeer said his motion arose from inadequate information listed on vouchers for travel expenses of Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi.

McGeer told the committee that expenses were paid by the government for a speaking engagement by Gaglardi in South Bend, Indiana, at a "Transport for Christ" convention, a religious organization that operates a mobile chapel for truckers.

Gaglardi also addressed Sunday religious services in that city, he said.

Later McGeer was asked to withdraw a statement in which he said: "I am told by someone who was in touch with that organization that the minister's travelling expenses, meals . . . were paid for by that convention."

Herb Capozzi (SC—Vancouver Centre) told McGeer: "You're intimating he got money twice — either back it up or withdraw it."

WITHDRAWS REMARK

McGeer was told by Chairman George Mussallem it was "not proper" to make such a statement and McGeer sai

"I clearly withdraw it."

McGeer said he thought it "wonderful" that Gaglardi would take time to attend a religious convention but added:

"Imagine if every minister has his expenses paid for attending religious conventions of his particular faith. I don't think this would qualify as government business."

McGeer said later he would attempt to raise the vouchers in the legislature today during estimates of Gaglardi's department. But he was told he would have to ask leave of the House for the vouchers, kept under close guard by Comptroller-General J. W. Minty, to be presented in the House.

Kidnappers Kill 3 Hostages, Die

KIZILDERE, Turkey (UPI) — Turkish commando units found three foreign hostages murdered inside a house today, then killed 10 terrorists in a room-by-room gun battle, the government announced.

The government said an earlier report by local authorities and the state controlled news agency that the hostages and their abductors died in an explosion was untrue.

Commandos stormed the two-storey house in this mountain village of 1,337 after terrorists holed up inside all day opened fire on troops, the government said.

Inside, the government said, troops found the bodies of three men — two British and one Canadian — kidnapped Sunday night near a Turkish air force base.

"A room by room battle followed inside the house and all the terrorists were captured dead," the government statement said.

The civilian victims were identified as Gordon Banner, 55, and Charles Turner, 45, both British, and John Law, 21, a Canadian from Quebec City whose family lives in England.

They were working in Turkey as civilian radar technicians when they were kidnapped in the Black Sea town of Uyne. A letter left behind said they would die if three condemned terrorists were executed.

The village — the name means red or bloody stream — is located 75 miles from the scene of the kidnapping.

The government statement said troops found the hostages dead, shot and bound hand and foot, when they entered the house.

CREEP FORWARD

"Despite announcements over loudspeakers calling on the bandits to surrender," the statement said, "the terrorists opened fire on government forces . . ."

Then came the order to attack.

Turkish troop reinforcements poured into this remote village 200 miles northeast of Ankara and commandos crept to within 50 yards of the house where the extremists were holding the men who had worked in a NATO headquarters.

Meanwhile in Buenos Aires the fate of kidnapped Fiat executive Oberdan Sallustro remained a mystery today more than 24 hours after the deadline for his execution by Argentine guerrillas.

Argentine government pressure has prevented Fiat from meeting the guerrillas' major conditions for his release — distribution of $1 million worth of school supplies to 300,000 poor children.

HALF ALBERTA GLUED TO TUBE

EDMONTON (CP) — Watching television is the most popular spare-time activity for Alberta, says a report on the quality of life by the Human Resources Research Council.

Every evening about 800,000 people, approximately half the population, each spend two hours before television sets, the report said.

"Pub-going and the consumption of alcohol probably ranks second," adds the report.

"Alberta has 690 licensed public drink spots where, along with intake in private homes, 24 million gallons of beer, 1.5 million gallons of wine, 75,000 gallons of liquor and 37,000 gallons of cider are consumed annually."

Britain Now Rules Ulster

BELFAST (UPI) — Britain formally took over rule of Northern Ireland today in a day marked by a major gun-battle across the border with the Irish Republic, an assassination attempt in Londonderry and bomb explosions in Belfast.

The British parliament completed legislation ending 51 years of Protestant rule by the Northern Ireland Parliament, Queen Elizabeth II gave her royal assent and Northern Ireland Premier Brian Faulkner resigned.

For the next year at least Ulster, as the six northern counties are called, will be ruled by William Whitelaw as secretary of state for Northern Ireland in the British cabinet. If this move ends the violence that has taken nearly 300 lives in the past three years Britain will review the situation.

MORE TROOPS

Faulkner announced he would deal openly with Whitelaw but the British government announced it would send more troops to Northern Ireland over the Easter holidays "as a normal precaution." A force of 4,000 has been alerted to reinforce the nearly 15,000 already here.

A British army spokesman said more than 3,000 rounds of ammunition were exchanged in what he called a "major battle" between four gunmen in the Irish Republic and Northern Ireland policemen who came under fire at Belleak, 10 miles south of the border town of Rosslea.

"They were firing from trees across the river which forms the frontier at this point," the spokesman said. "That made them doubly hard to spot."

In Londonderry, Ivan Cooper, a member of the Northern Ireland parliament, said someone tried to assassinate him with a bomb planted in his car. He is a civil rights leader who has pleaded the cause of the Roman Catholic minority in the Stormont as parliament here was called.

HOAX CALL

Cooper, who said he had received hundreds of threats from enraged Protestants, told newsmen he was awakened at 5:45 a.m. by a telephone call saying a friend had been taken to a hospital. He checked the hospital and found the call was a hoax.

"Just then the bomb went off," he said. "It was a personal bomb, designed not to do damage to property but to me." Cooper was not injured.

Four bombs exploded in Belfast Wednesday and Wednesday night, one of them a huge one that killed an army officer and shattered windows in city hall and the royal courts of justice.

NEWS BRIEFS

Second Session

HELSINKI (Reuter) — U.S. and Soviet negotiators met today for the second session in the current seventh phase of the strategic arms limitation talks.

Peking Mission

VALLETTA (Reuter) — Maltese Prime Minister Dom Mintoff, fresh from negotiating a new defence agreement with Britain and NATO, was scheduled to fly to Peking today, possibly seeking Chinese economic aid.

Nixon to Iran?

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Nixon was expected to visit Iran and possibly other countries in late May or early June after holding talks in Moscow, where he hopes to improve relations with the Soviet Union and sign a treaty limiting nuclear armaments.

Four Killed

BRIDGEWATER, Mass. (UPI) — An explosion ripped through a fireworks manufacturing complex on the outskirts of town today, killing four persons and touching off a fire which levelled the seven-building, one-story factory.

Refinery Blast

RIO DE JANEIRO (UPI) — A fire and three explosions rocked the storage area of the state-owned Petrobras refinery in Duque De Caixas today, killing at least four persons and injuring more than 50, many seriously.

Bolivia Expels Reds

LA PAZ (Reuter) — Bolivia has given 119 Soviet diplomats and embassy staff seven days to quit the country, saying they were linked with a Cuban-inspired invasion due to have begun at dawn today.

Foreign Minister Mario Gutierez insisted the mass expulsion did not mean Bolivia is breaking off diplomatic relations with the Soviet Union. It was not immediately known if the ambassador was among those being expelled.

Interior Minister Mario Addett said Wednesday night the government intercepted documents which proved foreign participation in the internal affairs of the country and the existence of a plot code named Operation Dawn, organized by the Havana - based Latin American Solidarity organization.

The operation involved "the landing of men on Bolivian soil and was timed to start at dawn today, he said. He gave no details.

Since Bolivia is landlocked, the minister's remarks presumably referred to infiltration of guerrilla fighters from some neighboring country, observers said.

DOESN'T GIVE DETAILS

Addett did not specify the nature of the Soviet involvement in the alleged plot.

The two ministers appeared together in a television broadcast to announce the move against the Russians.

The Soviet embassy staff is believed to be the biggest of any foreign mission in La Paz — as many as 500, some reports say.

Earlier this month, Addett claimed to have uncovered a plot to turn the country into "a Castroite concentration camp."

The interior ministry said at the time that "a foreign embassy" was involved.

Byelections

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Trudeau today set two byelections for Oct. 16 and said he has no present intentions of calling a general election for June.

Total Destruction Of Fisheries Seen

ROME (Reuter) — World fisheries face total destruction unless techniques already available for saving them are properly used, Canadian and U.S. experts report.

The warning comes in a paper prepared by the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization for presentation to the UN conference on human environment in Stockholm in June.

Written by Dr. Henry Regier of the University of Toronto and Don W. Kelley of Sacramento, Calif., who formerly worked at FAO, the paper criticizes human failure to identify emotionally with fishery life.

It says that a tendency to regard the water environment as alien and hostile has hindered public understanding and action on the question.

And while public awareness has increased, so has the rate of all forms of pollution of lakes, streams and oceans, and the exploitation of fisheries.

FAO attached to the paper a series of recommendations for action. These noted that while the harvest of proteins from the sea has increased by about six per cent a year over the last 25 years, yields from fish farming and of certain fish stocks now are decreasing because of overfishing, pollution and other man-made changes in the water environment.

The recommendations urge the expansion of scientific research and the use of unconventional and so-far unexploited fishery resources such as

By LEE LESCAZE
The Washington Post

DACCA — Anger at sharply increased food prices and continuing smuggling and hoarding of grain has caused the first anti-government demonstrations in Bangladesh.

The scattered protests over the last 10 days have been quickly controlled, but government officials are concerned that continuing food shortages and abuses of the government grain distribution program will produce more serious disturbances than those that have taken place in the Rajshahi and Sylhet districts. A small clash broke out at a government warehouse in Dacca Tuesday.

In Rajshahi, university students stopped two trucks, which were illegally carrying grain from Bangladesh stocks to India. The students distributed the grain to local people and then seized the district's chief food officer. They damaged several grain shops during a rampage that was marked by slogans critical of the ruling Awami League Party and Prime Minister Sheikh Mujibur Rahman.

According to reports reaching Dacca, grain stocks in government warehouses have declined in the last month to 240,000 tons, and only about 50,000 tons are scheduled to arrive in Bangladesh through United Nation's relief programs in the next month.

With the government-owned stocks donated by foreign countries shrinking, prices on the open market for rice grown in Bangladesh have doubled in some areas this month.

$24,058 On PM's Office

OTTAWA (CP) — It's built-in cabinet work, new suede chesterfields and chairs and a new wool pile carpet in Prime Minister Trudeau's Parliament Hill office at a total cost of $24,058.

The Commons was told Wednesday in a written return for Robert C. Coates (PC — Cumberland-Colchester North) that the new decor was included in a recent renovation of Trudeau's office.

Six firms were involved in the project, the reply by Works Minister Jean-Eudes Dube said.

The renovations, including repairs and painting of the ceiling, fixing up the woodwork, installing built-in cabinets and putting in a new lighting system, cost $16,487.

New furniture, including a coffee table and end tables besides the leather-covered chesterfields and chairs, cost $6,308. The new rug cost $1,263.

Construction Crisis Looms

The threat of a province-wide labor-management confrontation in the construction industry surfaced today with an apparent impasse in negotiations between carpenters and the Construction Labor Relations Association.

The B.C. Provincial Council of Carpenters released a statement charging employers in the construction industry with "preparing for an early shutdown affecting many of the larger projects in this province."

Lorne Robson, secretary-treasurer of the council, said the CLRA is "refusing to bargain or utilize the services of the mediation officer" by insisting that the issue of the shorter work week be dropped as a prior condition to having negotiations proceed.

The apparent impasse could lead to a lockout-picket situation across the province as early as next week, the carpenters said.

The carpenters' statement said less than half of the clauses in the agreement have been resolved. "Many of the outstanding provisions are long-established conditions that the employers are endeavoring to weaken or remove from the carpenters' agreement," the statement said.

The conditions include holiday pay, local travel, shift differential, starting times, coffee breaks as well as the major issues of wages and hours of work.

Spokesmen for the Construction Labor Relations Association, which handles negotiations for the 4,000 carpenters mentioned in the carpenters' statement, were unavailable for comment.

Separate Jordan-Israel Peace Possible—Hussein

WASHINGTON (WP) — King Hussein of Jordan carefully left open Wednesday the possibility that he might make a separate peace with Israel if a concerted Arab effort at settlement proves impossible.

In an interview in the red carpeted library of Blair House, the U.S. presidential guest house, Hussein twice declined to rule out a Jordanian - Israeli agreement when explicitly questioned, "is there a possibility that Jordan will make separate peace with Israel?"

Hussein is in Washington on a "private" visit during which he has conferred with President Nixon, security adviser Henry A. Kissinger, Secretary of State William P. Rogers and Defence Secretary Melvin R. Laird.

Hussein just replied indirectly, "peace is our objective. It has been and will always be . . . We hope and aspire for a peace which is a general one and a lasting one. And until now we have worked with others, hoping that such a peace will be achieved. But it all depends on the Israelis and their attitude."

When pressed a second time, again, the 36-year-old monarch, said "I believe that the greatest difficulties lie on the Jordan-Israeli side, so to speak — difficulties of the human element, the human suffering, the tragedy of the lost land, the people who have suffered so much. . . . I believe that the Syrian one or the Egyptian one is considerably easier."

In a wide ranging session, during which a Jordanian security officer and an American secret service agent were also present, Hussein made these points:

—The "overwhelming majority of the people of Palestine" support his plan for a united federal kingdom after Israel withdraws from the occupied West Bank of the Jordan River.

—Relations between Egypt and Jordan are strained. He said he hoped that this is a "passing phase," but that he was "disappointed and shocked" at the conduct of Egyptian legal proceedings against the alleged killers of Jordanian Prime Minister Wafi Tell, who was assassinated in Cairo in November.

While here, Hussein is discussing his proposal for an autonomous Palestinian state on the West Bank and seeking additional U.S. economic and military aid.

The king appeared to be at ease but slightly tired. He wore a gold-colored suit and tan shirt.

Hussein said his federation plan would meet the social, political and economic aspirations of the Palestinian population.

"I believe it (the proposal) puts the problem in the proper context, the problem of the Palestinian people their plight, their rights and their homeland," the king said.

"But outside the territory of Palestine, which is all under occupation at this stage, it gives them the identity which is dear to them, and at the same time it insures that we remain as one family and we do not leave them on their own, as they feared. For this we will never do."

He said that in the "context of a final solution and a final peace, Jerusalem must be the meeting place for all," adding that Jordan is "open minded" on how the problems of sovereignty over Jerusalem will be resolved.

"Some might say that Jerusalem must belong to people of the Jewish faith, as Rome belongs to Christians and Mecca to Moslems. But no other city, no other point in the world is such a meeting place . . . and is, such importance as Jerusalem is to all."

But, he said, "and this is a must . . . our rights — the rights of the Palestinians, at least" must be recognized. "Then we are willing and ready to discuss every way and any means" to resolve the Jerusalem question.

The crush is on at Hartland Road garbage dump where this new $50,000 compacting tractor has started working for Victoria Disposal Co. The first of its kind in Western Canada, the machine powered by a Cummins Diesel V8 motor weighs 32,320 pounds and is more than 22 feet long. Foreman Louis Nagy expects the machine's toothed wheels will squeeze about 30 percent more garbage into the dump. The tractor was specially designed for garbage dumps. (Irving Strickland photo.)

Region to Try For Tax Share In Bus Proposal

The Capital Regional District Board proposed Wednesday that local government take over transit buses from B.C. Hydro.

It was the first move by local government towards a solution to an issue frequently raised over the years.

The region's offer, which calls for a share of gasoline taxes for operating revenue, drew a "no comment" from B.C. Hydro chairman Gordon Shrum.

NO ACTION

A resolution identical to the one passed by the regional board was to have been issued by the Greater Vancouver regional board earlier Wednesday but the body did not take action on it.

In Burnaby Wednesday, Vancouver regional directors were told the B.C. government has made an offer of its own about taking over the B.C. Hydro buses but details were not disclosed.

In February, Premier Bennett proposed sharing half the losses of the bus system in Victoria and Vancouver, with the regional districts purchasing the systems at a nominal fee.

$2M ANNUALLY

Access to half the gasoline tax revenue is the key to takeover of the bus system. The Capital region estimates this would bring in more than $2 million a year.

The offer suggests B.C. Hydro sell its bus system for a nominal $1, and the government pay an operating grant in the first year of $300,000 to the Capital, and $1.2 million to Vancouver.

North Saanich Mayor Trevor Davis was the only director to oppose the offer. He unsuccessfully introduced a motion that would allow individual municipalities to opt out of paying their share of operating costs.

CRISIS

Victoria Mayor Peter Pollen said Vancouver is at a "crisis point" in accommodating car traffic.

He said today he is looking forward to an "intelligent answer to an intelligent proposal" but has received no reaction from the provincial government.

Regional board chairman Hugh Curtis said the metropolitan areas have been "hampered by deteriorating service and transit is an integral part of community development."

He said the resolution envisages a takeover of Hydro bus systems but with extensions into suburban areas. But Pollen said the system would not preclude private bus systems.

Some Vancouver board members commented that the provincial government would never accept the resolution, therefore it was useless to present it.

The Vancouver board's transportation committee chairman, Allan Kelly, told his directors the B.C. government's new offer has the blessing of the premier. That offer apparently does not apply to the B.C. Hydro bus system in the Capital region.

STUDENT JAILED FOR SELLING HASHISH

A Grade 12 student who peddled hashish to classmates from his school locker was sentenced in provincial court today to four months definite and eight months indeterminate in prison.

Nigel Keith Slater, 19, of 400 Culduthel, told police he bought five ounces of hashish for $250 and was selling it for $1 or $5 a gram. His locker at Mount View Senior Secondary contained 25 grams of the substance, individually wrapped in foil, when it was searched March 10.

Judge William Ostler rejected a request by Slater that he be allowed to complete his school year.

"No doubt the persons at the top are the truly hard criminals and should be caught if possible and punished, but those persons cannot function unless they have people like you who are willing . . . for the sake of a few filthy dollars to corrupt your schoolmates," Ostler told the accused.

The judge noted that Slater had told an investigating probation officer he "had plans of going into business on a larger scale."

MHO Dumps Sewer Issue On Province

By BRYAN McGILL
Times Staff

In hot water with the Greater Victoria School Board over the long-simmering View Royal Elementary sewage problem, senior medical officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread has decided the issue is not within his jurisdiction.

Laurel Benham, senior health inspector for the Greater Victoria metro health board, said today Whitbread this week sent a letter to the school board, informing it that its decision to build a secondary sewage treatment plant at the school will have to be approved by the Provincial Pollution Control Board.

Earlier, Whitbread had stated he would not approve such a system following his ultimatum about school closure in six weeks if the school ground sewage seepage was unresolved.

The only way sewage issue could be resolved, Whitbread indicated, would be by the installation of a holding tank.

Trustee Peter Bunn, chairman of construction and maintenance for the school board, declined comment today because he had not yet received Whitbread's letter.

But Bunn, who said he had enough of Whitbread's nonsense, did reveal that the board started this week to temporarily clean up the sewage at the school by pumping it out of the septic tank into the trucks.

He said it is the intention of the board to solve permanently the problem before the next term begins to get the school "up to snuff" with a long delayed expansion program.

"Messed Around Long Enough'

Bunn said Whitbread is using View Royal Elementary as a political lever "to clobber the people of View Royal into a situation they don't want" — which is the installation of sewers throughout the area.

He said Whitbread interprets the Public Health Act "in different ways for different situations."

"Whitbread has messed around long enough," Bunn said. But "nobody wants to accept responsibility for him."

Bunn said if he gets his way the board will go straight to Health Minister Ralph Loffmark to get the school issue resolved.

"If you talk to the office boy long enough, you want to see the manager."

Benham said the secondary treatment plant wanted by the school board would only improve the sewage situation "a little" and would not stop sewage from coming out into ditches on the school grounds and thus into Portage Inlet.

He said a similar system planned by Saanich municipality was turned down by the Pollution Control Board.

If the school board persists in planning a treatment plant, Behma said the health board would appear in opposition at the public hearing that wuld be called by the Pollution Control Board.

Logging Inquiry Plea Backed

Board Switch Supports Nitinat Drive

Citizen groups today supported Mayor Peter Pollen's call for a public inquiry into logging practices.

Pollen issued the plea Wednesday when the Capital Regional Board reversed its earlier position and came out in support of including the Nitinat Triangle in Pacific Rim National Park.

He told the board the multiple-use concept of Crown lands as advocated by the logging industry and the B.C. Forest Service was "probably the greatest fraud ever perpetrated on the public.

"It is time for a public inquiry into logging practices. The entire system of logging should be reviewed.

"After seeing what logging companies are doing to our lakes and rivers and evidence of land erosion caused by logging practices, I think it is time we took a look into the situation."

Rick Careless chairman of the Victoria branch of the Sierra Club, said the Sloan Royal Commission on Forestry in 1956 recommended a review of forest practices in 10 years.

"This has been ignored," he said. "Since then there has been other demands on public lands and nothing has been done to resolve these conflicts of interests.

"There is ample evidence that policies enacted in the 1950s are outdated and should be reviewed by an inquiry."

Howard English, a director of the B.C. Wildlife Federation, said for years people have been fighting to preserve the resources of the province.

"The needs of people are being completely ignored," he said. "The controversy over the Nitinat Triangle is an example. It should never have occurred. It should have been set aside for people years ago."

The regional board's decision supporting the conservationists proposal to include the triangle in the national park, was a reversal of a March 15 parks committee recommendation.

Mayor Pollen also reversed his stand. At the parks committee meeting he had said the proposal was "ludicrous" and came out in favor of the multiple-use of forest lands.

He told the board he thought at the time conservationists were asking for the whole of the Nitinat area be included in the park.

"Since then I found out they are only asking for three small lakes — 18,000 acres," he said. "I'm completely in favor of the compromise. They should not take anything less."

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford and Central Saanich Mayor Archie Galbraith said the whole of southern Vancouver Island would benefit from the inclusion of the lakes in the parks.

Said Mayor Stan Dear of Sidney: "We should preserve a few remaining wilderness areas for the public."

Dr. John Harris, a member of the Victoria Outdoor Club conservation committee, said the board should have made a decision on the Nitinat triangle long ago.

"But it is encouraging to see a level of government support the proposal," he said.

Freak Criminal Month Has Police Hopping

By DOUG MacRAE
Times Staff

A month-long wave of criminal activity has kept Victoria city police hopping since the first of March, with nearly three times the normal monthly load of suspects charged and processed by the department.

Police records officers said 104 persons had been photographed, fingerprinted and dealt with from March 1 to March 29, compared with the average monthly figure of 44. Another dozen or so were expected today and Friday to round out the month.

The figures do not include traffic offences or minor violations such as vagrancy or creating a disturbance.

A department spokesman said many of the month's crimes have been committed to support drug habits. Increases were most marked in the areas of theft involving more than $50 and shoplifting.

Those arrested are showing a lower average age, the officer said. Offences involving juveniles — persons aged 16 or younger — also have increased but are not included in the month's processing figures.

On the bright side, police report an encouraging response to the newly-initiated "appearance notice" system of having accused persons appear in court on their own undertaking.

Since the system was inaugurated under reforms to bail law at the first of the year, police say 98 per cent of accused persons are making good on promises to appear in court.

"Officers are bending over backwards to adhere to the liberal intent of the law," the spokesman said. "A man almost has to be caught with a smoking gun in his hand to be taken into custody."

The department has been "taxed" by the upsurge in crime this month, but is still able to cope, the officer said.

Ask the Times

Q. Is it possible to see the inside of Government House at any time? Could you also say how invitations are extended for the State Ball and how to get an invitation to attend the annual garden party at Government House? — G.O.

A. One can only see the inside of Government House as a guest at a tea, reception, dinner party or, of course, the State Ball. Invitations to the latter are issued to those on the official Precedence List, which is a provincial version of the one used in Ottawa. It includes leaders of the churches, armed forces representatives (including the RCMP) and other leaders. Normally, mayors and heads of such orgnaizations as the Red Cross are also invited. Invitations to the garden party are sent to everyone who has signed the guest book at the entrance to Government House during the preceding year. The visitors' register is available during regular office hours. Those signing must be residents of the province and can only sign for themselves.

Student Artists Win In Anti-Smoking Contest

Jeffrey Smith of Monterey elementary school will receive $25 and a commemorative plaque. A $10 cheque and plague goes to Cheryl Parlee of [illegible]nside elementary school.

The competition is open to all grade 6 and 7 students in British Columbia and the Yukon Territories. A total of 1,200 entries were received.

The Grand Provincial Award, $50 and a plaque went to David Steen of Buckingham elementary school in Burnaby. The presentation was made by Lieutenant-Governor J. R. Nicholson.

Easter Blood Target Set

A target of 400 pints has been set for special blood donor clinics to be held in Easter Week.

All of the clinics will be open to the general public.

On Tuesday clinics will be held from 9:30 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m. on the second floor of the T. Eaton Co.'s home furnishings buildings.

Wednesday's clinics will take place in the South Vancouver Island Rangers' clubhouse on Luxton Road in the Happy Valley area. The clinics are scheduled for 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. and 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Thursday's clinics will be held in the nurses' residence of the Royal Jubilee Hospital lasting from 9:30 a.m. to noon and 1:15 to 4:30 p.m.

Two clinics will be held at Work Point Barracks next Friday. They're scheduled for 9:30 a.m. to noon and 1:15 to 3 p.m.

A Pinch of This and a Touch of That

FOR A START ON THIS bright day, I must take my lumps from a pride of roused Victorians. These were quick to pounce when I reported last week that some Canadian writers win their first acceptances in the United States or England.

Not being masochistic by nature, I will let one ruffled reader protest for all.

"Egad, sir," he writes "wot about the rest of Britain, or the United Kindgom . . . but not, sir, 'England'.

"It's just a piece of the whole. What you did is the same as referring to Quebec as Canada."

"Yours in tartan,

"David (call me Scots, not Scotch) May."

By way of reparation, I can assure Scotsman May and anyone else who might be interested that many a striving Canadian owes his first appearance in print to Blackwood's, a periodical of venerable age and high repute.

Published in Edinburgh, in the United Kingdom.

With that matter taken care of, I will help myself to a consoling slice from a veritable apple pie of a letter that comes from Mrs. Enid Van Buren, 1030 Pendergast.

"There are times," Mrs. Van Buren tells me, "when I feel a profound urge to get busy and write a letter of appreciation to all the people in the Press, TV etc., telling one and all how much they've added to my life in pleasure, fascinating interest in a topic, and for trying to get me to think, understand and sympathize."

For those kind words, much thanks from this servant of the press. But was it really necessary to include TV and that chatterbox, Etcetera?

"Re your mention of the excellent 'Chariots of the Gods' on CBC.

"Do you happen to know whether Erich Von Daniken's book has been translated into English or French?"

This last week or so, we've been mildly puzzled by the presence on the roads of young people with the modern hitch-hiker's bindle on their packs.

Their packboard-packsack combos were featherweights of the newer sort, their neatly-rolled sleeping bags didn't appear to have seen any great amount of use, and their boots looked no more than nicely broken in.

Was a new and perhaps more affluent wave of long-haul hitchhikers getting an early start on this year's See Canada trek?

A Victoria Cool Aid staffer to whom I passed the question doesn't think so. The chances were, she said, that most of the pack-toters we've been seeing are American students who have been taking advantage of the earlier United States Easter vacation to go walkabout.

"Its true we've had an increase in registrations at the hostel," she said, "but we put it down to the influx of Americans. Last week we averaged 12 a night, and one evening we had 20."

From such signs as are available, however, this could be a big year for province to province and coast to coast rovers, with increasing emphasis on group travel in any vehicle that will cope with the long roads.

Not for a while yet, though. Spring may be in full surge on this green coast, but there's still plenty of snow and hard going in the larger Canada.

Chastened by the pummeling touched off by that omnibus reference to England, I asked an Amsterdam-born Victorian the other evening whether it was correct procedure to refer to someone from the Netherlands as Dutch.

Not so, he said. The Netherlander could be a Friesian, a Frank or a Saxon. Only if he hailed from north or south Holland could he be considered truly Dutch, and even then, he might prefer to be called a Hollander.

"For myself," he said with a grin, "I know other Canadians are going to keep right on calling me Dutch, and I don't lose any sleep over it!"

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

What Is Easter All About, Really?

REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

The disciples of Jesus were completely unnerved by his crucifixion. They could not understand what had happened. It had happened so quickly.

One of their number betrayed him to the authorities. Then the sudden, swift trials. With unjust haste he was hanged on a cross — and in three hours he was dead.

This was not what the disciples had expected. Their master, whom they believed to be the Messiah sent by God for the salvation of all men, had been ignominiously put to death as a common criminal.

Then on the third day some of Jesus' women followers went to the tomb in which his body had been laid, taking with them spices for the neglected office of embalment. They found the stone which closed the tomb rolled away. They stood there, incredulous and perplexed and frightened.

Theyn, as Luke tells the story, two men in dazzling apparrel appeared and said to them, "Why do you seek the living among the dead? He is not here but has risen."

The women sought out the disciples and told them about this strange experience. But, as Luke reports, "These words seemed to them an idle tale, and they did not believe them."

Very slowly the disciples came out of their despair and doubt and came to accept the fact that the crucifixion was not the end of Jesus. And it was out of their awareness of the risen Christ, out of their experience of the Resurrection, that came the Christian faith and the Christian Church.

The details of the Ressurrection, its means and its mechanics, are shrouded in the mists of history. There are serious inconsistencies in the accounts of the event given in the four Gospels. But the reality of the Resurrection-experience of the followers of Jesus persists.

The rise of the Christian movement, including the writing and selection of the documents which comprise the New Testament, can be accounted for only in terms of the Ressurrection-experience.

Christian faith is not simply a matter of approving a body of teaching given out in Palestine nearly 20 centuries ago. The Church is not simply a memorial society, a sort of Jesus fan club. The Church is the community of the Resurrection, a fellowship created and carried through the centuries by experience of its living Lord.

Easter is the festival of the Resurrection. Only incidentally is it an occasion for us to think about our own life after death. Only coincidentally is it a time for rejoicing over the passing of winter and the coming of spring. The authentic meaning of Easter is established not in parade but in prayer.

Easter Services Outlined

St. Andrew's Roman Catholic Cathedral will hold a vigil service Saturday, beginning at 11:30 a.m. The "new fire," the Easter candle and baptismal water will be blessed. The congregation will be invited to renewal their baptismal promises.

Sir John Stainer's oratorio The Crucifixion will be presented Good Friday at 7 p.m. in St. Martin's-in-the-Field Anglican Church.

The performance will be an ecumenical one with choirs of St. Martin and Garden City United Churches taking part, along with men from Emmanuel Baptist and Arion choirs.

Soloists will be William Broadhead of Christ Church Cathedral, James Dakman of Emmanuel Baptist and Ken Hope of St. Martin's.

Ken Nelson is conductor and organist is Mrs. Ruth Powell.

The same group performed the oratorio in Garden City United Church on Palm Sunday.

A special invitation to visitors has been issued by Rev. Alan Beaton to attend a 10:30 a.m. Good Friday service in Knox Presbyterian Church.

Other special events Friday include the presentation of the St. John Passion at 11 a.m. by the church choir in Belmont United Church and the Nelson Mass of Haydn at 8 p.m. in St. John's Anglican Church. Taking part will be boys' choirs of St. John's and Glenlyon Boys' School, accompanied by the Victoria Conservatory of Music orchestra, directed by John Gallienne.

Boyd Hood of the University of Victoria's music department, will play the aria from Handel's Messiah, The Trumpet Shall Sound, at an 11 a.m. Easter Sunday service in the Church of Our Lord.

Organists will be Charles Dorrington and Frances Carter.

Visitors will be welcomed to a special Easter meeting of the Metropolitan United Church Women, to be held 2 p.m. Monday in the chapel.

Mrs. Geoffrey Smith will speak on Easter '72. Soloist will be Mrs. Harold Robinson. Tea will be served later in the woman's parlor.

'Flexible Week' At Job Will Upset Social Patterns

Production moving away from the eight-hour day

The most significant industrial revolution since the advent of automation promises radical changes in the recreational, educational and social habits of North America, if early signs are being read correctly by five senior Canadian management consultants.

The revolution, compared by some with the invention of the assembly line and the computer, is the arrival of a flexible work week. It is a rearrangement of time that could relieve rush-hour traffic jams, extend retail shopping hours, ease weekend congestion at golf courses and ski resorts and improve productivity through a more balanced use of space and equipment.

The flexible work week is already firmly established in some key industries in Canada and the United States. For most workers, it involves a four-day work schedule, for some it means a three-day week and for a few it means a monthly commitment of work hours with flexible daily starting and quitting times.

The management consultants say a rearranged week is the natural outcome of technology and automation. About seven companies a day are switching to the new system in the United States and about 30 in Canada have made the change.

The consultants say they

By JAMES PURDIE

need 100 five-year examples before full effects of a shortened week can be assessed, but the rate of change now indicates the system will be generally accepted more quickly than the five-day week, which took 20 years to establish.

The five experts are David J. Alderman of P. S. Ross and Partners, Peter Buetow of the Thorne Group Ltd., Gordon Harrison of Samson Belair Riddell Stead Inc., J. R. Hearn of Kates, Peat, Marwick and Co. and J. M. Smith of Woods, Gordon and Co.

A Common Day

They agree that one or more forms of the shortened week will continue to make inroads into Canadian work patterns, but differ on some of the possible short- and long-term effects.

Buetow, for example, warns of dangers to the existing social system if the four-day or three-day week is widely adopted without adequate planning.

"We need a common day, like Sunday, for general relaxation, some system of days for social interchange," he says.

Hearn says it is the flexibility of work and leisure hours that makes a shortened work week a healthy idea.

"Really, what we're moving toward is a real-time, on-line society — to use computer terms — rather than a batch-processing society. We may well return to smaller service organizations because in future they must be available to suit society, not curtailed by a rigid system."

Smith says evidence to date indicates a heavier burden on management because organizations continue with a five-day week or even extend the week, while employees compress their normal work hours into four or three days.

Alderman: "We'll see the first effects when we move production away from the eight-hour day, measuring it by task, not hours. The real revolution will come when education breaks down the constraints of time. Then we will see the disappearance of the week as we have known it."

Harrison: "Our survey (conducted last fall) indicates that there will be less risk of abuse if the matter of hours and work days is put entirely in the hands of the employees. They will police the system themselves. Most clauses in existing contracts say that management will move to any system of hours suitable to employees."

The consultants agree that the first phase of the restructured week will involve increasingly widespread adoption of systems that compress the existing 40-hour, 36-hour or 32-hour week into four or three days, ranging in time from nine to 12½ hours each. The work cycles will vary from five to 28 days, depending on the nature of the work.

This is as far as the shortened work week has developed in North America to date, although interest is increasing in the European-style flexible work week, where employees set their own hours within certain limits.

Spread Demand

The second state of change will involve shortening the longer days to break down the constraints of fixed time periods. At that time, the consultants say, the resources of society will be used more uniformly. Expressways, for example, will no longer be overcrowded for two hours in the morning and two in the evening.

Peaks and valleys in the use of commuter services, urban transit, service industries, retail outlets, recreation and educational facilities will be reduced.

Society, in short, will multiply the effective use of all its facilities and institutions simply by spreading the demand across previously unused time. This means, in some ways, the breakdown of fixed-purpose time periods for such things as shopping and entertainment as well as earning a living.

There will be problems, "turmoil and change for a period," as Smith puts it, but not serious enough to prevent the new hours from gaining general acceptance in far less time than it took for industry to adopt Henry Ford's five-day week — perhaps five to 10 years.

Among these problems is fatigue that may be caused by longer work hours and the opposition, on these grounds, by most of the major international unions. The consultants say widespread adoption of the new system will not be possible until union objections are overcome. The only way that can happen, the unions say, is by reducing the week without extending the day in effect, raising pay rates by up to 25 per cent.

The consultants think that most of the other problems will be overcome as the new week spreads through society. These include rearguard actions by traditionalists, who interpret the week in a biblical sense, conflicting days off among members of the same family, store closing hours, the need to reschedule education and social services.

The benefits of restructuring time in a society that no longer worries about simply making ends meet, that has so many material possessions it has to build in obsolescence, appear to be too great to pass up.

"The technological ability of society is a dividend to the people," says Hearn. "We'll take it in leisure rather than increased productivity," adds Smith.

A Time Lag

Alderman: "The nineteenth century and early twentieth century concept of industry culminated in the automobile lines. Now we have more unemployed, but the guaranteed income is happening, too. Value systems are changing. The trouble is there's a time lag of five to 10 years. The changes have all happened before we understand them."

Buetow: "In our studies of retail operations, we find most of the operators are convinced that peak business is reached in certain periods. Most of them are wrong. Retailers have already reacted to the changing customer demand patterns of a different type of society. Some have extended their opening hours, others have perhaps taken a more sensible course and have shifted their opening hours. As the retailer reacts, he may himself adopt the shortened work week or some other scheduling scheme."

Harrison: "Selye (Dr. Hans Selye of Montreal, a world authority on human stress) says categorically that it (the shortened work week) won't work. People need to work steadily.

"I visited Riva Poor (the U.S. author whose 1969 book 4 Days, 40 Hours, created an upsurge of industrial interest in the concept) last summer. At that time U.S. conversion rate was 1.6 companies a day. Now it is nearly seven.

"Last October we found 17 firms (in Canada) experimenting with the shortened week. Now it is closer to 35."

Whatever modifications and changes occur in the new system as it develops, a giant upheaval of social patterns is assured. Although another year is needed by the consultants to measure the rate of growth and influence of the shorter week, they say it will have early beneficial influences on the recreation, hobbycraft and education industries.

As it continues to grow, the new week is expected to produce a better educated, happier and more productive worker than North American capitalism has been able to find since it invented the five-day week.

MORE HOUSES FOR MIDDLE CLASS?

THE TORONTO STAR
An Editorial

By a curious coincidence, the same day saw the announcement of a new approach to housing by the federal cabinet, and the publication of a report showing where federal housing policy has gone wrong in the past.

Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford told the House of Commons Monday that the government was planning to create two new banks designed to attract more private money into the mortgage market. One would be a "publicly owned residential mortgage bank" which would encourage big investors such as insurance companies and pension funds to put more money into mortgages. The other would be a savings association which would accept deposits from small investors and make the money available for mortgages.

Assuming the plans go through, and a new flood of money is released into the housing market, what will be done with it? The question becomes especially urgent in the light of the report made to the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation by Montreal architect Melvin Charney.

Mr. charney is unsparing in his criticism of the CMHC, which he accuses of abdicating its responsibility to low-income groups and concentrating on construction "oriented to market interests." Even projects designed to provide low-rent accommodation for the poor have not worked out that way.

Mr. Charney also takes the corporation to task for showing little interest in renovating old housing. He points out that in cities like Toronto the bulk of the accommodation available to the poor consists of old, often deteriorating, but still salvageable houses.

Will these criticisms be heeded? If the government finds itself with larger funds available for investment in housing through its proposed banks, will it repeat past mistakes and channel the money predominantly into houses and apartments for the middle class? Or will it devote a larger share of its funds to constructing or renovating accommodation for the low-income families who are the main sufferers from the housing shortage? We would like to have a further statement from Mr. Basford on the issues raised by the Charney report.

Nobody Wants Fair Share

By IVOR BROWN
The London Observer

Prizes in Britain for accurately forecasting the results of football matches have now gone beyond £500,000. And a winner doesn't pay a penny of tax on his prize. Yet such a winner, if he stuck to his ordinary work, which he almost certainly will not, would be forced to pay out in income tax more and more money the harder and longer he went on toiling. Gambling is frowned on by some, but practised in one way or another by nearly all. The incentives are enormous. The State itself promotes a gigantic lottery with its Premium Bonds with large and untaxed prizes.

Nobody pretends that sending in a correct forecast to the football pools is anything but an accident. Those who scrutinize the form of the football teams before making their entries can claim that some judgment of the chances is needed, but most winners frankly admit that they were simply trusting to luck. There is no merit in having made a lucky shot. There never was such inequality of unearned income. So millions go on trying to become rich without labor.

British politicians of both parties are always talking of fair shares. Equality is said to be a commendable goal. It is, in fact detested as dull. The English people delight in the possibility of picking up a fortune in a grotesquely unfair way. They may swear when they lose their money, but the grumble is soon over. Off they go to take another chance.

When I notice the number of betting shops along the High Streets and the amount of space given to racing in the popular newspapers I am reminded of the accuracy of a remark made by the wise and witty journalist, G. K. Chesterton. "The English," he said, "are not much interested in the equality of man; they are more concerned with the inequality of horses."

The most foolish of all political slogans was that which linked liberty with equality. Obviously a person is not free if he cannot work harder to earn and keep more money, which millions accept as a sensible view. The members of the Labour Party, which is most committed in theory to "fair shares," are constantly and inconsistently demanding differential payments.

The recent coalminers' strike was settled with varying rises in wages for those doing various kinds of work. No equality for them. The trade unions may talk of levelling, but their practice contradicts their principle. In their insistence on more for some, not the same for others, they are conforming with the general attiude to acquisition. Nothing is less liked than to be all alike.

The national premium bonds are made more attractive to purchasers by large additions to the prizes won by the fortunate holders of a lucky number. Every week somebody gets a cheque for £25,000 for which he has done nothing. If he had earned the money he would have to pay back three-quarters of it in income-tax and surtax.

When the Labour Party was in power it could have arranged for a vast increase of small prizes which would make some approach to a policy of fair shares. It did nothing of the kind because the average man, known as "the worker" is fascinated by the idea of winning a heavy "packet" without doing any work for it. He may applaud the idea of equality when a Labour speaker is spouting on a platform, but in fact his ambition is to be as unequal as his luck allows.

Advance in professional or social status is accepted as desirable as much in the workers' housing estate as in the middle-class suburb. The idea of equality is implicit in the idea of "keeping up with the Joneses" (i.e. one's neighbors), but in fact the average family is much more eager to get ahead of the Joneses in the purchase of a larger home, a more glamorous holiday, or a more sumptuous motorcar.

Discrimination by race is forbidden by law, but separation by differing kinds of work and wage is as general in a factory as in the elegant offices of Big Business. I once discovered when travelling to America on a large liner that the grading of the many employees was a matter of bitter contention and strong feelings. We spent Christmas at sea, and when I asked my cabin steward if he had enjoyed his Christmas dinner, he told me gloomily that it had been ruined because he was put next at table to a bath steward; it was like seating a cabin boy beside the captain.

The most fluent talkers about levelling are always ready to avoid it. The left-wing member of the House of Commons is as quick as any other to insist on "Parliamentary Privilege" which puts all MPs above the law in certain matters. The taxpayer provides him with plenty of free travel in the first-class. If he were told to go second class, like most of his constituents, he would shout the house down. For him the elected are the elite.

Discrimination may be morally wrong, but it keeps people happy. Equality was the cry of the French revolutionaries. To insist on it in England today would be to provoke a revolution.

Improve your lot

Whether you want to completely remodel your mansion, or just do some beautifying around your bungalow, a B.C. Bankplan loan from us can be a big help in getting your project started, and completed.

For one thing, you'll find that our lending rate is low.

That means if you borrow just what you need, what you save on your loan you can add to your house.

And since we're a bank with local headquarters, we tend to understand a little better why people here want to borrow money, and the kinds of things they need it for.

FLIP WILSON: Success Is So New —And So Lovely

ALL ALONE at the top is comedian Flip Wilson who likes success mainly because he can afford to hire the most talented supporting crew. He began life in a crowd. He was one of 24 children in his family. Flip's comedy show is seen at 8 p.m. Sunday, Channels 2 and 6.

By KEN MICHAELS

NEW YORK — It's 2:30 p.m. they've just finished the last rehearsal before dress. Flip Wilson hustles off camera and goes over to his manager Monte Kay. Flip is sweating, glistening, hopping. He's up.

"What do you feel like?" Monte asks.

"Like getting out of here," Flip says.

"Want to eat?"

Next we're traveling by Flip's dressing room, where he stops for a couple of swigs of booze, then we're out the door and walking around the NBC parking lot.

After three silent rounds we start talking — about the kind of a day Flip is putting in, about trying to make a camera laugh.

"It's tough sometimes," he says, "but you work and you listen how it's going and you can pretty well tell if it's all right Usually there's a few people around. You direct it to them."

★ ★ ★

Does comedy have to be in a person, or can you learn it?

"Something's got to be there. But even if you've got natural ability, it's not enough. You have to perfect it, bring it up as high as you can. Study it. Go out there with just what you got and leave it at that, you'd be finished in a couple months.

"I write a lot of my stuff. And keep writing it over and over. Then I watch how it goes for an audience and where you lost out and where you can change it to make it work."

We turn, step off in a new direction, Flip winding down slightly.

What about stage fright?

"If I don't have it, I get scared about that, I look for the first laugh. That's the hardest one. You go with that and build on it."

People leaving their cars look curiously at us strolling around the lot. Couples pass, stop a few paces beyond, try to decide whether it's Flip of not. Now and then one will come back: "Aren't you Flip Wilson?"

★ ★ ★

"Yep," Flip smiles politely.

A request for an autograph. Flip signs. In stride again, I ask Flip how he feels about people coming up to him all the time.

"It's pretty new to me the last year or so. You dream of success but you never consider the other things that go with it. What I like is finally arriving at the goals I set: working with the best. The best people, best places, best equipment. All my life I wanted to do what I'm doing now."

Talking about Flip's past makes him tense but he says to go ahead, he doesn't mind. His father was a janitor. He's one of 24 children, 18 of them surviving. Flip, whose first name really is Clerow, was always in reform school or running away.

A high school dropout at 16, he faked his age and went into the Air Force. When he got out, he parked cars, swept hotels and wrote comedy stuff when he could. After breaking into the business in a third-rae play, he spent years hitchhiking across the country from one dumpy club to the next, passing the hat.

Does he feel the connection between his past and his tragic comic sense?

"My past is the whole thing. That's what I'm doing out there. It's all my past." As he talks about New Jersey and the 24 kids and running away, his eyes drift far over the hills above Burbank. He tells the one about the foster home:

"I mean these people were Holy Rollers. Roll on the floor, the whole thing. A lady and a man — with a lot of kids and these two houses, like storefronts, side by side. They wouldn't let you do nothing: no movies, couldn't listen to the radio, couldn't dance, couldn't sing. Wouldn't let you play or talk. I was there from when I was 7 until I was 13. Fundamentalista. Whoooooooo." Flip gives a holy roller face. "They was fundamentalists."

Does he ever consider having an influence on his television audiences of 50 million?

"In some ways, I guess. If it's true — if I could do anything, If I could be like a — catalyst — even in a small way, to bring people together there'd be nowhere else to go. That'd be it. I'd be a happy guy."

Time to go back. The dresser is waiting. Heading away from the parking lot, Flip slows the pace: "I always wanted to be laughed at, you know. I tried to be funny all the time when I was a kid. A guy named LeRoy we hung around with, he was funny the way he talked, but his looks was even funnier. LeRoy was the funniest-looking guy I ever saw." Flip screws his face into LeRoy's.

"The other guys used to shove poor LeRoy around and say rotten things about the way he looked. They'd point at his nose and howl. I'd get jealous of LeRoy when they did that to him. I wanted to be laughed at like that. I'd say to myself: "If only I was LeRoy, then they'd all be laughing like that at me"...

TV Questions and Answers

Q: Dennis Weaver sang on a recent episode of McCloud. Was that really his own voice or was it dubbed in? — B.H.

A: That was really Ol' Dennis warbling. In fact, he's recorded an album which will soon be released.

Q: Please tell me the actors who played the following cowboys. It will be a great help. Cisco Kid, Lash Larue, Hoppalong Cassidy and Zorro. — L.P.

A: Duncan Rinaldo was the Cisco Kid, William Boyd, Hoppy, Guy Williams Zorro and Lash Larue played himself.

Q: Dying to see Isaac Hayes, who wrote the theme for Shaft, perform on TV. Will he appear in the near future? — T.A.

A: Watch for Isaac in an ABC special starring Burt Bacharach, which will air later this season.

MOVIES

Friday

Did You Hear the One About the Travelling Saleslady? (xxx), on 8 at 8. Phyllis Diller stars in this comedy about a lady salesman who peddles pianos in turn-of-the-century Kansas. Supporting cast includes Bob Denver and Joe Flynn.

Cat On A Hot Tin Roof (xxxx), on 5 at 8:30. Tennessee Williams' powerful play is successfully brought to the screen with a fine cast. Elizabeth Taylor give a fine performance as the wife of a former football hero (Paul Newman) who is dominated by his father and is driven to drink. Burl Ives materfully recreates his stage portrayal of Big Daddy.

Barrier xxxx), on 9 at 8:30. Tonight, Film Odyssey presents a free-form exerise in cinema. There's no formal plot; instead Polish film director Jerzy Skolimowski shifts between the dreams and day-to-day reality of a young medical student in search of a more meaningful life.

The Last Time I Saw Paris (xx), on 11 at 9. Elizabeth Taylor and Van Johnson star in this glossy expanded version of an F. Scott Fitzgerald short story, Babylon Revisited. It's about a soldier who marries an American girl and leaves the service for a job as a reporter. Donna Reed is excellent in a supporting role.

The Giant Gila Monster (x), on 7 at 11:30. Melodramatic tripe about a monster that invades a small-town teenage dance.

The Castilian (xx), on 12 at 11:30. The story of Fernan Gonzalez, who led the Spanish people in a desperate struggle to overthrow the rule of the Moors during the 10th century.

Did You Hear the One About the Travelling Saleslady? (xx), on 6 at midnight. (See earlier this evening for details.)

Hamlet (xxxx), on 8 at midnight. Shakespeare's classic tragedy won four Oscars in this brilliant adaptation by its star director, Laurence Olivier. Excellent supporting cast with Jean Simmons, Eileen Herlie and Basil Sydney.

Carry On Cowboy (xxx), on 2 at 12:50. The British Carry On Gang demolishes movie western in this slapstick comedy with Sidney James, Kenneth Williams aand Joan Simms.

The True Story of Jesse James (xxx), on 2 at 12:50. As the title suggests, with Robert Wagner, Jeffrey Hunter, Hope Lange and Agnes Moorehead.

The Thing That Couldn't Die (xx), on 7 at 1:15. The severed head of an Elizabethan sailor is found in a centuries-old chest — still alive and exercising an evil power.

Sword in the Desert (xxx), on 13 at 2:05. A story of the struggle to establish Palestine as a homeland for the Jews. Dana Andrews, Marta Toren and Stephen McNally.

Saturday

The Blue Lagoon (xx) On 4 at 12:30. Jean Simmons and Donald Huston star in this 1948 drama about a boy and girl who are shipwrecked on a tropic island, grow to maturity and fall in love.

Change of Heart (xx) On 11 at 1. A girl songwriter thinks a publisher has stolen her song. Susan Hayward, Eve Arden and John Carroll.

Five Weeks in a Baloon (xxx) On 5 at 3:30. An eccentric inventor and his young assistant travel 4,000 miles across Africa in an experimental balloon. Red Buttons, Fabian, Barbara Eden, Cedric Hardwicke and Peter Lorre.

Cast a Giant Shadow (xxx) On 5 at 8. The true story of Colonel David 'Mickey' Marcus, the American Second World War hero who helped organize the Israeli army. Kirk Douglas, John Wayne, Frank Sinatra and Yul Brynner.

If Tomorrow Comes (xxx) On 4 at 8:30. Second World War mistreatment of Japanese-Americans sets the dark mood for this drama starring Patty Duke, whose love for a man is overshadowed by racial fears and hatreds.

Casino Royale (xxx) On 6 at 8:30. A lavish James Bond spy spoof starring David Niven and Peter Sellers.

Act One xxx) On 2 at 9. George Hamilton, Jason Robards and Eli Wallach star in this watered-down version of the Moss Hart sentimental best-selling novel about the playwright's youthful love affair with the Broadway theatre.

A Howling in the Woods (xx) On 8 at 9. A made-for-TV thriller about a couple who return to a small town only to find something terribly wrong, since the people act strangely cool and secretive. Barbara Eden, Larry Hagman, John Rubenstein and Vera Miles.

Dr. John Hough, General Surgeon
Dr. Robert Noble, Director, Cancer Research Centre, U.B.C.
Mr. Adrian Carrick, Executive Director, C.C.S.

Service Expands

OTTAWA (CP) — CBC radio and television service will be made available to every community of more than 500 residents within the next three or four years at a cost of $30 million to $40 million, according to State Secretary Gerard Pelletier.

He told a Commons committee that the government's intention is to have the CBC work out a definite schedule for completing its coverage of the fringe areas of the Canadian hinterland which do not now receive good CBC service.

Mr. Pelletier told a committee studying spending estimates for his office that hitherto the CBC and the government had only been able to promise extension of the CBC networks "as funds became available."

Now the government had decided that a definite plan of extension should be worked out.

Leonard Bernstein in London

Bernstein in Concert

America's most famous maestro, Leonard Bernstein, directs a world-famous European orchestra, the Vienna Philharmonic at London's most venerable concert hall, the Royal Albert Hall, on the final program in CBC-TV's World of Music series, this season.

Leonard Bernstein at Royal Albert Hall will be telecast on the network Sunday, April 2, at 3 p.m. (in color). The concert special is a one-hour excerpt from the live performance of last season, in the presence of an audience including Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother. The musical event in London was in aid of United World Colleges.

The press reaction to Bernstein's London appearance with the Vienna Philharmonic was summed up by one reviewer who termed the event "a musical occasion extraordinary."

On the TV special, the program consists of two works: Symphony No. 102, by Haydn, and Ravel's Concerto in G for Piano and Orchestra, in which conductor Bernstein also performs as piano soloist.

Of the latter work, one critic wrote: " . . . this concerto has its share of jazz and blues, but also has an adagio of serene beauty and a finale of bold virtuoso runs. Bernstein's performance was superb."

Of the association between Bernstein and the Vienna Philharmonic, the same critic commented: "It is a world-beating combination. Viennese musicians who play with a richness of tone that has no equal among other orchestras, and a New Yorker who is unquestionably in the Viennese line of great conductors of impulse and temperament."

In The Guardian, Edward Greenfield asked: "Was there ever an orchestra that so consistently caressed the listener's ear as the Vienna Philharmonic? Is there another conductor today — Beecham and Walter having passed on — with musical caressing powers to match as Leonard Bernstein?"

DIG, an animated and entertaining geology lesson with an informative tour of the inner earth on Sunday, April 2 at 7 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6.

With Rocko in Wonderland

Dig is entertaining and informative. Dig is a half-hour animated color special about the earth and the formation of all the natural elements in it ... rocks, mountains, rivers and so on. It's aimed at kids, but grown-ups could learn a lot too. Dig is on CBC-TV Sunday, April 2, at 7 p.m.

Producers John and Faith Hubley use the simple story line of a boy going on an errand for his mother and stopping at a construction site where he has his bicycle taken by a fast-talking rock ... Rocko, who leads him through a big hole in the ground on a fantasy trip through layers of the earth.

With Rocko as his guide, the boy goes back millions of years while learning the history of our world, with each layer of earth given it's own song to explain what happened during its time on the surface.

Giving voices to the characters in Dig are some well-known personalities. They include Maureen Stapleton, who provides the voice for the youngster's mother; Morris Carnovsky who lends his vocal talents to the Earl of Limestone and Jack Warden, who is heard as Rocko.

Dig could almost be considered a family affair, because not only did the Hubleys produce it but they also directed it, did the design work and wrote some of the lyrics. Their son Ray also provides one of the voices.

Quincy Jones provides fantastic background music and some excellent songs.

SPECIALS

Sunday

Easter at Riverside Church On 7 at 10. Gain through loss is the theme of this Episcopal Easter service from New York's Riverside Church.

Music for the Resurrection On 5 at 10:30. The visual splendor of Michelangelo blends with choral music in this Easter celebration filmed in the Vatican's Sistine Chapel.

Cinema '71: Films That Matter On 5 at 11:30. Honoring some fine 1971 movies — Fiddler on the Roof, and One Day In the Life of Ivan Denisovich. Clips from each are shown as awards are presented by members of Catholic, Jewish and Protestant organizations. Los Angeles Times critic Charles Champlin is the host. (60 mins.)

Oxford and Cambridge Boat Race On 2 at 2:20. Highlights from the traditional boat race, the oldest in intercollegiate rowing competition, pits the two crews in the 118th renewall of their annual rivalry. The course: four and one-quarter miles over the River Thames. (30 mins.)

Androcles and the Lion On 9 at 6. A freewheeling adaptation of the traditional classic. To capture the earthy humor of the Roman slave who befriends a lion, writer Aurand Harris incorporates elements of commedia dell'arte, a comic style marked by improvisation and stock characters that flourished in 16th-century Italy. (60 mins.)

Dig On 2 and 6 at 7. Three-time Oscar winners John and Faith Hubley animated this cartoon about the history of the earth. Voices include Jack Warden and Maureen Stapleton. (See article and photo.) (30 mins.)

Last Stand Series Sold

The Last Stand, a four-part color TV series looking at some areas of the world still untouched by man and techology, has been sold by CBC television to the Schweizerische Radio Und Fernsehgesellschaft network in Switzerland.

Originally telecast on CBC-TV's The Nature of Things in November, 1970, the mini-series consisting of four half-hour programs examined the ecological communities of such varying regions as desert, mountain, swamp and tundra.

Specials

Monday

Plimpton! At the Wheel On 4 at 8. George Plimpton drives the grueling Mexican 1000? A guy could get killed doing this sort of thing so George seeks advice from 1971 world champion Jackie Stewart, who talks about speed and death. Action footage shows Jackie in the 1971 Italian Grand Prix. (60 mins.)

Hollywood Television Theatre On 9 at 8. The Andersonville Trial, an Emmy-winning drama that pits obedience against morality. Saul Levitt's 1959 play concerns the 1865 war-crimes trial of a Confederate POW camp commandant — who must answer for the deaths of 13,000 Union prisoners. Directed by George C. Scott and starring William Shatner, Jack Cassidy and Richard Basehart. (2½ hours).

Man Alive On 2 and 6 at 10. A visit with Cardinal Paul-Emile Leger at his mission in the Cameroon Mountains, as he discusses his work and personal philosophy. Host Roy Bonisteel. (60 mins.)

Violence Cut For Youngsters

WASHINGTON, March 23 — A program of progressive steps already taken and future plans to de-emphasize violence in children's television programming were cited by Elton H. Rule, president of the American Broadcasting Companies, Inc., in testemony before the Senate Committee on Commerce, Subcommittee on Communications.

Detailing the efforts of the ABC Television Network, Mr. Rule said:

"By the fall of 1972, cartoon series which depend solely on 'action' and are devoid of comedy will have been eliminated from the network's children's schedule."

In selecting time periods for "new prime-time series," he said, "the program concept and, more importantly, the content of a series also will be more carefully considered in the future in terms of possible adverse effect on children and young viewers."

He said that ABC has budgeted $1,000,000 over the next four years for an intensified program of original research in this area, noting that "substantial sums have been spent by ABC in the past two years for original research relating to the effects of television violence."

He also stated that "we are placing additional emphasis on resolving conflict in children's programs through non-violent means."

With regard to the over-all balance of different types of programs which ABC presents in prime time, Mr. Rule stressed that what programs the netwrok presents "will be even more carefully evaluated in selecting future projects for development and series to be included in the network's prime-time schedule."

In reviewing what steps ABC has taken in children's programming over the past three years, Mr. Rule pointed to the television network's de-emphasis on violence in its Saturday and Sunday morning programs and its continuing commitment to improve the quality of the weekend children's schedule through such new programs as Curiosity Shop and ABC News' Make a Wish, both of which combine information and entertainment.

With regard to the elimination of weekend cartoon series depending solely on action and devoid of comedy, Mr. Rule said, "I think the clearest way I can illustrate the progress we have achieved in de-emphasizing violence in children's programming is to indicate that almost 50 per cent of our weekend children's schedule in the 1968-69 season consisted of programs falling within the above category and that this type of series now represents less than 10 per cent of our Saturday-Sunday morning schedule. As of next season, programming like this will be a thing of the past on ABC."

MRS. LOUISE MURCH, the other woman in Elwood Glover's life, is seen on Luncheon Date, Good Friday, March 31.

Annual Easter Visit With Elwood Glover

Elwood Glover is seeing another woman. It's been going on for six years and he intends to continue.

It's all above board though, since the woman in question is 97-year-old Louise Tandy Murch and Elwood sees her only on his CBC-TV Luncheon Date show. Mrs. Murch has had a standing invitation to visit the show at Easter every year since her 90th birthday. This year she visits on Good Friday, March 31.

At the very mention of her age, most people shudder at the thought of her being imposed on to go on television, but save your sympathy. Louise Murch still practises Yoga, does her own cooking and bakes cookies for Elwood. She's an engaging speaker, plays the piano and has a fantastic memory . . . names and places pop right out.

At the time this is being written, Mrs. Murch is suffering from strained ligaments in her thighs, and Elwood is paying her a visit. She greets him like a son. They talk of many things and she has strong opinions.

POSITIVE THINKER

"Pollution," she says, "is not only the garbage that's now cluttering the earth. One of the biggest areas of pollution which no one seems to do anything about is the area of speech. People should be more careful of the words they use. Word pollution causes emotional and moral degeneration."

She's also a great believer in positive thinking, and her philosophy is, to paraphrase a well-known black comedian: "What you think is what you get." She illustrated her point beautifully as she accompanied herself on the piano and sang: "You've Gotta Accentuate the Positive, Eliminate the Negative . . ."

Mrs. Murch lives on two things, "Music is her life blood," Elwood volunteered.

"But don't forget my deep breathing exercises," Mrs. Murch says. "It's what has kept me in such good physical shape." And considering her age, she is.

Music runs in her blood. Her father and mother met in a church choir. He sang and she played. Mrs. Murch has been teaching music for the past 36 years and at times had large classes. Today she has only two students. One of her sons, Ed, is a singer in Toronto.

Time had literally flown by as this remarkable alert woman talked on about anything. "Before you leave though," she said to Elwood, "I want to play for you." She sat down at the piano and ran through Sorrento and a couple of Gilbert and Sullivan songs.

As they said goodbye in the hallway of the house in which Mrs. Murch has lived for 66 years, Elwood wished her a speedy recovery. "Don't worry," she replied, "I'll see you on March 31."

Raquel Is Really Rolling

RAQUEL WELCH . . . in tomboy role

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Raquel Welch broke her arm rehearsing for her new movie and may fracture other limbs in her pursuit of starring in "The Kansas City Bomber" playing a professional roller skate queen.

The darkly beautiful actress sat in a Beverly Hills restaurant, her right arm in a cast, and said she was anxious to skate again.

"MGM has set up a special racing track for me on a sound stage," she said. "It's the same one we'll take to Portland where all the skating scenes will be shot.

"I love doing my own stunts. Riding horses. Climbing and jumping for action pictures. It's part of the fun of acting."

Raquel must be careful in discussing her new movie which is being made for her own company. She uses the term roller games. It seems that Roller Derby belongs to someone and the owners object to the use of the title, Kansas City Bomber.

Morever, Raquel confesses she will be well padded for her role. She is, of course, amply endowed in the padding department. But to protect herself in the rough and tumble of competitive roller skating, her thighs, elbows and knees will be heavily wrapped.

"I was skating off and on for six months before I had the accident," Raquel said. "At the time I was alone on the track and felt myself toppling backward. To save myself a bump on the head I put out my arm.

"It hurt, terribly. But I thought it was just a bruise. A couple of hours later it was swollen and very painful. It was broken.

"The first thing I had to learn about skating on a banked track was to maintain my balance. The curves are banked at a 45-degree angle and it can make you dizzy if you look down at your feet.

"Even though my broken arm has held up production for more than a month it was the best thing that could have happened. Now I'll be falling a half dozen times in a two-hour period. It's a matter of learning how to fall without hurting yourself."

The picture is not a glamor role for Raquel who plays a tough, gum-chewing skater involved in brawls and ugly scenes. "It gives me the opportunity to do some acting," she said. "I know people don't think of me as an actress as much as they do a, well, sex queen. But I'll be doing my best."

Miss Welch is a different girl than the one with a chip on her shoulder in Myra Breckinridge. She smiles and laughs more than she once did.

Raquel was divorced from husband Pat Curtis earlier this year. The end of her marriage may or may not have changed the actress from a pouting, reserved woman to an outgoing, laughing female.

Bit parts: Robert Mulligan will produce and direct Lizzie Borden with David Lange writing the screenplay . . . Richard Chamberlain will be one of the presenters on the 44th Annual Oscar Show . . . Bette Davis will star in The Game in Rome with Alberto Sordi and Silvana Mangano.

A Tone Poem About Canada

In the special program Canada — Land of Infinite Variety, to be telecast in color on the CBC television network Tuesday, April 4 at 8 p.m., the talents of the film-maker and the music composer combine in a unique television experience: a visual tone-poem about our land that needs no word of explanation.

Instead, Dr. William McCauley, the distinguished Canadian composer, complements the film image with melodic sounds in place of conventional narrative; his music even includes the "heartbeat" of the land. The photography is by Harry Makin and Gerhard Kennedy.

Produced by Gerhard Kennedy of Kennedy Horizons Limited, Canada — Land of Infinite Variety is an impression of the country in all its seasons and endless variety.

These are four broad visual sequences, treated as movements in a classical composition, divided by scenes of Dr. William McCauley and the orchestra in the recording studio as they prepare to match the music to the images.

Dr. McCauley briefly explains how the music serves the images. The four movements of his composition are subtitled The Land, Cold, Rain and Color, and they accompany such sights as musk ox lumbering through the snow; rainfall in a forest; the grandeur of ascending mountain formations; horse-racing; the city with its garish neon lights.

This special program will be introduced by G. Allan Burton, chairman of the board of the Robert Simpson Co. Ltd., which commissioned the film from Kennedy Horizons Limited as a salute to Canada and its people on the occasion of Simpsons 100th anniversary.

Dr. William McCauley, who is director of music for the O'Keefe Centre and director of music for Seneca College, is the composer for the current CBC-TV series The Whiteoaks of Jalna. He has written more than a hundred original scores for documentary films and television and has won many awards, including the highest award for choirs in all festivals in Canada — the Lincoln Trophy, which the York University Choir won when he was the university's director of music.

Second Gold Record

Stompin' Tom Connors has received his second gold record. The presentation was made on the Elwood Glover Luncheon Date, CBC television show, and marks retail sales of $100,000 for Connors' album, Bud The Spud. Connors had recently received a similar award for his Boot Records album, My Stompin' Grounds.

So far this year, 1972 looks like a triumph for Connors, a native of Prince Edward Island. Following the two gold record presentations, Connors did a packed-house show in Toronto's prestigious Massey Hall — the first time a Canadian country performer had done a solo concert in the venerable theatre.

As a result of the successful Massey Hall show, Connors was picksd to co-headline a 30-day tour in Canada and the United States with two other Canadian country artists, Hank Snow and Wilf Carter.

He has also been chosen Male Country Music Performer of the Year by RPM magazine, the Canadian music industry trade publication. Because of previous tour commitments in the Maritimes, Connors was unable to pick up his RPM Juno Award in person — but his sister received the award and thanked the celebrity-packed audience.

And, as if all that wasn't enough for a still-young year, Connors' new single on Boot Records, Moon-Man Newfie, is rising rapidly up country music charts nationally in Canada, as well as getting considerable play on middle-of-the-road music stations.

Black African Heritage on 11 at 9. The Bend in the Niger, a trip along Africa's third largest river. Ossie Davis describes the lands and cultures of the tribes met along the way: the Bambaras, known for their music, sculpture and dancing; the Dogons, famous for their sculpture; the animist Bororas; the nomadic Tauregs; and the Hausas, horsemen-warriors seen in medieval costumes as they celebrate the independence of the Nigerian Republic. (60 mins.)

Behind the Greasepaint at Jalna

SCENE: Six a.m. on a cold Monday in February, a subterranean make-up room in the labyrinth under the studio set for The Whiteoaks of Jalna, the CBC-TV color drama series based on the novels of Mazo de la Roche. CAST: The series' chief make-up artist Patricia Harshaw, and Maureen O'Brien, the fragile-looking blonde actress who plays Alayne. ACTION: The artist is tracing lines on the actress's face, using a color liner.

An Ottawa-based actress in her twenties, Maureen O'Brien has been seen so far in the series as 'old Alayne', seventyish wife of the elderly Renny (Paul Harding) in the contemporary scenes. In Episode 9, for telecast on Sunday, April 2, at 9 p.m., she will make a second debut in the young aspect of the role — as Alayne, young bride of Eden Whiteoak (played by James Hurdle), who brings her home to Jalna from New York.

ROAD MAP

The aging process, telescoped into a matter of hours, is explained by Patricia Harshaw as she draws a kind of road map on Maureen's face: "We line first, drawing in the age lines around the mouth, eyes and so on. Then we apply the latex (liquid rubber solution). It's difficult to line over latex, but later, when it dries, we emphasize the lines by touching up with a fine lead pencil."

The latex referred to is a milky substance in a bottle. Now begins the most painstaking process of the entire make-up.

One small area at a time, the artist applies the latex to the face, using a sponge to pat it on, and stretching each patch of skin as she makes the application. Then, picking up a hair blower with her free hand, she trains it on the latexed patch, keeping the skin stretched until it dries, having first been dusted with a thin film of powder.

Once it is powdered and dried, the area of skin is released, and it snaps back into place, creating a patch of fine wrinkles. Each part of the face to be thus "wrinkled" is processed separately (forehead, around the eyes, the mouth etc.) and the artist applies as many layers of latex as is required to achieve the desired effect. It is a technique that requires patience, on the part of the subject as well as the make-up artist.

Once the process is completed, the artist applies a thin layer of masking grease, blotted well, to give the skin the desired color tone. Highlights and shadings emerge, much the way they do on the canvas of a portrait artist.

Finally, a film of powder is dusted over the face, a hint of rouge and lipstick having been added, and the 'aged' face is complete. "Old ladies often dab their rouge on in patches — it has a tendency to make them look even older. In Maureen's case, we place the rouge low on the cheek, giving the cheek a slightly sunken look. Maureen's face is difficult to age, because it has no spare flesh anywhere. Therefore, even the wrinkles created are very fine."

Jack Cousins, hairdresser assigned to Jalna, appears with Maureen's primly-coiffed wig to cover her long blonde hair, which is tucked up underneath. "We keep to Maureen's own hair color, a faded version of it. On the eyebrows, we don't use make-up — it looks phony. We just brush them backwards to break the eyebrow line. On the hands, we use different lining colors — brown, blue, white to make the veins more pronounced, and to shade the knuckles, add highlights and so on.

TAKES TIME

"The latex doesn't work on hands and neck, because the constant movement causes it to rub and peel, and it's impossible to repair effectively.

"Maureen's 'old age' make-up used to take about two hours at first, but now we've got it down to a science, and it only takes an hour and a half."

The pretty young actress has at last been transformed into an elderly lady, and the transition still bothers her to some extent. "It's weird, jumping from an ingenue to a tottering grandma in one leap," says Maureen O'Brien. "The make-up makes me look older than my own grandmother, and it feels like your face is covered by a rubber glove."

When Maureen saw herself in the elderly role for the first time on screen, at a press preview, she "thought nobody would take me seriously. But a man sitting next to me wouldn't believe it was me up there, so I guess it works."

An actor acts with his entire being, and the aging process is not dependent on make-up alone. Says Maureen, "You produce tension in your body, to move stiffly. After a while, you forget you can stand up straight, you with respect because and everyone begins to treat you're an 'old lady'. The 'old' make-up has a real psychological effect — and it makes you appreciate being young. The first day I appeared on the Jalna set as my real age I was radiant."

Religious Documentary Produced in Holy Land

For thousands of years, Jerusalem and the Holy Land have been a major meeting point for three of the world's greatest monotheistic faiths: Christianity, Judaism and Islam.

For millions of Christians, Moslems and Jews who, in their own different ways, accept the historical Jesus Christ, The Holy Land and its great city stand for unity — a local point by which they may someday attain a greater understanding and appreciation of each other.

On Good Friday, March 31 at 10 p.m., CBC Television will present Meeting Point, an hour-long religious documentary on the Holy Land and its current revival of popular and theological interest in Jesus Christ.

Earlier this year, Leo Rampen, Executive Director of CBC-TV's religious series, Man Alive, spent several weeks in the Holy Land, working with an Israeli film crew to prepare this unique hour-long doumentary by prominent personalities associated with the unique phenomenon that is this age-old city of history and tradition.

MOVIES

Thursday

Magnificent Roughnecks (xx), on 4 at 9:30. In South America, an oil company superintendent faces opposition when he tries to open a new oil field. Jack Carson, Mickey Rooney and Nancy Gates.

The Dirty Game (xxx), on 6 and 8 at 12:45. Henry Fonda, Vittorio Gassman and Annie Giradot star in this espionage adventure about the CIA.

Mister Cory (xxx), on 7 at 7. A bus boy from the Chicago slums leaves his job at a summer resort to become part of the gambling world. Cast includes Tony Curtis, Charles Bickford, Martha Hyer and Kathryn Grant.

The Impossible Years (xxx), on 7 and 12 at 9. David Niven as a psychiatrist whose university lectures on how to raise teen-agers without problems belie a frenetic home life with his 17-year-old daughter. This 1968 comedy also stars Lola Albright, Chad Everett and Ozzie Nelson.

In the Cool of the Day (xxx), on 7 and 12 at 11:30. A strong cast with Jane Fonda, Peter Finch, Angela Lansbury and Arthur Hill holds together this cliched story of extramarital love among the rich set of Greece.

The Franchise Affair (xxx), on 2 at 11:50. A suspenseful melodrama about a teen-ager who accuses a couple of abducting her. British made with a good cast including Michael Denison and Dulcie Gray.

Anything Goes (xxx), on 6 and 8 at midnight. An excellent 1956 musical with an all-star cast including Bing Crosby, Donald O'Connor, Mitzi Gaynor and Phil Harris.

NET Playhouse Biography on 9 at 8:30. When This You See, Remember Me, a biographical remembrance of Gertrude Stein (1874-1946), America's celebrated figure in arts and letters. Her Parisian salon in the '20s became a showcase for art works and a meeting place for such luminaries as T. S. Eliot, Ezra Pound, Ernest Hemingway and painters Picasso and Matisse. To recapture the vitality of Stein, stills and films of the era are interwoven with interviews with Miss Stein's friends, readings from her works and a brief excerpt from her opera Four Saints in Three Acts. (90 mins.)

Radio Series

Beginning April 6 at 7 p.m. EST, CBC-FM Radio presents an exciting new 13-week series: Ice, Cocaine and Rainbows — Music of Scriabin. The series marks the centenary in 1972 of the birth of Russian composer and pianist Alexander Scriabin.

Ice, Cocaine and Rainbows will concentrate on both the man and his music. There are many interesting facets of Scriabin's life, for instance his hobby of building toy pianos that really worked, and the flying experiments he conducted with his second wife.

Scriabin had an unlimited imagination . . . he was the first to conceive symphonies of glances, touches, perfumes, fluttering wings, settings of incense, columns of smoke, music and color to be simultaneously performed. Fire, flame and light burst from his music.

Much of Scriabin's music is relatively unknown. This series will attempt to bring it to light. Ice, Cocaine and Rainbows will include all the sonatas; the symphonies; Scriabin himself at the piano; and etudes, preludes, poems and waltzes. Music will be presented through comparative interpretations, with varied performances.

Recordings will range from some piano rolls of the early 1900s to the most recent performances of Ogdon, Ashkenazy, and Roberto Szidon. And in-between — performances by Vladimir Horowitz, Sviatoslav Richter, Glenn Gould and many others.

Being a Witch Good for the Figure

It is a change for the actress, whose movie credits are filled with character roles, and Angela says she had fun doing the part.

"I'm only an apprentice witch, you see, so I make a few mistakes, like falling off my broom and turning the wrong people into rabbits," she said.

"Of course if you're flying you have to take all kinds of

LANSBURY

bumps, and I ended up on my head a couple of times. It was a very gymastic role, great for the figure."

Bedknobs and Broomsticks is not Miss Lansbury's first brush with magic. An enchanted wand touched her in 1966 when she opened on Broadway in Mame. For over 20 years she had been a Hollywood star, but it took Mame to make her a super-luminary with a standing ovation from her Hollywood peers when she performed at the Academy Awards. She won a Tony for Mame and another for her next Broadway musical, Dear World.

Angela was born in London, England, on October 12, the daughter of actress Moyna (MacGill) and Edgar Lansbury. She was a shy, sensitive child, easily hurt and often sullen.

As youngsters Angela and her half-sister Isolde entertained the family with dancing, miming and mimiery. A teen-ager when the Second World War erupted, she was given the choice of being evacuated to a boarding school in the country or studying acting at home. She chose the latter without hesitation.

In 1940 the Lansbury family left England for New York; two years later Angela and her mother moved on to Los Angles. There they worked as clerks in a department store, where Angela earned $28 a week.

In 1943 Angela heard that Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer was looking for a young English girl to play in the screen version of The Picture of Dorian Gray. She applied, and was rewarded with a long term contract at $500 a week and the role of the Cockney maid in Gaslight. She next was cast as Elizabeth Taylor's sister in National Velvet and when The Picture of Dorian Gray finally was produced in 1945 she portrayed Sibyl Vane, the music hall singer who becomes Dorian's first victim. She was barely 20 at the time.

The stuidio, capitalizing on Angela's extroardinary maturity as an actress, gave her character parts requiring her to appear much older than she was. She tried now and again to break that mold, but failed until Mame allowed her to pick up her heels and dazzle the critics with her fancy footwork.

"I love it," she crowed as the toast of Broadway. "I want all the glamor there is. I've been starving for it for years!"

As the heroine of Bedknobs and Broomsticks she keeps up the good work. She sings, dances, and flies a magic bed into all kinds of amazing adventures. The musical fantasy, in color by Technicolor, also stars Roddy McDowall, Sam Jaffe, John Ericson and Bruce Forsyth.

CBC-AM Radio Highlights

Friday

7:30, St. John Passion. Composer J. S. Bach's St. John Passion will be performed in the Church of St. Andrew and St. Paul, Montreal, by the Tudor Singers and conducted by Wayne Riddell.

10:30, The Simple Truth. A Good Friday Special. Narration set to music of the post-script to the book — The Foolishness of God — a moving exposition of Christian faith in God, Christ and the destiny of the human race. Written by John Austin Baker, an Oxford scholar.

Saturday

2:00, Metropolitan Opera presents Falstaff, by Verdi. Cast includes Reneta Tebaldi, Roberta Peters and Judith Forst.

6:03, Hot Air, Host Bob Smith introduces the early days (1944-45) of Dizzy Gillespie and Charlie Parker.

8:30, CBC Stage, Lazarus by Andre Obey. John Vernon and Jon Granik star in this long duologue between Jesus and Lazarus after the raising of Lazarus from the dead.

11:03, The Bush and the Salon, The Maid of Middle Musquodoboit. Descriptive sketches of Nova Scotia. In Prose and Verse by Elizabeth Frame.

Sunday

8:03, True Mystery of the Passion. A modern religious drama, translated and adapted for radio.

11:03, A Tribute to Mahalia Jackson. A special tribute to the beloved black gospel singer who died in January of this year at the age of 60. Included will be many of her songs with Mahalia herself heard talking about her life and its purpose. Also, interviews with author Suds Terkel and civil rights leader Roy Wilkins, both close friends of the late Miss Jackson.

Monday

Tuesday

8:30, CBC Tuesday Night, Rejoice in the Lamb. The Offering of Christopher Smart, written and prepared by Canadian poet Phyllis Webb. Christopher Smart was born in 1722 and died in King's Bench Prison in 1771, during the Age of Reason. He was a wit, scholar, poet, gentleman and a madman. He loved the battle and was always in debt. Before he died, he wrote some of the finest religious poetry in English.

10:30, Point Counter Point. This new series features criticism by composers about their own and other composers works, and comment by music critics freely laced with music illustrations on records. Hosts: George McLean and Warren Davis.

Wednesday

8:03, Concern. As of tonight, Concern expands to a new two-hour format and a new host, Bruce Marsh. People are the focus of Concern: their experiences, problems, opinions and philosophies. This evening, the program examines a country commune, a three-way marriage (2 women and one man) and a city commune, in which couples sometimes switch partners.

Thursday

8:03, Musicscope, A Recital From London, recorded in the Wigmore Hall and sponsored by the Cultural Attache's office of the Canadian High Commissioner in London. Musical selections from Hindemith, Dubussy, Berg, Ravel and Walton. Intermission features: Impressarios Sol Hurok and Wilfrid Van Wyck are heard in exclusive interview for Musicscope. Also, a Chamber Concert from Vienna recorded at the Vienna Music Festival.

Long Road to Top for Gene

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "My looks? I've always thought of myself as a kind of potato face. But then I figure that potato faces need love, too."

Gene Hackman was taking a long-range view of his career. An accomplished actor, his plain face seemed to doom him too a life of playing the leading man's best pal.

That has changed. He won the role of the relentless cop in The French Connection because 20th Century-Fox didn't want a big-name star and couldn't find an unknown who could handle it. The film turned into a huge success, and Hackman finds himself courted for starring roles in a wide selection of movies.

"I never thought it would happen," Hackman, 41, said at his new home in Woodland Hills, a two-acre estate built by the late director Michael Curtiz.

"I'm now being considered for the things I enjoy doing, as opposed to being supporting actor. I thought I would probably go on being a supporting actor until the jobs got scarce and I would have to go into television.

"The money began getting ridiculous, and I decided to jump in and grab it while I could. As a result, I did 10 pictures in the last three years. Ten pictures. There haven't been 10 really good pictures made in the last three years, so obviously not all of mine were good.

"The low point, I guess, was Doctors' Wives. But I read the script, so I can't blame anybody but myself. It's a wonder I wasn't typed as a schlock guy who would take anything."

Telescope Looks At Paul Bradley

For its last program of the current season CBC-TV's Telescope turns its cameras on actor Paul Bradley, one of the stars of Don Shebib's critically-acclaimed film Goin' Down the Road.

This edition (Tuesday, April 4 at 9:30 p.m. on the network) is sub-titled A Born Hustler, because in may ways that's how Bradley sees himself. He grew up in Toronto's Cabbagetown and hustled his way through life apparently on his way to nowhere until his sudden success in Goin' Down the Road.

"When I played the part of Joey in Goin' Down the Road, he explains, "I'd been there before ... I identified with this character, lonely and running scared. I guess I'm still scared."

Shebib's film brought Bradley a measure of fame and he has since made appearances in TV commercials, the series Whiteoaks of Jalna and such TV plays as Firing Squad and the recent Murder, My Love for CBC-TV's Program X series.

★ ★ ★

So today he lives in a high-rise apartment far above the mean streets of his youth and occasionally rides around town in a chauffer-driven limousine which he rents at $10 per hour. But the hustler of the streets isn't far beneath the surface, and he says he'd hustle again if he had to.

This Telescope portrait of Paul Bradley, which shows him at some of his favourite haunts among the people he hangs out with, and re-visiting some of the scenes of his youth, was directed and edited by Don Shebib.

Dick Cavett In Trouble

Look for some changes shortly in the format of the Dick Cavett show. Word is that the network is very disappointed over the rating clobbering Cavett's show took, instead of gaining ground when Merv Griffin left CBS and the late-night whirl. Cavett's crew expected to pick up audience rating, instead it went down as the late movies that replaced Griffin on CBS showed up with remarkable audience strength, pulling even with Johnny Carson's ratings.
